government takes your property, then a judge cannot create exceptions for property that the government really doesn't want to pay for, by letting the government so heavily regulate the property as to make it worthless."

The nation's chief law enforcement officer said an independent federal judiciary, insulated from the whims of electoral politics, was essential to settling disputes between the legislative and the executive and maintaining respect for the law.

"Judges who exercise judicial restraint understand the limit of their power," he told the audience of lawyers.

"Judicial restraint means judges refusing to create on their own a criminal justice system that lets clearly guilty criminals off on a technicality."

Ashcroft, a lawyer and former Republican governor from Missouri, was a member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the Constitution subcommittee during his years in the Senate.

"Academic discussions of judicial activism and restraint have done little to enlighten the American public," he said. "The decisions we will ask our federal judges to make -- the issues we will expect them to weigh -- ill affect each and every one of us in ways large and small."

Earlier, Ashcroft told law enforcement officers at a conference on organized crime in Chicago that Congress should close loopholes in the law to make it more difficult for drug dealers, terrorists and other criminals to launder money.

The Justice Department may recommend tightening federal laws to halt smuggling of large amounts of cash by making transporting more than $10,000 in cash proceeds from criminal acts across U.S. borders a federal offense. The money would be subject to confiscation.

Ashcroft Prods ABA To Quickly Vet Judge Nominees

U.S. Attorney General John D. Ashcroft Tuesday called for prompt Senate action on President Bush's judicial nominees and urged the American Bar Association to quickly and thoroughly review the nominees.

"So far the confirmation process has moved slowly," Ashcroft told the ABA's House of Delegates in the Grand Ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"The administration is doing its part. Now the Senate and those organizations involved in the process, including the ABA, must join us in working for the prompt confirmation of the outstanding men and women the president has nominated to the federal bench."

He said the Senate should approve all 44 of Bush's nominees by the end of the year.

Ashcroft made no mention of the Bush administration's decision only five months ago to end the ABA's half-century role of advance vetting of prospective federal judges before the president makes the nominations public.

Since Bush took that action, Democratic senators have asked the ABA to evaluate judicial nominees before the U.S. Senate acts on them.

In his speech, Ashcroft also spoke out against judicial activism and against judges who release "clearly guilty criminals" on technicalities. This, he said, leads to increased crime.

The House of Delegates applauded one remark, when Ashcroft said "I think we can agree that no political bias should exist" in the nomination and confirmation of judges.

"As you know," Ashcroft told the delegates, "there are some who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings."

The attorney general quoted a study by Northwestern University law Professor James Lindgren, who found that President Bill Clinton's judicial nominees "had more than 10 times better odds of getting the ABA's highest rating than similar credentialed former-President Bush's appointees."

"Professor Lindgren attributes this disparity to a political bias in favor of liberal judges," Ashcroft told the ABA delegates.

"Undoubtedly," Ashcroft added, "there are others who argue that no such bias exists. In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

He said he was "heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far" of Bush's nominees and was "confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive 'well qualified' ratings."

The ABA has reviewed 17 of Bush's judicial nominees and "rated every one of them qualified.... In fact, you have rated 70 per cent of these candidates 'well qualified,' the ABA's highest rating," the attorney general said.

"Currently, there is a serious number of vacancies on the federal courts, 108 vacancies out of 862 positions," Ashcroft said. "More than 12 per cent of the court is vacant. President Bush has recognized the urgency of this problem and has made it one of his top priorities. He has nominated judges at a record pace, 44 judicial candidates so far this year."

By comparison, Ashcroft said, President Ronald Reagan had made 13 judicial nominations before the end of August 1981; George H.W. Bush had made eight such nominations by the end of August 1989; and Clinton had made 13 before the end of August 1993.

Ashcroft said that in the first year of each of the past three presidential administrations, "all but one of the judicial nominees who were nominated before the end of the August recess were confirmed in the first year of the presidency.

"The one nominee who was not confirmed was rated 'not qualified' by the ABA. Consistent with that history, the Senate should move forward and act on all 44 of President Bush's nominations ... this year."

Ashcroft noted that the Senate has a long way to go. He said Bush announced 11 judicial nominations on May 9, "two months before Presidents Reagan or Clinton made their first nominations." Eight of those 11 were nominated to judicial vacancies classified as "judicial emergencies" by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, Ashcroft said.

The ABA found all of the first 11 nominations "to be either qualified or well qualified for judicial office ... yet only one of those 11 nominees has received a hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee," the attorney general said.

He commended the Senate for acting promptly on non-judicial appointments, including in the last two weeks a new commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, a new head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, and a new FBI director.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, understands the urgency of acting on Bush's judicial nominees, said Ashcroft. He told the delegates, "I ask you to help him in ensuring that the rest of the Senate places as high a priority on these nominations as does the president."

Back in March, White House Counsel Al Gonzales pointed out that the ABA has done advocacy work on certain public policies such as support for abortion and a call for a death penalty moratorium. Gonzales said that, in that light, the ABA should not have "a preferential arrangement" whereby it got first crack at examining potential judicial nominees.

On the issue of judicial activism, Ashcroft quoted Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter as saying, "The highest exercise of judicial duty is to subordinate one's personal will and one's private views to the law."

Judicial activism, said Ashcroft, deprives the voters of recourse to their legislature for policy decisions.

McConnell Says East Kentucky Judges Will Prove Capable

The three nominees for federal judgeships in eastern Kentucky will prove capable jurists over the years, Sen. Mitch McConnell said Wednesday, though he acknowledged he does not know one of the nominees.

McConnell also dismissed any notion that personal relationships influenced the choices of any of the nominees. "That happens sometimes," McConnell said.

David Bunning, the son of U.S. Sen. Jim Bunning, is one of the nominees. Another is Karen Caldwell, a former U.S. Attorney for the eastern district who once dated McConnell. The third nominee is Danny Reeves, a Lexington lawyer.

McConnell said he personally knows only two of the nominees and Bunning knows only two. He refused to elaborate.

"You've got to pick people somehow," McConnell told the Louisville Forum. "I think we did a good job and I think the people in eastern Kentucky will discover that over the years."

If confirmed, federal judges hold lifetime jobs and can be removed only by impeachment in the Congress.

There has been some muted criticism of the nominees because they lack eastern Kentucky connections. The nominations by President Bush, which have yet to be considered by the Senate are to fill two vacancies and a new judgeship, including seats in London and Pikeville.

Bunning's qualifications have been questioned because he has been practicing law for only 10 years, all as an assistant prosecutor in the U.S. Attorney's office. The American Bar Association guidelines generally suggest a minimum of 12 years experience for a federal judge.

McConnell, who has been in the Senate for 17 years and will be running for re-election in 2002, fielded questions from forum members on a range of topics, from missile defense to a separate state for Palestinians.

He answered pointedly on a couple of inquiries, especially one about his own legislative record.

McConnell said a question posed about what bills he has sponsored in three terms sounded like it came from an opponent, though the forum is officially neutral and nonpartisan.

McConnell said he has been primary sponsor on numerous important items, mostly appropriations initiatives in the area of foreign aid. McConnell said he would answer the question more fully during his campaign.

On the topic of drilling for oil in the Alaskan wilderness, McConnell said in some respects the issue boiled down to driving habits. McConnell said more people would be killed if fewer people drove large sport utility vehicles.

"Who's going to be willing to sacrifice a member of their family by getting into a smaller car?" McConnell wondered.

on what the meaning of the word "litmus" is because, clearly, George Bush and John Ashcroft have an idea.

He says, "We're not going to make any -- we're not going to have any political litmus tests," and I even think he said ideological litmus tests. On the other hand, they do have a judicial litmus test, and that is restraint...

LIASSON: Right.

KONDRACKE: ... you know, that you should not -- that a judge should not make law, should leave the process to the legislature and all that. Now he did -- what he did not say -- he did not point at the ABA and accuse them of -- of having a political bias, which this Northwestern University professor who he cited actually found, that the ABA was 10 times more likely to approve a judge nominated by Bill Clinton than George Bush's father.

BARNES: Yeah. You know, look, there is -- the -- this idea of a litmus test -- when they say there isn't one, they're really talking about Roe v. Wade, and -- and they do not ask these judicial nominees "Would you vote to overturn Roe v. Wade?" I mean, that's just a question that's not asked.

That's the -- that's the main litmus test they're talking about, to have a judicial conservative. They did not -- I mean, Bush has not appointed all judicial conservatives. As a matter of fact, he's appointed some Democrats and some more liberal judges.

Now the ones at issue, of course, with this Democratic Senate are the judicial conservatives, and he spoke out very strongly in favor of them, particularly, as you might guess in this administration that wants to win Latino votes, in favor of a man named Miguel Estrada, who's actually from - - born in Honduras, and has been nominated the -- to the...

BARNES: He'd be a hard guy to block on any grounds other than the fact that he is a conservative.

SNOW: Let me ask you. This is a dumb question perhaps, but what's wrong with having that litmus test? I thought that's why you had presidents picking judges.

LIASSON: I think that's a good question, and that certainly is what Charles Schumer has suggested from the other point of view, is why not. Why shouldn't the Senate judge nominees on ideology? And if they don't like it, they should go vote against...

KONDRACKE: Well, you can be sure that there would be -- that this judicial restraint litmus test would apply to a Supreme Court justice nominated by -- by George Bush. He -- it might not apply to a...

BARNES: No, no. This is wrong, though. Look, advise and consent does not mean we have -- we in the Senate have a right to appoint and decide whoever we want. If something...

LIASSON: Well, they have a right to vote against the judge if they want.

BARNES: It doesn't mean -- it does not give the Senate the power to reject all judges whose philosophy is not Tom Daschle's and Pat Leahy's. That's just not the way our system works, has ever worked, and to -- if you say no conservatives can be nominated...

Ashcroft Pushes Senate On Judicial Nominees; Speech Fuels Battle Over Confirmations

By Dan Eggen
The Washington Post
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

Attorney General John D. Ashcroft urged the Senate yesterday to speed up confirmation of the Bush administration's nominees for the federal bench, complaining that the "process has moved slowly" and is contributing to backlogs in the federal courts.

In a speech to the American Bar Association in Chicago, Ashcroft said that only one of 11 judges nominated to U.S. circuit courts this year has had a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee. Eight of those positions have been classified as "judicial emergencies" because they have stood vacant for so long, he said.

"I know I don't need to tell you that judicial vacancies mean delays in the time it takes to have one's case heard," Ashcroft said at the ABA's annual conference. "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Ashcroft's statements marked another escalation in the war of words between the Republican administration and the Democratic-controlled Senate over judicial nominations, which are shaping up as a key battleground for the two parties.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.) and other leading Democrats, still smarting from Ashcroft's contentious confirmation in February, have vowed to block any judicial nominees seen as too ideologically extreme and accuse Republicans of hypocrisy for complaining about judicial nominations.

Leahy spokesman David Carle said that more than half of President Bill Clinton's nominees for circuit courts were not confirmed in the last two years of Republican control.

"He knows about the delaying tactics of the past from his side of the aisle," Carle said of Ashcroft, a former Senate Republican. "Some Republican critics seem to be struggling mightily to keep straight faces while wrongly charging the Senate with delays."

Democrats also accuse the White House of causing its own delays by limiting the role of the ABA, which for half a century had secretly checked the backgrounds of potential federal judges before they were nominated. Bush officials stopped the practice, saying the group had a liberal bias in its grading system, but Democrats still rely on ABA grades issued after nominations.

In his first speech to the organization as attorney general, Ashcroft sidestepped the controversial move to end the ABA role. But, he said, "there are those who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings." He cited a study alleging that Clinton nominees were 10 times more likely to get the group's highest rating than those in the first Bush administration.

In a separate speech yesterday in Chicago, Ashcroft urged Congress to close loopholes in laws that limit prosecutors' power to target money laundering and organized crime.

Ashcroft told an audience at a conference on organized crime that current laws severely limit the Justice Department's ability to confiscate large quantities of cash smuggled out of the country as part of the drug trade. The Justice Department is also considering asking Congress to expand the list of overseas crimes that can be prosecuted domestically if they involve bringing proceeds into the United States, he said.

Ashcroft Defends Bush To Lawyers

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

Attorney General John Ashcroft said he is confident the American Bar Association will apply the same standards to its reviews of Bush administration nominees as it did when vetting Clinton nominees, and rate the Bush judges highly.

"I am heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far, and am confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive" the ABA's highest "well-qualified" rating for judges, Ashcroft said Tuesday.

So far, the ABA has reviewed 17 of Bush's initial 44 choices for federal trial and appeals courts and found all either qualified or well-qualified.

Those reviews were done after the nominees' names were public, instead of beforehand as was done during the Democratic Clinton administration and for eight administrations before that.

Ashcroft addressed the first gathering of the American Bar Association since the Bush administration ended the 50-year policy of using the lawyer group to do behind-the-scenes investigations on White House choices for the federal bench.

Ashcroft did not discuss the White House decision, but did allude to a conservative suspicion that the ABA has a liberal bias and treats Republican judicial nominees more harshly.

"As you may know, there are some who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings," Ashcroft said.

He cited a recent study by Northwestern University law professor James Lindgren, which claimed that the ABA was as much as 10 times more likely to give its highest ratings to Clinton administration choices than to nominees of President Bush's father.

"Professor Lindgren attributes this disparity to a political bias in favor of liberal judges," Ashcroft said, without offering his own view. "Undoubtedly, there are others who argue that no such bias exists. In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

The Bush White House did not cite politics or ideology in booting the ABA in March, saying no outside group should have special control over a president's picks for lifetime judicial posts.

Ashcroft also used the speech to urge the Senate to speed up confirmation of judicial nominees. He noted that only one of 11 judges nominated to the U.S. circuit court this year has had a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"I know I don't need to tell you that judicial nominees mean delays in the time it takes to have one's case heard," Ashcroft said. "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Democrats have vowed to block any nominees seen as too extreme and point out that Republicans routinely blocked nominations when they controlled the Senate.

The ABA's weeklong annual meeting, which ends Wednesday, was dominated by discussion of a proposed overhaul to the 400,000-lawyer group's code of ethics.

The overhaul effort faltered Tuesday, as opponents argued to the ABA's governing body that it risked violating the trust between lawyers and clients.

Facing likely defeat in the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates, lawyers who backed the proposed changes withdrew the most contentious issue. The proposed change would have given lawyers more latitude to report wrongdoing by their clients, including fraudulent business deals and financial crimes.

The ABA was not expected to cast a final vote on the ethics rules until next year, but Tuesday's unexpectedly swift and decisive votes against key provisions may mean there is little left to fight about.

The ABA defeated another contested change that would have eliminated the veto power a client now holds over lawyers who want to switch sides in the middle of a dispute. The change would have allowed lawyers to join an opposing firm so long as the lawyer had nothing further to do with the case.

The delegates did back a proposed prohibition on lawyers having sex with their clients. Until now, lawyers and dentists were the only major professions without a strong policy against the practice, said Boston University law professor Nancy Moore, also a member of the panel that drew up the proposed changes.

The ABA's ethics recommendations are not law, but are used to write state laws governing lawyers.

Ashcroft Says Bush Judicial Picks Will Show 'Respect For The Law'

By Jess Bravin
The Wall Street Journal
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

Attorney General John Ashcroft told the American Bar Association that President Bush's judicial nominees would display a "respect for the law," unlike judges he didn't name, who he said "manufactured 'rights' " for criminals and issued other decisions "usurping the legislative function."

Separately, the ABA, meeting here for its annual convention, rejected further changes to its ethics guidelines that would allow lawyers to reveal clients they believe are intent on committing financial fraud.

The Bush administration's nominations, 44 of which are pending, are the first selected without the confidential screenings the ABA has provided presidents since Dwight D. Eisenhower. The administration ended the ABA screenings in March, after years of conservative complaints that the 400,000-member lawyers' organization preferred liberal judges.

The ABA nevertheless has continued to rate nominees by having a 15-member committee interview and gather information about them, before adopting a rating of "well-qualified," "qualified" or "not qualified." Senate Democrats, who control the fate of the nominees, have said they won't consider any Bush appointments that haven't been evaluated by the ABA.

In his speech Tuesday, Mr. Ashcroft said the group has screened 17 Bush nominations already. Most have been rated well-qualified and none less than qualified. "I am heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far, and am confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive 'well qualified' ratings," he said. He asked the ABA to urge the Senate to quickly confirm the nominees.

Mr. Ashcroft also cited critics of the ABA screenings, referring to an opinion article in Monday's Wall Street Journal, which contended the group was harsher on federal appeals-court nominees of former President George H.W. Bush than they were on those of former President Clinton. In the piece, Northwestern University law professor James Lindgren said "Clinton nominees had more than 10 times better odds of getting the ABA's highest rating than similarly credentialed Bush appointees" and suggested the group isn't objective.

Mr. Ashcroft neither embraced nor rejected that view, but said, "I think we can agree that no political bias should exist." He said President Bush "has unequivocally rejected any notion of an issue-specific or political litmus test" for his nominees.

The ABA's incoming president, Robert E. Hirshon of Portland, Maine, said it was "absolutely wrong" to suggest that the lawyers' group played political favorites. He said of more than 2,000 judicial nominees evaluated since 1960, only 26 were rated not qualified -- and only three of those had been named by Republican presidents.

Martha W. Barnett of Tallahassee, Fla., the ABA's outgoing president, said that, during previous administrations, "in the rare situations where there were problems with a candidate, we came up with information that may have been valuable for the president in deciding whether to go forward" with a nomination.

On Monday, the ABA's governing House of Delegates endorsed a proposal to let lawyers reveal privileged information about a client "to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm." Tuesday, delegates turned down a similar provision involving financial fraud. Disheartened proponents withdrew a related change in ethics rules that would have permitted disclosures to prevent, mitigate or rectify financial injuries, saying they may try again at an ABA meeting in February.

Delegates did approve a new guideline barring lawyers from having sexual relations with a client, except those sexual relationships that "predate the client-lawyer relationship." The ABA's guidelines are nonbinding, but often are followed by courts and legislatures.
Earlier in the day, Mr. Ashcroft proposed tightening money-laundering laws, such as allowing the government to seize shipments of "bulk cash" -- more than $10,000 -- without having to prove the smuggler derived the funds from a crime.

At Lawyers' Gathering, Ashcroft Defends Vetting Decision

President Bush angered the American Bar Association in March when he put an end to its 50-year role in screening potential nominees to the federal bench.

On Tuesday, Attorney General John Ashcroft appeared at the bar association's annual convention here to spell out what Bush wants from nominees -- namely "judicial restraint."

Ashcroft's appearance "was his effort -- and ours -- to extend a hand across the political divide," said Martha Barnett, outgoing president of the group.

When Bush ended the quasi-official role of an ABA standing committee in vetting those being considered for judicial posts, he broke a tradition dating to 1950. Every president since then had considered the ABA's evaluations before announcing nominees.

But Bush was persuaded by conservatives who see a liberal bias in the bar association, especially after its evaluating panel split on ill-fated Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork in 1987.

Ashcroft, in his speech, broached the criticism by calling attention to a study underwritten by the Federalist Society, a conservative group concerned with legal issues. The study found that among nominees with similar legal experience, President Clinton 's were seven times more likely to get the top rating of "well qualified" than those of the first President Bush.

"There are others who would argue that no such bias exists," Ashcroft told the lawyers. "In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

Barnett pointed out after the speech that of the 2,000 potential nominees vetted by the ABA since the early 1960s, only 26 have received "not qualified" ratings, and 23 of them were chosen by Democratic presidents.

The ABA still evaluates nominees but only after their names are made public. Leaders in the Democrat-controlled Senate say they will not confirm a nominee without the ABA's input.

Ashcroft's appearance before the ABA seemed to be a sign of improving relations with the group, which represents 400,000 of the nation's lawyers. Even so, he was clear about the administration's policy on appointees.

"The president has unequivocally rejected any notion of an issue-specific or political litmus test and insists that the only value that his nominees share is a dedication to the rule of law and an understanding of the proper role of a federal judiciary," he said.

Meanwhile, the ABA on Tuesday set aside a discussion of how to handle attorney-client privilege. A faction of the group wanted to loosen guidelines on when an attorney can reveal a client's intent to commit a crime.

Lawyers are expected to report an imminent danger of death or serious injury. Some here hoped to allow lawyers to step forward when there's less clear-cut potential for danger, economic damage or other harm.

The group will likely revisit the issue at its meeting in Philadelphia in six months.

Leahy Plans Recess Hearing On Judicial Nominees

By Noelle Straub
The Hill

In a rare move, Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) will hold a confirmation hearing during the August recess for Bush administration judicial nominees.

Leahy's move is likely to hasten the process of confirming judges nominated by President Bush at a time when Republicans have questioned the slow pace of the confirmation process. Leahy signaled the move in an Aug. 2nd speech on the Senate floor in which he said:

"I am considering holding another judicial confirmation hearing in August, during the Senate recess. No such hearing was held during any of the last six years. If we proceed, it may be the first time a judicial confirmation hearing was held during the August recess."

Leahy is expected to hold the hearing on Aug. 27, his press secretary, David Carle, said Tuesday.

According to Carle, no such recess hearings had been held in the Judiciary Committee at least since 1989.

Leahy had consulted with ranking member Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), before going ahead with his plans, Carle said.

According to Senate Historian Richard Baker, only one member of the Judiciary Committee needs be present to conduct a hearing, although 10 senators are required to report a nomination.

Spokesmen for half-a-dozen Judiciary Committee members contacted Tuesday said they had not yet been informed of the Aug. 27 hearing and could not say whether their members would attend.

Leahy has been considering the unusual move for several reasons, Carle said, including the length of time it took for the Senate to approve an organizing resolution after Sen. Jim Jeffords' (I.-Vt.) defection gave Democrats control of the Senate.

"This is a highly unusual year," Carle said. "The Senate has changed hands three times. The Senate and the committee were only permitted to organize five weeks ago. So the confirmation process for judicial nominees has only been under way since mid-year."

Carle said the committee has already pursued "a brisk confirmation hearing schedule," including prompt consideration of Bush's nominees for the heads of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Administration and Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Bush sent another batch of judicial nominees to the Senate for consideration last week. Carle said the administration has now submitted 20 nominees for the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and 20 for various district courts.

Carle said it has yet to be determined which of these nominees will be included in the hearing this month.

The pace of nominations has proved to be a subject of contention between Democrats and Republicans.

After Sen. Larry Craig (R-Idaho) last week complained on the Senate floor about a nominee awaiting a Judiciary hearing, urging Leahy to act faster, Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) immediately fired back.

"I feel I may need to call an ambulance. I think I just bit off my tongue," Daschle said. "I will say in all sincerity that I think he just gave the speech that I have repeated probably 25 or 30 times over the last six years, verbatim. I can't tell you how many people languished for not days or weeks but years. But I have said on this floor repeatedly that we will not engage in payback."

On July 30, Minority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.) complained to reporters that the Senate at that time had only confirmed three federal judges. (Two more have since been confirmed.)

"And that's all," he said. "So I would hope that we could make some progress this week on the floor of the Senate on nominations and can get some commitments to make even a lot more progress when we come back in September."

But Leahy said some vacancies should have been filled in the past several years but were left open by the Republican-controlled Senate. He also said this year's pace of confirmations compares "most favorably" with the last six years.

On Friday, Assistant Minority Leader Don Nickles (R-Okla.) admitted the White House was partly to blame for delays in the confirmation of judges. "We've got a lot of judges that are waiting, a lot of U.S. attorneys, a lot of marshals that have not been confirmed, that need to be confirmed," Nickles said. "They should have been confirmed, frankly, in many cases by now, but we haven't got the nominations yet from the administration. So I'm not just faulting the Judiciary Committee, except for some of the circuit courts, they've been kind of slow on [the] circuit court."

Ashcroft Asks ABA For Help

By Al Swanson
United Press International
Tuesday, August 7, 2001

U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft Tuesday asked the American Bar Association for help to pressure the Senate to move forward and act on President Bush's 44 pending nominees for federal judgeships.

Ashcroft told the ABA House of Delegates "the American people deserve a federal judiciary operating at full strength and peak efficiency, providing equal access to speedy justice."

Ashcroft chided the Senate Judiciary Committee for holding just one hearing on 11 nominees for federal court vacancies made on May 9. Eight of them were nominated to vacancies that had been classified "judicial emergencies" by the Administrative Court of the United States.

"The administration is doing its part," he said. "Now the Senate and those organizations involved in the process, including the ABA, must join us in working for the prompt confirmation of the outstanding men and women the president has nominated to be federal judges."

The ABA has completed rating the qualifications of 17 of 44 Bush nominees to federal courts, finding them all either "qualified" or "well-qualified."

In March, Bush stopped using the ABA ratings of judicial nominees but the Senate, under Democratic leadership, has continued to use the evaluations.

He said delays in the Senate hearings had raised the specter of the old adage: "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Ashcroft called the Bush nominees models of judicial restraint.

"Judicial restraint means if the Constitution says you have a right to compensation when the government takes your property, then a judge cannot create exceptions for property that the government really doesn't want to pay for, by letting the government so heavily regulate the property as to make it worthless."

The nation's chief law enforcement officer said an independent federal judiciary, insulated from the whims of electoral politics, was essential to settling disputes between the legislative and the executive and maintaining respect for the law.

"Judges who exercise judicial restraint understand the limit of their power," he told the audience of lawyers.

"Judicial restraint means judges refusing to create on their own a criminal justice system that lets clearly guilty criminals off on a technicality."

Ashcroft, a lawyer and former Republican governor from Missouri, was a member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the Constitution subcommittee during his years in the Senate.

"Academic discussions of judicial activism and restraint have done little to enlighten the American public," he said. "The decisions we will ask our federal judges to make -- the issues we will expect them to weigh -- ill affect each and every one of us in ways large and small."

Earlier, Ashcroft told law enforcement officers at a conference on organized crime in Chicago that Congress should close loopholes in the law to make it more difficult for drug dealers, terrorists and other criminals to launder money.

The Justice Department may recommend tightening federal laws to halt smuggling of large amounts of cash by making transporting more than $10,000 in cash proceeds from criminal acts across U.S. borders a federal offense. The money would be subject to confiscation.

Ashcroft Prods ABA To Quickly Vet Judge Nominees

U.S. Attorney General John D. Ashcroft Tuesday called for prompt Senate action on President Bush's judicial nominees and urged the American Bar Association to quickly and thoroughly review the nominees.

"So far the confirmation process has moved slowly," Ashcroft told the ABA's House of Delegates in the Grand Ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"The administration is doing its part. Now the Senate and those organizations involved in the process, including the ABA, must join us in working for the prompt confirmation of the outstanding men and women the president has nominated to the federal bench."

He said the Senate should approve all 44 of Bush's nominees by the end of the year.

Ashcroft made no mention of the Bush administration's decision only five months ago to end the ABA's half-century role of advance vetting of prospective federal judges before the president makes the nominations public.

Since Bush took that action, Democratic senators have asked the ABA to evaluate judicial nominees before the U.S. Senate acts on them.

In his speech, Ashcroft also spoke out against judicial activism and against judges who release "clearly guilty criminals" on technicalities. This, he said, leads to increased crime.

The House of Delegates applauded one remark, when Ashcroft said "I think we can agree that no political bias should exist" in the nomination and confirmation of judges.

"As you know," Ashcroft told the delegates, "there are some who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings."

The attorney general quoted a study by Northwestern University law Professor James Lindgren, who found that President Bill Clinton's judicial nominees "had more than 10 times better odds of getting the ABA's highest rating than similar credentialed former-President Bush's appointees."

"Professor Lindgren attributes this disparity to a political bias in favor of liberal judges," Ashcroft told the ABA delegates.

"Undoubtedly," Ashcroft added, "there are others who argue that no such bias exists. In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

He said he was "heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far" of Bush's nominees and was "confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive 'well qualified' ratings."

The ABA has reviewed 17 of Bush's judicial nominees and "rated every one of them qualified.... In fact, you have rated 70 per cent of these candidates 'well qualified,' the ABA's highest rating," the attorney general said.

"Currently, there is a serious number of vacancies on the federal courts, 108 vacancies out of 862 positions," Ashcroft said. "More than 12 per cent of the court is vacant. President Bush has recognized the urgency of this problem and has made it one of his top priorities. He has nominated judges at a record pace, 44 judicial candidates so far this year."

By comparison, Ashcroft said, President Ronald Reagan had made 13 judicial nominations before the end of August 1981; George H.W. Bush had made eight such nominations by the end of August 1989; and Clinton had made 13 before the end of August 1993.

Ashcroft said that in the first year of each of the past three presidential administrations, "all but one of the judicial nominees who were nominated before the end of the August recess were confirmed in the first year of the presidency.

"The one nominee who was not confirmed was rated 'not qualified' by the ABA. Consistent with that history, the Senate should move forward and act on all 44 of President Bush's nominations ... this year."

Ashcroft noted that the Senate has a long way to go. He said Bush announced 11 judicial nominations on May 9, "two months before Presidents Reagan or Clinton made their first nominations." Eight of those 11 were nominated to judicial vacancies classified as "judicial emergencies" by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, Ashcroft said.

The ABA found all of the first 11 nominations "to be either qualified or well qualified for judicial office ... yet only one of those 11 nominees has received a hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee," the attorney general said.

He commended the Senate for acting promptly on non-judicial appointments, including in the last two weeks a new commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, a new head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, and a new FBI director.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, understands the urgency of acting on Bush's judicial nominees, said Ashcroft. He told the delegates, "I ask you to help him in ensuring that the rest of the Senate places as high a priority on these nominations as does the president."

Back in March, White House Counsel Al Gonzales pointed out that the ABA has done advocacy work on certain public policies such as support for abortion and a call for a death penalty moratorium. Gonzales said that, in that light, the ABA should not have "a preferential arrangement" whereby it got first crack at examining potential judicial nominees.

On the issue of judicial activism, Ashcroft quoted Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter as saying, "The highest exercise of judicial duty is to subordinate one's personal will and one's private views to the law."

Judicial activism, said Ashcroft, deprives the voters of recourse to their legislature for policy decisions.

McConnell Says East Kentucky Judges Will Prove Capable

The three nominees for federal judgeships in eastern Kentucky will prove capable jurists over the years, Sen. Mitch McConnell said Wednesday, though he acknowledged he does not know one of the nominees.

McConnell also dismissed any notion that personal relationships influenced the choices of any of the nominees. "That happens sometimes," McConnell said.

David Bunning, the son of U.S. Sen. Jim Bunning, is one of the nominees. Another is Karen Caldwell, a former U.S. Attorney for the eastern district who once dated McConnell. The third nominee is Danny Reeves, a Lexington lawyer.

McConnell said he personally knows only two of the nominees and Bunning knows only two. He refused to elaborate.

"You've got to pick people somehow," McConnell told the Louisville Forum. "I think we did a good job and I think the people in eastern Kentucky will discover that over the years."

If confirmed, federal judges hold lifetime jobs and can be removed only by impeachment in the Congress.

There has been some muted criticism of the nominees because they lack eastern Kentucky connections. The nominations by President Bush, which have yet to be considered by the Senate are to fill two vacancies and a new judgeship, including seats in London and Pikeville.

Bunning's qualifications have been questioned because he has been practicing law for only 10 years, all as an assistant prosecutor in the U.S. Attorney's office. The American Bar Association guidelines generally suggest a minimum of 12 years experience for a federal judge.

McConnell, who has been in the Senate for 17 years and will be running for re-election in 2002, fielded questions from forum members on a range of topics, from missile defense to a separate state for Palestinians.

He answered pointedly on a couple of inquiries, especially one about his own legislative record.

McConnell said a question posed about what bills he has sponsored in three terms sounded like it came from an opponent, though the forum is officially neutral and nonpartisan.

McConnell said he has been primary sponsor on numerous important items, mostly appropriations initiatives in the area of foreign aid. McConnell said he would answer the question more fully during his campaign.

On the topic of drilling for oil in the Alaskan wilderness, McConnell said in some respects the issue boiled down to driving habits. McConnell said more people would be killed if fewer people drove large sport utility vehicles.

"Who's going to be willing to sacrifice a member of their family by getting into a smaller car?" McConnell wondered.

on what the meaning of the word "litmus" is because, clearly, George Bush and John Ashcroft have an idea.

He says, "We're not going to make any -- we're not going to have any political litmus tests," and I even think he said ideological litmus tests. On the other hand, they do have a judicial litmus test, and that is restraint...

LIASSON: Right.

KONDRACKE: ... you know, that you should not -- that a judge should not make law, should leave the process to the legislature and all that. Now he did -- what he did not say -- he did not point at the ABA and accuse them of -- of having a political bias, which this Northwestern University professor who he cited actually found, that the ABA was 10 times more likely to approve a judge nominated by Bill Clinton than George Bush's father.

BARNES: Yeah. You know, look, there is -- the -- this idea of a litmus test -- when they say there isn't one, they're really talking about Roe v. Wade, and -- and they do not ask these judicial nominees "Would you vote to overturn Roe v. Wade?" I mean, that's just a question that's not asked.

That's the -- that's the main litmus test they're talking about, to have a judicial conservative. They did not -- I mean, Bush has not appointed all judicial conservatives. As a matter of fact, he's appointed some Democrats and some more liberal judges.

Now the ones at issue, of course, with this Democratic Senate are the judicial conservatives, and he spoke out very strongly in favor of them, particularly, as you might guess in this administration that wants to win Latino votes, in favor of a man named Miguel Estrada, who's actually from - - born in Honduras, and has been nominated the -- to the...

BARNES: He'd be a hard guy to block on any grounds other than the fact that he is a conservative.

SNOW: Let me ask you. This is a dumb question perhaps, but what's wrong with having that litmus test? I thought that's why you had presidents picking judges.

LIASSON: I think that's a good question, and that certainly is what Charles Schumer has suggested from the other point of view, is why not. Why shouldn't the Senate judge nominees on ideology? And if they don't like it, they should go vote against...

KONDRACKE: Well, you can be sure that there would be -- that this judicial restraint litmus test would apply to a Supreme Court justice nominated by -- by George Bush. He -- it might not apply to a...

SNOW: Why? It didn't apply to his father.

LIASSON: Well -- well, wait a minute. He...

BARNES: No, no. This is wrong, though. Look, advise and consent does not mean we have -- we in the Senate have a right to appoint and decide whoever we want. If something...

LIASSON: Well, they have a right to vote against the judge if they want.

BARNES: It doesn't mean -- it does not give the Senate the power to reject all judges whose philosophy is not Tom Daschle's and Pat Leahy's. That's just not the way our system works, has ever worked, and to -- if you say no conservatives can be nominated...

Ashcroft Pushes Senate On Judicial Nominees; Speech Fuels Battle Over Confirmations

By Dan Eggen
The Washington Post
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

Attorney General John D. Ashcroft urged the Senate yesterday to speed up confirmation of the Bush administration's nominees for the federal bench, complaining that the "process has moved slowly" and is contributing to backlogs in the federal courts.

In a speech to the American Bar Association in Chicago, Ashcroft said that only one of 11 judges nominated to U.S. circuit courts this year has had a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee. Eight of those positions have been classified as "judicial emergencies" because they have stood vacant for so long, he said.

"I know I don't need to tell you that judicial vacancies mean delays in the time it takes to have one's case heard," Ashcroft said at the ABA's annual conference. "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Ashcroft's statements marked another escalation in the war of words between the Republican administration and the Democratic-controlled Senate over judicial nominations, which are shaping up as a key battleground for the two parties.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.) and other leading Democrats, still smarting from Ashcroft's contentious confirmation in February, have vowed to block any judicial nominees seen as too ideologically extreme and accuse Republicans of hypocrisy for complaining about judicial nominations.

Leahy spokesman David Carle said that more than half of President Bill Clinton's nominees for circuit courts were not confirmed in the last two years of Republican control.

"He knows about the delaying tactics of the past from his side of the aisle," Carle said of Ashcroft, a former Senate Republican. "Some Republican critics seem to be struggling mightily to keep straight faces while wrongly charging the Senate with delays."

Democrats also accuse the White House of causing its own delays by limiting the role of the ABA, which for half a century had secretly checked the backgrounds of potential federal judges before they were nominated. Bush officials stopped the practice, saying the group had a liberal bias in its grading system, but Democrats still rely on ABA grades issued after nominations.

In his first speech to the organization as attorney general, Ashcroft sidestepped the controversial move to end the ABA role. But, he said, "there are those who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings." He cited a study alleging that Clinton nominees were 10 times more likely to get the group's highest rating than those in the first Bush administration.

In a separate speech yesterday in Chicago, Ashcroft urged Congress to close loopholes in laws that limit prosecutors' power to target money laundering and organized crime.

Ashcroft told an audience at a conference on organized crime that current laws severely limit the Justice Department's ability to confiscate large quantities of cash smuggled out of the country as part of the drug trade. The Justice Department is also considering asking Congress to expand the list of overseas crimes that can be prosecuted domestically if they involve bringing proceeds into the United States, he said.

Ashcroft Defends Bush To Lawyers

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

Attorney General John Ashcroft said he is confident the American Bar Association will apply the same standards to its reviews of Bush administration nominees as it did when vetting Clinton nominees, and rate the Bush judges highly.

"I am heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far, and am confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive" the ABA's highest "well-qualified" rating for judges, Ashcroft said Tuesday.

So far, the ABA has reviewed 17 of Bush's initial 44 choices for federal trial and appeals courts and found all either qualified or well-qualified.

Those reviews were done after the nominees' names were public, instead of beforehand as was done during the Democratic Clinton administration and for eight administrations before that.

Ashcroft addressed the first gathering of the American Bar Association since the Bush administration ended the 50-year policy of using the lawyer group to do behind-the-scenes investigations on White House choices for the federal bench.

Ashcroft did not discuss the White House decision, but did allude to a conservative suspicion that the ABA has a liberal bias and treats Republican judicial nominees more harshly.

"As you may know, there are some who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings," Ashcroft said.

He cited a recent study by Northwestern University law professor James Lindgren, which claimed that the ABA was as much as 10 times more likely to give its highest ratings to Clinton administration choices than to nominees of President Bush's father.

"Professor Lindgren attributes this disparity to a political bias in favor of liberal judges," Ashcroft said, without offering his own view. "Undoubtedly, there are others who argue that no such bias exists. In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

The Bush White House did not cite politics or ideology in booting the ABA in March, saying no outside group should have special control over a president's picks for lifetime judicial posts.

Ashcroft also used the speech to urge the Senate to speed up confirmation of judicial nominees. He noted that only one of 11 judges nominated to the U.S. circuit court this year has had a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"I know I don't need to tell you that judicial nominees mean delays in the time it takes to have one's case heard," Ashcroft said. "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Democrats have vowed to block any nominees seen as too extreme and point out that Republicans routinely blocked nominations when they controlled the Senate.

The ABA's weeklong annual meeting, which ends Wednesday, was dominated by discussion of a proposed overhaul to the 400,000-lawyer group's code of ethics.

The overhaul effort faltered Tuesday, as opponents argued to the ABA's governing body that it risked violating the trust between lawyers and clients.

Facing likely defeat in the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates, lawyers who backed the proposed changes withdrew the most contentious issue. The proposed change would have given lawyers more latitude to report wrongdoing by their clients, including fraudulent business deals and financial crimes.

The ABA was not expected to cast a final vote on the ethics rules until next year, but Tuesday's unexpectedly swift and decisive votes against key provisions may mean there is little left to fight about.

The ABA defeated another contested change that would have eliminated the veto power a client now holds over lawyers who want to switch sides in the middle of a dispute. The change would have allowed lawyers to join an opposing firm so long as the lawyer had nothing further to do with the case.

The delegates did back a proposed prohibition on lawyers having sex with their clients. Until now, lawyers and dentists were the only major professions without a strong policy against the practice, said Boston University law professor Nancy Moore, also a member of the panel that drew up the proposed changes.

The ABA's ethics recommendations are not law, but are used to write state laws governing lawyers.

Ashcroft Says Bush Judicial Picks Will Show 'Respect For The Law'

By Jess Bravin
The Wall Street Journal
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

Attorney General John Ashcroft told the American Bar Association that President Bush's judicial nominees would display a "respect for the law," unlike judges he didn't name, who he said "manufactured 'rights' " for criminals and issued other decisions "usurping the legislative function."

Separately, the ABA, meeting here for its annual convention, rejected further changes to its ethics guidelines that would allow lawyers to reveal clients they believe are intent on committing financial fraud.

The Bush administration's nominations, 44 of which are pending, are the first selected without the confidential screenings the ABA has provided presidents since Dwight D. Eisenhower. The administration ended the ABA screenings in March, after years of conservative complaints that the 400,000-member lawyers' organization preferred liberal judges.

The ABA nevertheless has continued to rate nominees by having a 15-member committee interview and gather information about them, before adopting a rating of "well-qualified," "qualified" or "not qualified." Senate Democrats, who control the fate of the nominees, have said they won't consider any Bush appointments that haven't been evaluated by the ABA.

In his speech Tuesday, Mr. Ashcroft said the group has screened 17 Bush nominations already. Most have been rated well-qualified and none less than qualified. "I am heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far, and am confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive 'well qualified' ratings," he said. He asked the ABA to urge the Senate to quickly confirm the nominees.

Mr. Ashcroft also cited critics of the ABA screenings, referring to an opinion article in Monday's Wall Street Journal, which contended the group was harsher on federal appeals-court nominees of former President George H.W. Bush than they were on those of former President Clinton. In the piece, Northwestern University law professor James Lindgren said "Clinton nominees had more than 10 times better odds of getting the ABA's highest rating than similarly credentialed Bush appointees" and suggested the group isn't objective.

Mr. Ashcroft neither embraced nor rejected that view, but said, "I think we can agree that no political bias should exist." He said President Bush "has unequivocally rejected any notion of an issue-specific or political litmus test" for his nominees.

The ABA's incoming president, Robert E. Hirshon of Portland, Maine, said it was "absolutely wrong" to suggest that the lawyers' group played political favorites. He said of more than 2,000 judicial nominees evaluated since 1960, only 26 were rated not qualified -- and only three of those had been named by Republican presidents.

Martha W. Barnett of Tallahassee, Fla., the ABA's outgoing president, said that, during previous administrations, "in the rare situations where there were problems with a candidate, we came up with information that may have been valuable for the president in deciding whether to go forward" with a nomination.

On Monday, the ABA's governing House of Delegates endorsed a proposal to let lawyers reveal privileged information about a client "to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm." Tuesday, delegates turned down a similar provision involving financial fraud. Disheartened proponents withdrew a related change in ethics rules that would have permitted disclosures to prevent, mitigate or rectify financial injuries, saying they may try again at an ABA meeting in February.

Delegates did approve a new guideline barring lawyers from having sexual relations with a client, except those sexual relationships that "predate the client-lawyer relationship." The ABA's guidelines are nonbinding, but often are followed by courts and legislatures.
Earlier in the day, Mr. Ashcroft proposed tightening money-laundering laws, such as allowing the government to seize shipments of "bulk cash" -- more than $10,000 -- without having to prove the smuggler derived the funds from a crime.

President Bush angered the American Bar Association in March when he put an end to its 50-year role in screening potential nominees to the federal bench.

On Tuesday, Attorney General John Ashcroft appeared at the bar association's annual convention here to spell out what Bush wants from nominees -- namely "judicial restraint."

Ashcroft's appearance "was his effort -- and ours -- to extend a hand across the political divide," said Martha Barnett, outgoing president of the group.

When Bush ended the quasi-official role of an ABA standing committee in vetting those being considered for judicial posts, he broke a tradition dating to 1950. Every president since then had considered the ABA's evaluations before announcing nominees.

But Bush was persuaded by conservatives who see a liberal bias in the bar association, especially after its evaluating panel split on ill-fated Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork in 1987.

Ashcroft, in his speech, broached the criticism by calling attention to a study underwritten by the Federalist Society, a conservative group concerned with legal issues. The study found that among nominees with similar legal experience, President Clinton 's were seven times more likely to get the top rating of "well qualified" than those of the first President Bush.

"There are others who would argue that no such bias exists," Ashcroft told the lawyers. "In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

Barnett pointed out after the speech that of the 2,000 potential nominees vetted by the ABA since the early 1960s, only 26 have received "not qualified" ratings, and 23 of them were chosen by Democratic presidents.

The ABA still evaluates nominees but only after their names are made public. Leaders in the Democrat-controlled Senate say they will not confirm a nominee without the ABA's input.

Ashcroft's appearance before the ABA seemed to be a sign of improving relations with the group, which represents 400,000 of the nation's lawyers. Even so, he was clear about the administration's policy on appointees.

"The president has unequivocally rejected any notion of an issue-specific or political litmus test and insists that the only value that his nominees share is a dedication to the rule of law and an understanding of the proper role of a federal judiciary," he said.

Meanwhile, the ABA on Tuesday set aside a discussion of how to handle attorney-client privilege. A faction of the group wanted to loosen guidelines on when an attorney can reveal a client's intent to commit a crime.

Lawyers are expected to report an imminent danger of death or serious injury. Some here hoped to allow lawyers to step forward when there's less clear-cut potential for danger, economic damage or other harm.

The group will likely revisit the issue at its meeting in Philadelphia in six months.

Leahy Plans Recess Hearing On Judicial Nominees

By Noelle Straub
The Hill
Wednesday, August 8, 2001

In a rare move, Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) will hold a confirmation hearing during the August recess for Bush administration judicial nominees.

Leahy's move is likely to hasten the process of confirming judges nominated by President Bush at a time when Republicans have questioned the slow pace of the confirmation process. Leahy signaled the move in an Aug. 2nd speech on the Senate floor in which he said:

"I am considering holding another judicial confirmation hearing in August, during the Senate recess. No such hearing was held during any of the last six years. If we proceed, it may be the first time a judicial confirmation hearing was held during the August recess."

Leahy is expected to hold the hearing on Aug. 27, his press secretary, David Carle, said Tuesday.

According to Carle, no such recess hearings had been held in the Judiciary Committee at least since 1989.

Leahy had consulted with ranking member Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), before going ahead with his plans, Carle said.

According to Senate Historian Richard Baker, only one member of the Judiciary Committee needs be present to conduct a hearing, although 10 senators are required to report a nomination.

Spokesmen for half-a-dozen Judiciary Committee members contacted Tuesday said they had not yet been informed of the Aug. 27 hearing and could not say whether their members would attend.

Leahy has been considering the unusual move for several reasons, Carle said, including the length of time it took for the Senate to approve an organizing resolution after Sen. Jim Jeffords' (I.-Vt.) defection gave Democrats control of the Senate.

"This is a highly unusual year," Carle said. "The Senate has changed hands three times. The Senate and the committee were only permitted to organize five weeks ago. So the confirmation process for judicial nominees has only been under way since mid-year."

Carle said the committee has already pursued "a brisk confirmation hearing schedule," including prompt consideration of Bush's nominees for the heads of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Administration and Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Bush sent another batch of judicial nominees to the Senate for consideration last week. Carle said the administration has now submitted 20 nominees for the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and 20 for various district courts.

Carle said it has yet to be determined which of these nominees will be included in the hearing this month.

The pace of nominations has proved to be a subject of contention between Democrats and Republicans.

After Sen. Larry Craig (R-Idaho) last week complained on the Senate floor about a nominee awaiting a Judiciary hearing, urging Leahy to act faster, Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) immediately fired back.

"I feel I may need to call an ambulance. I think I just bit off my tongue," Daschle said. "I will say in all sincerity that I think he just gave the speech that I have repeated probably 25 or 30 times over the last six years, verbatim. I can't tell you how many people languished for not days or weeks but years. But I have said on this floor repeatedly that we will not engage in payback."

On July 30, Minority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.) complained to reporters that the Senate at that time had only confirmed three federal judges. (Two more have since been confirmed.)

"And that's all," he said. "So I would hope that we could make some progress this week on the floor of the Senate on nominations and can get some commitments to make even a lot more progress when we come back in September."

But Leahy said some vacancies should have been filled in the past several years but were left open by the Republican-controlled Senate. He also said this year's pace of confirmations compares "most favorably" with the last six years.

On Friday, Assistant Minority Leader Don Nickles (R-Okla.) admitted the White House was partly to blame for delays in the confirmation of judges. "We've got a lot of judges that are waiting, a lot of U.S. attorneys, a lot of marshals that have not been confirmed, that need to be confirmed," Nickles said. "They should have been confirmed, frankly, in many cases by now, but we haven't got the nominations yet from the administration. So I'm not just faulting the Judiciary Committee, except for some of the circuit courts, they've been kind of slow on [the] circuit court."

Ashcroft Asks ABA For Help

By Al Swanson
United Press International
Tuesday, August 7, 2001

U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft Tuesday asked the American Bar Association for help to pressure the Senate to move forward and act on President Bush's 44 pending nominees for federal judgeships.

Ashcroft told the ABA House of Delegates "the American people deserve a federal judiciary operating at full strength and peak efficiency, providing equal access to speedy justice."

Ashcroft chided the Senate Judiciary Committee for holding just one hearing on 11 nominees for federal court vacancies made on May 9. Eight of them were nominated to vacancies that had been classified "judicial emergencies" by the Administrative Court of the United States.

"The administration is doing its part," he said. "Now the Senate and those organizations involved in the process, including the ABA, must join us in working for the prompt confirmation of the outstanding men and women the president has nominated to be federal judges."

The ABA has completed rating the qualifications of 17 of 44 Bush nominees to federal courts, finding them all either "qualified" or "well-qualified."

In March, Bush stopped using the ABA ratings of judicial nominees but the Senate, under Democratic leadership, has continued to use the evaluations.

He said delays in the Senate hearings had raised the specter of the old adage: "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Ashcroft called the Bush nominees models of judicial restraint.

"Judicial restraint means if the Constitution says you have a right to compensation when the government takes your property, then a judge cannot create exceptions for property that the government really doesn't want to pay for, by letting the government so heavily regulate the property as to make it worthless."

The nation's chief law enforcement officer said an independent federal judiciary, insulated from the whims of electoral politics, was essential to settling disputes between the legislative and the executive and maintaining respect for the law.

"Judges who exercise judicial restraint understand the limit of their power," he told the audience of lawyers.

"Judicial restraint means judges refusing to create on their own a criminal justice system that lets clearly guilty criminals off on a technicality."

Ashcroft, a lawyer and former Republican governor from Missouri, was a member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the Constitution subcommittee during his years in the Senate.

"Academic discussions of judicial activism and restraint have done little to enlighten the American public," he said. "The decisions we will ask our federal judges to make -- the issues we will expect them to weigh -- ill affect each and every one of us in ways large and small."

Earlier, Ashcroft told law enforcement officers at a conference on organized crime in Chicago that Congress should close loopholes in the law to make it more difficult for drug dealers, terrorists and other criminals to launder money.

The Justice Department may recommend tightening federal laws to halt smuggling of large amounts of cash by making transporting more than $10,000 in cash proceeds from criminal acts across U.S. borders a federal offense. The money would be subject to confiscation.

Ashcroft Prods ABA To Quickly Vet Judge Nominees

U.S. Attorney General John D. Ashcroft Tuesday called for prompt Senate action on President Bush's judicial nominees and urged the American Bar Association to quickly and thoroughly review the nominees.

"So far the confirmation process has moved slowly," Ashcroft told the ABA's House of Delegates in the Grand Ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"The administration is doing its part. Now the Senate and those organizations involved in the process, including the ABA, must join us in working for the prompt confirmation of the outstanding men and women the president has nominated to the federal bench."

He said the Senate should approve all 44 of Bush's nominees by the end of the year.

Ashcroft made no mention of the Bush administration's decision only five months ago to end the ABA's half-century role of advance vetting of prospective federal judges before the president makes the nominations public.

Since Bush took that action, Democratic senators have asked the ABA to evaluate judicial nominees before the U.S. Senate acts on them.

In his speech, Ashcroft also spoke out against judicial activism and against judges who release "clearly guilty criminals" on technicalities. This, he said, leads to increased crime.

The House of Delegates applauded one remark, when Ashcroft said "I think we can agree that no political bias should exist" in the nomination and confirmation of judges.

"As you know," Ashcroft told the delegates, "there are some who have called into doubt the impartiality of the ABA's judicial ratings."

The attorney general quoted a study by Northwestern University law Professor James Lindgren, who found that President Bill Clinton's judicial nominees "had more than 10 times better odds of getting the ABA's highest rating than similar credentialed former-President Bush's appointees."

"Professor Lindgren attributes this disparity to a political bias in favor of liberal judges," Ashcroft told the ABA delegates.

"Undoubtedly," Ashcroft added, "there are others who argue that no such bias exists. In any event, I think we can agree that no political bias should exist."

He said he was "heartened by the ABA's ratings thus far" of Bush's nominees and was "confident that, judged by the same standards used to rate the last administration, the vast majority of President Bush's nominees will continue to receive 'well qualified' ratings."

The ABA has reviewed 17 of Bush's judicial nominees and "rated every one of them qualified.... In fact, you have rated 70 per cent of these candidates 'well qualified,' the ABA's highest rating," the attorney general said.

"Currently, there is a serious number of vacancies on the federal courts, 108 vacancies out of 862 positions," Ashcroft said. "More than 12 per cent of the court is vacant. President Bush has recognized the urgency of this problem and has made it one of his top priorities. He has nominated judges at a record pace, 44 judicial candidates so far this year."

By comparison, Ashcroft said, President Ronald Reagan had made 13 judicial nominations before the end of August 1981; George H.W. Bush had made eight such nominations by the end of August 1989; and Clinton had made 13 before the end of August 1993.

Ashcroft said that in the first year of each of the past three presidential administrations, "all but one of the judicial nominees who were nominated before the end of the August recess were confirmed in the first year of the presidency.

"The one nominee who was not confirmed was rated 'not qualified' by the ABA. Consistent with that history, the Senate should move forward and act on all 44 of President Bush's nominations ... this year."

Ashcroft noted that the Senate has a long way to go. He said Bush announced 11 judicial nominations on May 9, "two months before Presidents Reagan or Clinton made their first nominations." Eight of those 11 were nominated to judicial vacancies classified as "judicial emergencies" by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, Ashcroft said.

The ABA found all of the first 11 nominations "to be either qualified or well qualified for judicial office ... yet only one of those 11 nominees has received a hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee," the attorney general said.

He commended the Senate for acting promptly on non-judicial appointments, including in the last two weeks a new commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, a new head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, and a new FBI director.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, understands the urgency of acting on Bush's judicial nominees, said Ashcroft. He told the delegates, "I ask you to help him in ensuring that the rest of the Senate places as high a priority on these nominations as does the president."

Back in March, White House Counsel Al Gonzales pointed out that the ABA has done advocacy work on certain public policies such as support for abortion and a call for a death penalty moratorium. Gonzales said that, in that light, the ABA should not have "a preferential arrangement" whereby it got first crack at examining potential judicial nominees.

On the issue of judicial activism, Ashcroft quoted Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter as saying, "The highest exercise of judicial duty is to subordinate one's personal will and one's private views to the law."

Judicial activism, said Ashcroft, deprives the voters of recourse to their legislature for policy decisions.

McConnell Says East Kentucky Judges Will Prove Capable

The three nominees for federal judgeships in eastern Kentucky will prove capable jurists over the years, Sen. Mitch McConnell said Wednesday, though he acknowledged he does not know one of the nominees.

McConnell also dismissed any notion that personal relationships influenced the choices of any of the nominees. "That happens sometimes," McConnell said.

David Bunning, the son of U.S. Sen. Jim Bunning, is one of the nominees. Another is Karen Caldwell, a former U.S. Attorney for the eastern district who once dated McConnell. The third nominee is Danny Reeves, a Lexington lawyer.

McConnell said he personally knows only two of the nominees and Bunning knows only two. He refused to elaborate.

"You've got to pick people somehow," McConnell told the Louisville Forum. "I think we did a good job and I think the people in eastern Kentucky will discover that over the years."

If confirmed, federal judges hold lifetime jobs and can be removed only by impeachment in the Congress.

There has been some muted criticism of the nominees because they lack eastern Kentucky connections. The nominations by President Bush, which have yet to be considered by the Senate are to fill two vacancies and a new judgeship, including seats in London and Pikeville.

Bunning's qualifications have been questioned because he has been practicing law for only 10 years, all as an assistant prosecutor in the U.S. Attorney's office. The American Bar Association guidelines generally suggest a minimum of 12 years experience for a federal judge.

McConnell, who has been in the Senate for 17 years and will be running for re-election in 2002, fielded questions from forum members on a range of topics, from missile defense to a separate state for Palestinians.

He answered pointedly on a couple of inquiries, especially one about his own legislative record.

McConnell said a question posed about what bills he has sponsored in three terms sounded like it came from an opponent, though the forum is officially neutral and nonpartisan.

McConnell said he has been primary sponsor on numerous important items, mostly appropriations initiatives in the area of foreign aid. McConnell said he would answer the question more fully during his campaign.

On the topic of drilling for oil in the Alaskan wilderness, McConnell said in some respects the issue boiled down to driving habits. McConnell said more people would be killed if fewer people drove large sport utility vehicles.

"Who's going to be willing to sacrifice a member of their family by getting into a smaller car?" McConnell wondered.

EXCERPT

SNOW: And we're back with Fred, Mort, and Mara.

Mort, an interesting speech John Ashcroft gave to the American Bar Association, in part because it was just taking it right to them in the sense of saying, "OK. We're going to try not to use litmus tests. Why don't you try to do the same?" Is he right?

KONDRACKE: Well, you know, in this case, I -- I think that he -- this is a case of it all depends on what the meaning of the word "litmus" is because, clearly, George Bush and John Ashcroft have an idea.

He says, "We're not going to make any -- we're not going to have any political litmus tests," and I even think he said ideological litmus tests. On the other hand, they do have a judicial litmus test, and that is restraint...

LIASSON: Right.

KONDRACKE: ... you know, that you should not -- that a judge should not make law, should leave the process to the legislature and all that. Now he did -- what he did not say -- he did not point at the ABA and accuse them of -- of having a political bias, which this Northwestern University professor who he cited actually found, that the ABA was 10 times more likely to approve a judge nominated by Bill Clinton than George Bush's father.

BARNES: Yeah. You know, look, there is -- the -- this idea of a litmus test -- when they say there isn't one, they're really talking about Roe v. Wade, and -- and they do not ask these judicial nominees "Would you vote to overturn Roe v. Wade?" I mean, that's just a question that's not asked.

That's the -- that's the main litmus test they're talking about, to have a judicial conservative. They did not -- I mean, Bush has not appointed all judicial conservatives. As a matter of fact, he's appointed some Democrats and some more liberal judges.

Now the ones at issue, of course, with this Democratic Senate are the judicial conservatives, and he spoke out very strongly in favor of them, particularly, as you might guess in this administration that wants to win Latino votes, in favor of a man named Miguel Estrada, who's actually from - - born in Honduras, and has been nominated the -- to the...

SNOW: The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

BARNES: ... Court of Appeals for the district and has gotten a well- qualified rating by the ABA. I mean, that's going to be a real test, and - - and he is a conservative.

LIASSON: Right. And he might have the shortest stint, if he's -- if he's confirmed, on that Court of Appeals of anybody because he'll be on the top of the list to be elevated to the Supreme Court.

BARNES: He'd be a hard guy to block on any grounds other than the fact that he is a conservative.

SNOW: Let me ask you. This is a dumb question perhaps, but what's wrong with having that litmus test? I thought that's why you had presidents picking judges.

LIASSON: I think that's a good question, and that certainly is what Charles Schumer has suggested from the other point of view, is why not. Why shouldn't the Senate judge nominees on ideology? And if they don't like it, they should go vote against...

KONDRACKE: Well, you can be sure that there would be -- that this judicial restraint litmus test would apply to a Supreme Court justice nominated by -- by George Bush. He -- it might not apply to a...

SNOW: Why? It didn't apply to his father.

LIASSON: Well -- well, wait a minute. He...

BARNES: No, no. This is wrong, though. Look, advise and consent does not mean we have -- we in the Senate have a right to appoint and decide whoever we want. If something...

LIASSON: Well, they have a right to vote against the judge if they want.

BARNES: It doesn't mean -- it does not give the Senate the power to reject all judges whose philosophy is not Tom Daschle's and Pat Leahy's. That's just not the way our system works, has ever worked, and to -- if you say no conservatives can be nominated...

LIASSON: Well, I don't think that's what they're saying. Look, they -- they're going to confirm conservatives.

THE 2001 NATIONAL MONEY LAUNDERING STRATEGY

Prepared by

The Office of Enforcement, U.S. Department of the Treasury,
In consultation with the U.S. Department of Justice

August 9, 2001

REV_00197199

TABLE OF CONTENTS

GOAL 1: FOCUS ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS ON THE PROSECUTION OF MAJOR MONEY LAUNDERING ORGANIZATIONS. 8

OBJECTIVE 1: FOCUS MISSION OF HIGH RISK MONEY LAUNDERING AND RELATED FINANCIAL CRIME AREA (HIFCA) TASK FORCES. 9

Priority 1: Design organizational structure of HIFCA Task Forces, and focus their enforcement efforts on large-impact cases and professional money launderers. 9

Priority 2: The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will meet every four months with Treasury Bureau Heads and DOJ law enforcement agencies to coordinate and review the progress of each HIFCA Task Force. 11

Priority 3: Develop and provide advanced money laundering training for HIFCA Task Force participants. 12

Priority 4: Designate new HIFCAs. 13

OBJECTIVE 2: ENHANCE USE OF FEDERAL CRIMINAL AND CIVIL ASSET FORFEITURE LAWS. 15

Priority 1: HIFCA Task Forces will submit action plans to intensify use of federal asset forfeiture laws. 15

Priority 2: Provide asset forfeiture training that emphasizes major case development to federal, state, and local law enforcement officials. 16

Priority 3: Aggressively exploit OFAC-held information about blocked assets of foreign terrorist groups and agents and of those individuals and entities appearing on the OFAC Narcotics Sanctions Programs designation lists for potential forfeiture. 17

Priority 4: Develop reporting system to measure assets forfeited or seized pursuant to money laundering prosecutions. 17

OBJECTIVE 3: ENHANCE INTRA-AGENCY AND INTER-AGENCY COORDINATION OF MONEY LAUNDERING INVESTIGATIONS. 18

Priority 1: Coordinate and consolidate existing Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) Review Teams in every U.S. Attorney's Office, and develop SAR Review Teams where they do not exist. 18

OBJECTIVE 4: EXPAND EFFORTS TO DISMANTLE THE BLACK MARKET PESO EXCHANGE (BMPE) MONEY LAUNDERING SYSTEM. 19

Priority 1: Work with the private sector to conclude and implement a comprehensive "best practices" BMPE anti-money laundering system. 19

Priority 2: Identify and report patterns and trends in the BMPE. 20

Priority 3: Develop a training program to enable law enforcement to identify, understand, investigate and prosecute BMPE schemes. 21

Priority 4: Enhance website that promotes law enforcement's fight against the BMPE money laundering system. 21

Priority 5: Conclude multinational study with the governments of Colombia, Aruba, Panama, and Venezuela in the cooperative fight against the BMPE. 22

OBJECTIVE 5: ENACT LEGISLATION TO ADDRESS DEFICIENCIES IN CURRENT MONEY LAUNDERING LAWS. 22

Priority 1: Work to introduce legislation to address deficiencies in current federal money laundering statutes. 22

GOAL 2: IMPROVE THE CAPACITY TO MEASURE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS. 24

OBJECTIVE 1: INSTITUTIONALIZE SYSTEMS TO MEASURE SUCCESS OF MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS AND RESULTS. 25

Priority 1: Devise and implement a uniform money laundering case reporting system. 25

Priority 2: Research other methods for determining the effectiveness of Federal anti-money laundering efforts, including whether law enforcement is impacting the cost of laundering money. 26

Priority 3: Ensure that federal law enforcement agencies provide feedback to FinCEN on the use of SARs and other BSA information. 27

Priority 4: Develop analytic tools to identify money-laundering trends. 27

Priority 5: Review the costs and resources devoted to anti-money laundering efforts to allow for inform budget allocations. 28

GOAL 3: PREVENT MONEY LAUNDERING ACTIVITY THROUGH COOPERATIVE PUBLIC-PRIVATE EFFORTS AND NECESSARY REGULATORY MEASURES. 30

OBJECTIVE 1: EXAMINE THE EFFICACY OF EXISTING REPORTING REQUIREMENTS. 31

Priority 1: Survey depository institutions to determine the actual costs of Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs) and Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs). 31

Priority 2: Work with the financial sector to increase utilization of existing Currency Transaction Report (CTR) filing exemptions for low-risk financial transactions. 32

Priority 3: Survey financial sector regarding the possible expansion of currency transaction reporting exemptions. 33

Objective 2: Work to Expand Types of Financial Institutions Subject to Effective Bank Secrecy Act Requirements as Necessary. 33

Priority 1: Work with the SEC to propose rules for reporting suspicious activity by brokers and dealers in securities. 34

Priority 2: Ensure that money services businesses (MSBs) are educated about their obligations under the new rules that require them to register and report suspicious activity. 35

Priority 3: Provide an additional opportunity for the industry to comment on a draft rule requiring the reporting of suspicious activity by casinos and card clubs. 36

OBJECTIVE 3: INCREASE USEFULNESS OF REPORTED INFORMATION TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES AND THE FINANCIAL INDUSTRY. 37

Priority 1: FinCEN will continue to provide information to financial institutions and law enforcement from SARs and other BSA reports concerning the utility of these reports. 37

Priority 2: The federal bank regulatory agencies will continue to identify and implement enhancements to their examination procedures where necessary to address the ever changing nature of money laundering. 38

Priority 3: Study how technological change impacts money-laundering enforcement. 39

REV_00197202

Priority 4: Continue to address the role of legal and accounting professionals in combating money laundering. 40

Objective 4: Enhance the Ability of U.S. Financial Institutions to Defend against Money Laundering through Foreign Correspondent Banks. 40

Priority 1: Discuss approaches to reduce the threat of money laundering posed by foreign correspondent banks. 40

Priority 2: Require foreign banks that maintain a correspondent account in the U.S. to appoint an agent who is authorized to accept service of legal process. 41

GOAL 4: ENHANCE PARTNERSHIPS WITH STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO FIGHT MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES. 43

OBJECTIVE 1: PROVIDE SEED CAPITAL FOR STATE AND LOCAL COUNTER-MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS. 44

Priority 1: Review applications and award grants under the C-FIC program. 44

Priority 2: Evaluate the progress of existing C-FIC grant recipients. 45

Objective 2: Improve Coordination with State and Local Enforcement agencies. 47

Priority 1: Increase involvement of state and local enforcement agencies through participation in the HIFCA Task Forces and SAR Review Teams. 47

Objective 3: Enhance the Effectiveness of State and Local Law Enforcement's Access to and Use of Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) Data. 47

Priority 1: Provide the most effective and efficient methods for accessing BSA data. 48

Priority 2: Improve the Gateway System. 48

Priority 3: Continue to provide training and outreach to state and local law enforcement regarding access to and utility of BSA data. 48

GOAL 5: STRENGTHEN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION TO COMBAT THE GLOBAL PROBLEM OF MONEY LAUNDERING. 50

OBJECTIVE 1: ENHANCE INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AND EFFECTIVENESS IN INVESTIGATING AND PROSECUTING MONEY LAUNDERERS. 51

Priority 1: Review key existing extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties for coverage of money laundering offenses, and recommend that coverage of money laundering offenses be considered an important objective in assessing future United States government treaty negotiation. 52

Priority 2: Enhance international cooperation of money laundering investigations through equitable sharing of seized assets. 52

Priority 3: Enhance mechanisms for the international exchange of financial intelligence through support and expansion of membership in the Egmont Group of financial intelligence units (FIUs) and report developments to U.S. law enforcement. 54

Priority 4: Explore the feasibility of establishing model international financial task forces to plan and coordinate significant multilateral money laundering investigations. 54

OBJECTIVE 2: CONTINUE ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN FATF AND FATF-STYLE REGIONAL ORGANIZATIONS. 55

Priority 1: Continue the United States' role within FATF in identifying and monitoring the progress of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCTs). 56

Priority 2: Work within the FATF to revise the Forty Recommendations to reflect the experience of the international community, including the evolution of money laundering activities, and the relationship of the Forty Recommendations to the criteria used to determine whether countries are "non-cooperative" in the fight against money laundering. 56

OBJECTIVE 3: PROVIDE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE TO JURISDICTIONS WILLING AND COMMITTED TO STRENGTHENING THEIR ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS. 57

Priority 1: Provide technical assistance to NCCT jurisdictions, as appropriate, to develop strong domestic anti-money laundering legislation. 57

Priority 2: Convene an inter-agency working group to recommend the optimal use of U.S. Government and international expertise in developing and providing appropriate technical assistance to NCCT institutions and jurisdictions. 58

OBJECTIVE 4: WORK WITH THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND WORLD BANK TO ENHANCE ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS. 59

Priority 1: The United States will work with other nations, the IFIs, and FATF, in an effort to incorporate anti-money laundering issues into the IFIs on-going work and programs, including as a separate "Reports on Observance of Standards and Codes" (ROSC) module on money laundering. 59

Priority 2: Support IFI steps to provide necessary technical assistance and regulatory training that further anti-money laundering efforts. 60

Priority 3: Support bilateral, regional, and multilateral efforts in financial for a to urge countries and territories to adopt and adhere to international anti-money laundering standards. 60

Objective 5: Take Coordinated Action Against Money Laundering Threats, as Necessary. 61

Priority 1: Continue to provide guidance to our domestic financial institutions regarding international money laundering risks. 61

Priority 2: Initiate appropriate countermeasures against non-cooperative countries and territories. 62

GOAL 1: FOCUS ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS ON THE PROSECUTION OF MAJOR MONEY LAUNDERING ORGANIZATIONS.

REV_00197206

GOAL 1:

FOCUS ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS ON THE PROSECUTION OF MAJOR MONEY LAUNDERING ORGANIZATIONS.

The top priority of the 2001 Strategy is to focus enforcement efforts on the investigation, prosecution, and disruption of major money laundering organizations. Because federal law enforcement resources are limited, they must be concentrated where they will have the greatest impact. It is therefore imperative to focus enforcement efforts on large-scale investigations and prosecutions that disrupt and dismantle entire criminal organizations and enterprises.

To focus our resources against major money laundering organizations, this Strategy mandates that law enforcement (1) establish inter-agency task forces in High Risk Money Laundering and Related Financial Crimes Areas (HIFCAs), (2) intensify use of federal criminal and civil asset forfeiture laws, (3) enhance intra-agency, inter-agency, and international coordination of money laundering investigations, (4) expand efforts to dismantle the Black Market Peso Exchange (BMPE), and (5) recommend legislation necessary to correct deficiencies in current money laundering laws, thereby strengthening law enforcement's ability to fight money laundering organizations.

* OBJECTIVE 1: FOCUS MISSION OF HIGH RISK MONEY LAUNDERING AND RELATED FINANCIAL CRIME AREA (HIFCA) TASK FORCES.

HIFCA Task Forces occupy the flagship role in our efforts to disrupt and dismantle large-scale money laundering systems and organizations. The HIFCA Task Forces are the model for drawing on intelligence for targeting and working in a task force approach to develop high-impact investigations and prosecutions, and the 2001 Strategy provides for their structure, training, supervision, and expansion. HIFCA Task Forces, however, are only one part of what must be an all agency, all regions effort. The 2001 Strategy, therefore, enlists all federal anti-money laundering law enforcement components, including the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF); High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas (HIDTA); the Money Laundering Control Center (MLCC); and the Special Operations Division, Money Laundering Section (SOD-MLS) to work together, and with their state and local counterparts, to target, arrest, and prosecute professional money launderers and forfeit their assets.

Priority 1: Design organizational structure of HIFCA Task Forces, and focus their enforcement efforts on large-impact cases and professional money launderers.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

REV_00197207

Goals: Initiate targeted federal money laundering investigations led by recently created or newly designated HIFCA Task Forces. By September 2001, the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will design the organizational structure of HIFCA Task Forces, and designate regional HIFCA Task Force directors. By October 2001, assembled HIFCA Task Forces will submit action plans that detail (i) how they will focus resources to target large-scale money laundering activities, and (ii) specific priorities and dates for accomplishing these activities.

The 2001 Strategy seeks to focus and implement the mission of the HIFCA program – to concentrate law enforcement efforts at the federal, state, and local level, and combat money laundering in designated high intensity money laundering zones. HIFCA Task Forces will lead the investigation of complex, transnational money laundering schemes perpetrated by professional money launderers by drawing upon the data, resources, training, and expertise of various enforcement agencies. Further, HIFCA Task Forces will share information with the Office of Foreign Assets Control to assist its investigative efforts of the Narcotics Sanctions[1] and Foreign Terrorist Programs.[2]

The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury, and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice, bear ultimate responsibility for implementation and supervision of each HIFCA Task Force. The HIFCA Task Forces will:

- be composed of all relevant federal, state, and local enforcement authorities; prosecutors; and federal financial supervisory agencies as needed;
- work closely with the HIDTA and OCDETF Task Forces within the HIFCA area;
- focus on collaborative investigative techniques, both within the HIFCA and between the HIFCAs and other areas;
- attend OFAC briefings on Narcotics Sanctions Programs and OFAC Foreign Terrorist Programs;
- attend FinCEN briefings to ensure meaningful and effective utilization of FinCEN information and expertise;
- attend briefing by the Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture on the use of federal civil and criminal forfeiture laws, with specific emphasis on changes effected by the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act of 2000;

1 OFAC's Narcotics Sanctions Programs include the Foreign Narcotics Kingpin Designation Act Program (authorized under 21 U.S.C. § 1901-08 and 8 U.S.C. § 1182) and the Colombian Specially Designated Narcotics Traffickers (SDNT)-International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA) (50 U.S.C. § 1701-06, Executive Order 12978). OFAC's Foreign Terrorist Programs encompass the activities of the Foreign Terrorist Asset Tracking Center, the Specially Designated Terrorists program under IEEPA, and OFAC's participation in the Foreign Terrorist Organization designation process.

2 See 21 U.S.C. § 1901-08; 8 U.S.C. § 1182.

REV_00197208

- ensure a more systematic exchange of information on money laundering between HIFCA participants; and

- attend advanced money laundering and asset forfeiture courses conducted by the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center.

To pursue the goals and objectives of this year's Strategy, inter- and intra-agency coordination is key. The HIFCA Task Forces must be the driving force to unite our law enforcement agencies, and draw upon all available relevant information to conduct successful investigations and prosecutions.

Priority 2: The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will meet every four months with Treasury Bureau Heads and DOJ law enforcement agencies to coordinate and review the progress of each HIFCA Task Force.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Coordinate investigations and monitor progress of investigative targets within and between HIFCAs. By December 2001, representatives from each HIFCA Task Force will brief the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, on HIFCA Task Force activities and coordination efforts. The briefing will detail the involvement and participation of state and local law enforcement agencies in the HIFCAs. The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will thereafter host meetings every four months with federal law enforcement bureau heads or senior executives with full decision-making authority, to monitor and resolve coordination issues within the HIFCAs.

The 2001 Strategy mandates that members of the Treasury and Justice Department law enforcement agencies engage in inter-agency, intra-agency, and international coordination, especially in HIFCAs, where Task Forces rely on the expertise of Treasury and Justice law enforcement agencies, U.S. Attorneys' Offices, federal financial supervisory agencies, and state and local enforcement officials to investigate and prosecute major money laundering schemes and organizations.

The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, are responsible for coordinating inter- and intra-agency efforts and ensuring that Treasury and Justice enforcement components are engaged in the work of the HIFCA Task Forces. Beginning January 2002, the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will meet with federal law enforcement bureau heads or senior executives with full decision-making authority to monitor and resolve coordination issues within the HIFCAs.

Every four months, the manager and other HIFCA Task Force representatives will brief Treasury and Justice officials on the HIFCA's actual and projected activities and targets, and the actual and proposed involvement that state, local, and federal law enforcement and regulatory agencies have in the HIFCA Task Force mission. The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will coordinate efforts between HIFCA Task Forces, and will meet as necessary to ensure that cooperation issues are resolved expeditiously.

Priority 3: Develop and provide advanced money laundering training for HIFCA Task Force participants.

Lead: Director, Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC); Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Deliver advanced money laundering training to HIFCA Task Force participants to ensure that federal, state, and local enforcement agents have the necessary training and expertise to investigate and prosecute major money laundering schemes and organizations. By December 2001, FLETC will develop a new series of advanced money laundering training modules for HIFCA Task Force participants. The training package will focus on the operational experiences of veteran investigators, and will educate the HIFCA Task Force members on the full range of inter- and intra-agency capabilities available to fight money-laundering operations. By January 2002, FLETC will schedule training session dates with each existing HIFCA Task Force.

The Departments of Treasury and Justice offer a substantial amount of fundamental, advanced, and specialized training to task forces, agencies, investigators, and prosecutors through components such as the Office of Legal Education (OLE), the Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section (AFMLS), FBI-Quantico, DEA-Quantico, the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC), and the Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture (EAOF). By the end of FY 2001, for example, the OLE and AFMLS alone, will have conducted 32 different financial investigations, money laundering, and asset forfeiture courses, reaching 3,000 federal law enforcement agents and AUSAs; participated as trainers in over 140 federal and state money laundering and asset forfeiture conferences; and distributed over 150,000 publications and training materials

The 2001 Strategy mandates that the Department of the Treasury and Justice build on this training expertise, and expand the scope of existing and planned training to include a comprehensive training program that is tailored to address the needs and the mission of HIFCA Task Forces. The FLETC, in close coordination with the AFMLS, will lead our efforts to design and provide HIFCA Task Forces with specialized programs that draw from the experiences of successful large-scale money laundering investigations and prosecutions such as Operations Casablanca, Dinero, Greenback, Polar Cap, and Green Ice. These programs will utilize a "lessons learned" approach to educate HIFCA Task Force members about ideal methods to set up, operate, investigate, and prosecute major money laundering schemes and operations.

Priority 4: Designate new HIFCAs.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Designate additional HIFCAs as appropriate. Review applications for HIFCA designations, and make timely recommendation to the Departments of the Treasury and Justice for decision.

The 1998 Strategy Act requires the National Money Laundering Strategy to designate HIFCAs.[3] The statute provides a list of factors to be considered in designating a HIFCA: (1) demographic and general economic data; (2) patterns of BSA filings and related information; and (3) descriptive information that identifies trends and patterns in money laundering activity and the level of law enforcement response to money laundering in the region.[4] The statute does not mandate that enforcement personnel designate HIFCAs solely in geographic terms; HIFCAs also can be created to address money laundering in an industry, sector, financial institution, or group of financial institutions.

The HIFCA Working Group[5] will select future HIFCAs from applications received. A prospective applicant must submit an application to FinCEN that includes:

- a description of the proposed area, system, or sector to be designated;
- the focus and plan for the counter-money laundering projects that the HIFCA designation will support;
- the reasons such a designation is appropriate, taking into account the relevant statutory standards; and
- a point of contact.

HIFCA Designations for Year 2001

Based on the recommendation of the HIFCA Working Group, the 2001 Strategy designates two new HIFCAs: the Northern District of Illinois (Chicago); and the Northern District of California (San Francisco). These new HIFCAs will develop task forces that build upon existing interagency resources in their communities.

1. Northern District of Illinois (Chicago)

5 The HIFCA Working Group is comprised of representatives from DOJ's Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, the Office of Enforcement of the Treasury Department, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, the U.S. Customs Service, the Internal Revenue Service, the Secret Service, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Postal Inspection Service, the Executive Office for U.S. Attorneys, the Executive Office for the Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Forces, and the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

A. Demographic/Economic Information

According to the Census Bureau, Chicago is the third largest city in the United States with a population of nearly 3 million people. The greater Chicago metropolitan area is made up of six counties with a combined total population of 8 million. Chicago is a major financial center with more than 300 banks and 30 U.S. branches of foreign banks. The city is home to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, the seventh largest U.S. bank, and five of the top fifty banks by total assets in the nation.

Chicago is also a major international transportation center. O'Hare International Airport remains the commercial aviation capital of the world; international carriers offer direct service to 60 cities outside of the United States. Chicago is also a major railroad center, and has an international port that handles large amounts of cargo.

B. BSA Filings

From 1998-99, Chicago area banks filed 800,615 Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs), with an aggregate value over $30 billion. Chicago's number of CTRs exceeds the combined total of CTRs filed in Los Angeles and San Juan, and approaches the 878,460 filed in the New York/New Jersey area. The value of the CTRs exceeds the value of those filed in Los Angeles for this period. Chicago banks also filed nearly 5,000 Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs), compared to the 5,171 SARs filed in Los Angeles and 566 in San Juan during the same period.

C. Law Enforcement Activity

Law enforcement staffing levels and money laundering-related cases are similar to other HIFCAs. The FBI reports a large number of active investigations involving significant money laundering transactions. Further, Chicago not only serves as the core city for the Great Lakes Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF), but is also designated as a High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA).

2. Northern District of California (San Francisco)

A. Demographic/Economic Information

According to the Census Bureau, the San Francisco Consolidated Metropolitan Statistical Area (San Francisco/Oakland/San Jose) is ranked fifth in the United States. The area has the highest concentration in the United States for technology exports and the greatest access to the internet of any U.S. region. San Francisco is a major financial center, and is home to numerous national banks, a Federal Reserve Bank, and the Pacific Stock Exchange.

The San Francisco area has three major airports, with the Oakland International airport ranked 25th in the world for air cargo. The area has two major seaports. The Port of Oakland is the fourth largest in the country, and handles 98 percent of all containerized cargo that passes under the Golden Gate Bridge.

B. BSA Filings

In 1999, San Francisco-area banks filed over 1.5 million CTR filings, with an aggregate value totaling $80 billion. These numbers exceed the combined total of CTR filings and amounts for Los Angeles and San Juan, and exceed the number of CTRs filed in New York/New Jersey. Further, area banks filed more than 18,000 SARs in 1999.

C. Law Enforcement Activity

The Financial Investigative Task Force (FITF) has been operating successfully in the Northern District of California for approximately seven years. Since 1993, the FITF has initiated 147 investigations, 20 of which developed into full money laundering investigations. The FITF will serve as the foundation of the new HIFCA Task Force. In addition, the area serves as the San Francisco Bay Area HIDTA, and home to the Pacific OCDETF.

 OBJECTIVE 2: ENHANCE USE OF FEDERAL CRIMINAL AND CIVIL ASSET FORFEITURE LAWS.

Congress has recognized that illegal proceeds are the lifeblood of large-scale criminal operations. Through forfeiture statutes, Congress has empowered law enforcement to attack criminal enterprises at their roots by seizing and forfeiting illicit proceeds involved in, and property traceable to, money laundering activity.

To enhance use of federal criminal and civil asset forfeiture laws directed at major money laundering activity, this year's Strategy proposes four priorities: (1) local HIFCA strategic planning; (2) large-scale asset forfeiture case training to federal, state, and local law enforcement; (3) aggressive investigations of assets designated by OFAC's Foreign Terrorist and Narcotics Sanctions Programs; and (4) measured evaluation of investigations and prosecutions that lead to asset forfeiture. These priorities will ensure that forfeiture is a top priority in our efforts to disrupt and dismantle major money laundering activities.

Priority 1: HIFCA Task Forces will submit action plans to intensify use of federal asset forfeiture laws.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Implement HIFCA action plans and intensify use of federal asset forfeiture in money laundering prosecutions. By October 2001, HIFCA Task Forces will submit asset forfeiture action plans to the Treasury Assistant Secretary (Enforcement) and Justice Assistant Attorney General for review and approval.

To ensure effective utilization of federal forfeiture laws in dismantling major money laundering operations, each HIFCA Task Force will design a local asset forfeiture action plan to intensify the area's use of federal forfeiture laws. HIFCA Task Forces should consult with DOJ's Asset

Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section and the Treasury's Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture to aid in design and implementation of their action plans. Each Task Force will submit its action plan to the Treasury Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Justice Assistant Attorney General for review and approval.

Action plans provide customized strategies and funding options for each HIFCA Task Force, but plans and strategies do not fight crime. Task Forces must implement their strategies and administrators must review Task Force performance to ensure that forfeiture is a priority in our fight against money laundering. On a quarterly basis, each HIFCA Task Force will prepare reports that summarize the value of assets seized and forfeited.

Priority 2: Provide asset forfeiture training that emphasizes major case development to federal, state, and local law enforcement officials.

Lead: Director, Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC); Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Develop advanced asset forfeiture training programs. By September 2001, the Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, and Director, Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, Department of the Treasury, will assess current forfeiture training programs. FLETC, in concert with the Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, and Director, Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, will develop a new advanced asset forfeiture training program by January 2002.

This year's Strategy requires continued education of federal, state, and local investigators, analysts, and prosecutors concerning asset forfeiture statutory modifications and caselaw developments. In 2000, Congress enacted extensive changes to civil asset forfeiture law in the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act of 2000 (CAFRA). The CAFRA altered the burden of proof in civil asset forfeiture cases, authorized appointment of counsel in certain circumstances, allowed for pre-trial release of property in certain circumstances, changed the requirements of the innocent owner defense, and codified Bajakajian's "grossly disproportional" test of excessive forfeitures under the Eighth Amendment's Excessive Fines Clause.[6] Sweeping legislative modifications often have chilling effects on law enforcement efforts because investigators and prosecutors are uncertain of the application of the legislative changes and prefer to take the approach of "wait and see." Advanced asset forfeiture training programs, therefore, must inform law enforcement of significant statutory changes such as CAFRA, and instruct them how to investigate and prosecute successfully under the new provisions.

Training programs must also reflect the 2001 Strategy's primary emphasis–to focus enforcement efforts against major money laundering organizations. Advanced asset forfeiture training will include extensive sessions that focus on the lessons learned from successful large-scale investigations and prosecutions such as Operations Casablanca, Dinero, and Greenback.

Training programs will teach investigators, analysts, and prosecutors how to use federal forfeiture statutes to the fullest extent and strip major money launderers of their illicit proceeds.

Priority 3: Aggressively exploit OFAC-held information about blocked assets of foreign terrorist groups and agents and of those individuals and entities appearing on the OFAC Narcotics Sanctions Programs designation lists for potential forfeiture.

Lead: Director, Office of Foreign Assets Control, Department of the Treasury; Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Pursue investigative leads developed from exploitation of information concerning assets blocked pursuant to OFAC's Narcotic Sanctions Programs or Foreign Terrorists Programs. By October 2001, create a mechanism to develop investigative leads and evidence from exploitation of information concerning assets blocked pursuant to OFAC's Narcotics Sanctions or Foreign Terrorists Programs. FLETC will incorporate this mechanism into its advanced asset forfeiture training programs.

The President, under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA)[7] and Executive Orders,[8] and Congress, through other statutes,[9] have imposed sanctions programs that prohibit named foreign terrorists, foreign drug kingpins, and their fronts and operatives from using their assets within U.S. jurisdiction or engaging in business or other financial activities with U.S.-based companies or individuals. Asset blockings are a valuable tool to fight foreign-origin threats to U.S. national security and foreign policy, including foreign criminal organizations. The 2001 Strategy requires that law enforcement step beyond the sanctions programs and use the sanctions-based asset blockings as a "force multiplier" to pursue all foreign terrorist and narcotics program asset blockings as leads for potential forfeitures through money laundering prosecutions.

Inter- and intra-agency cooperation is essential to implement this priority. OFAC, the Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, and bureau heads will cooperate to design a mechanism that identifies leads from OFAC-held information relating to blocked assets of foreign narcotics traffickers and terrorists, as well as from the OFAC administrative record in support of a designation. Criminal investigative agencies will, thereafter, pursue these leads to determine if legal cause exists to civilly or criminally forfeit the assets.

Priority 4: Develop reporting system to measure assets forfeited or seized pursuant to money laundering prosecutions.

Lead: Director, Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, Department of the Treasury;

Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Design a reporting system to report forfeiture of assets related to money laundering activity. By October 2001, establish interagency working group to develop asset forfeiture reporting system. By January 2002, establish a new asset forfeiture reporting system and implement its usage throughout the United States.

Federal law enforcement must develop a method to measure the costs and benefits of asset forfeiture strategies so that future programs can allocate resources where they are most needed and productive. A comprehensive system of measurement must distinguish between seizures and forfeitures related to money laundering. Accurate measurements will allow federal law enforcement to quantitatively measure the benefits of anti-money laundering efforts, including all "criminal contributions" that underwrite enforcement programs in the form of civil and criminal asset forfeitures.

 OBJECTIVE 3: ENHANCE INTRA-AGENCY AND INTER-AGENCY COORDINATION OF MONEY LAUNDERING INVESTIGATIONS.

Priority 1: Coordinate and consolidate existing Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) Review Teams in every U.S. Attorney's Office, and develop SAR Review Teams where they do not exist.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Implement SAR review teams in all federal districts. By September 2001, contact United States Attorneys and obtain commitments to create SAR review teams where they do not exist, and increase the participation of additional federal agencies in existing SAR review teams. By January 2002, United States Attorneys should create SAR review teams in every district, and report on the efforts of the new and existing SAR teams.

SARs provide valuable information that enables law enforcement to identify and target money launderers, other criminals, and forfeitable assets. However, the evidence necessary to advance a money laundering investigation usually is not immediately evident in the SAR, and finding relevant information, as well as identifying the wider trends and patterns hidden in the SARs requires patient analysis.

SAR review teams evaluate all SARs filed in their respective federal district. Teams are composed of an Assistant United States Attorney and representatives from federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies. Various districts have successfully implemented SAR Review Teams that assess SARs to coordinate investigations, set and assess investigative strategies, and generate cases.

FinCEN and law enforcement agencies are currently developing and testing state-of-the-art data mining tools. These systems will allow investigators and prosecutors to streamline and enhance the SAR review process by identifying and linking investigative leads, trends, and patterns contained in SARs. Data mining technology provides an organized investigative window of money laundering and related financial crimes that allows the user to manipulate the data to identify proactive and reactive leads. FinCEN has current contracts with experts in the data mining field to design these advanced analytical tools, and will provide demonstrations of these systems to U.S. Attorneys and investigators as soon as the modules are developed.

Based on past SAR Review Team successes and FinCEN's technological advances, all United States Attorneys' Offices are strongly encouraged to implement standardized SAR Review Team programs to develop, realize, and utilize the full investigative value of SAR information.

* OBJECTIVE 4: EXPAND EFFORTS TO DISMANTLE THE BLACK MARKET PESO EXCHANGE (BMPE) MONEY LAUNDERING SYSTEM.

The Black Market Peso Exchange (BMPE) is the largest money laundering system in the Western Hemisphere. Colombian narcotics traffickers are the primary users of BMPE, repatriating up to $5 billion annually to Colombia.

The BMPE is a system that converts and launders illicit drug proceeds from dollars to Colombian pesos. For example, dealers sell Colombian drugs in the U.S. in return for U.S. dollars. The dealers thereafter sell the U.S. currency to a Colombian black market peso broker's agent in the United States. In return for the dealer's U.S. currency deposit, the BMPE agent deposits the agreed-upon equivalent[10] of Colombian pesos into the cartel's bank account in Colombia. At this point, the cartel has successfully converted its drug dollars into pesos, and the Colombian broker and his agent now assume the risk for integrating the drug dollars into the U.S. banking system. The broker funnels the money into financial markets by selling the dollars to Colombian importers, who then purchase U.S. goods that are often smuggled into Colombia to avoid taxes and customs duties.

In response to BMPE, the Treasury Department has formed the BMPE Working Group, which unites law enforcement, banking, and other agencies in an effort to dismantle the BMPE system. The BMPE Working Group continues to develop comprehensive plans to coordinate all available investigative, regulatory, and trade policy tools to form a multi-faceted attack against BMPE.

Priority 1: Work with the private sector to conclude and implement a comprehensive "best practices" BMPE anti-money laundering system.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Implement the private sector's comprehensive "best practices" BMPE anti-money laundering compliance program. By October 2001, coordinate a workshop for industry leaders to finalize their anti-money laundering "best practices" compliance program and begin to develop an implementation strategy. By January 2001, the BMPE anti-money laundering "best practices" compliance program will be implemented, with quarterly reports of activities to the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

[10] The currency transaction rate is discounted because the broker and his agent must assume the risk of evading BSA reporting requirements when they later place the dollars into the U.S. financial system.

The BMPE functions when peso brokers are able to purchase U.S. manufactured trade goods with illicit proceeds. A major step towards dismantling the BMPE is to restrict these transactions so that they cannot occur. Therefore, law enforcement must intensify its efforts to educate the business community about BMPE activity, especially those industries that are particularly vulnerable to BMPE.

In June 2000, the Departments of Treasury and Justice personnel briefed senior industry officials on the operations of the BMPE and discussed the vulnerability of the industries to the BMPE system. Treasury and Justice offered to host three workshops that would assist the industries to develop BMPE anti-money laundering compliance programs along with best practices guidelines designed to minimize the likelihood that their products will be sold on the black market in Colombia. Following the first two meetings, industry officials prepared and circulated a BMPE anti-money laundering compliance program draft. The 2001 Strategy tasks the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement to continue these efforts by hosting the third private industry workshop to finalize the "best practices" document and to oversee and monitor the implementation of its provisions.

Priority 2: Identify and report patterns and trends in the BMPE.

Lead: Assistant Commissioner for Investigations, U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Identify and track patterns and trends of suspected BMPE funds into the financial system, and focus enforcement efforts accordingly. By January 2002, prepare a report that outlines trends and patterns in BMPE, and prepare training programs to educate industry and enforcement officials accordingly. Conduct BMPE outreach and training to industries that may receive suspicious payments, and expand effort to reach out to and educate free trade zone merchants operating in the U.S. about the BMPE and due diligence to avoid involvement in money laundering operations.

In the BMPE, the peso broker must arrange for the placement of street currency into the financial system or for the bulk shipment of the currency out of the United States. The Money Laundering Coordination Center (MLCC), operated by the U.S. Customs Service, conducts strategic analyses of operational and financial intelligence to identify the most common methods for the placement of narcotics proceeds into the financial system. MLCC also identifies specific businesses and individuals that are suspected of participating in the BMPE, and refers the information to the appropriate field office for investigation.

The MLCC continues to track wire transfers of accounts that belong to suspected violators. Customs, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN), United States Postal Inspection

Service (USPIS), IRS-CI, DEA, FBI and other members of the BMPE Working Group[11] will continue to analyze operational intelligence, postal money order data, SARs, and other BSA information in efforts to identify BMPE transaction patterns of money laundering organizations. The BMPE Working Group members will continue their outreach to alert both the business and banking industry of emerging trends in the BMPE and emerging money laundering systems.

Priority 3: Develop a training program to enable law enforcement to identify, understand, investigate and prosecute BMPE schemes.

Lead: Director, Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, (FLETC); Director, Money Laundering Communications Center (MLCC), U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Deliver BMPE training to law enforcement officials to ensure the complete investigation of these international schemes. By January 2002, FLETC will develop a training module on BMPE. The training will focus on schemes, culpable parties, and specific investigative techniques. By February 2002, FLETC will schedule its training sessions, with principle focus on the HIFCA Task Forces.

BMPE is a unique and complex scheme that utilizes legitimate United States companies to facilitate the transfer of drug proceeds from the U.S., where the profits are generated, to Columbia, where the cartel owners reside. Evidence exists that indicates that legitimate U.S. companies knowingly have sold goods to individuals and businesses involved in BMPE operations. Successful investigations should target all facets of the scheme, to include the drug dealer, the peso broker, money service businesses, and U.S. individuals and businesses, where appropriate.

Priority 4: Enhance website that promotes law enforcement's fight against the BMPE money laundering system.

Lead: Assistant Commissioner for Investigations, U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Enhance and maintain a web site that: (1) promotes awareness of the BMPE money laundering system; (2) lists the Colombian financial institutions authorized to issue payments for U.S. trade goods; and (3) links users to the OFAC website's list of Specially Designated Narcotics Traffickers (SDNTs) of Colombia with which U.S. persons are prohibited from dealing. By November 2001, design and implement a BMPE web site.

Law enforcement must relay BMPE information and news to many small companies in addition to industry giants. Businesses and enforcement officials need up-to-date access to lists of Colombian companies that lawfully may engage in international commerce with U.S. businesses. An enhanced BMPE web site, hosted by U.S. Customs Service at www.customs.gov, will provide this much-needed access.

[11] The BMPE Working Group is discussed and defined supra at Goal 1, Objective 4.

REV_00197219

Priority 5: Conclude multinational study with the governments of Colombia, Aruba, Panama, and Venezuela in the cooperative fight against the BMPE.

Lead: Director, Office of Policy Development, Department of the Treasury (OPD).

Goals: By October 2001, the BMPE Experts Working Group will prepare a report that recommends initiatives to each participating government. During October 2001, the multinational BMPE Experts Working Group will produce a report that recommends BMPE initiatives to participating governments.

On August 29, 2000, at the initiative of Treasury Enforcement, representatives from Colombia, Aruba, Panama, Venezuela, and the U.S. signed the "Black Market Peso Exchange System Multilateral Working Group Directive." On October 21, 2000, the BMPE Task Force participated in the first meeting of the Experts Working Group, a 30-member group created by the BMPE Multilateral Directive. The members of the Experts Working Group discussed how the BMPE money laundering system affects each of the respective countries, developed a common understanding of how the BMPE system operates, learned how BMPE transactions are documented, examined loopholes in existing laws, and discussed methods to improve international cooperation.

The multinational BMPE study undertaken by Colombia, Aruba, Panama, Venezuela, and the U.S has enhanced the cooperation between these governments in combating the BMPE. Although much of the narcotics-related money laundering involves Colombia, Colombia does not bear the brunt of the BMPE alone. All of the governments participating in the study are directly affected by the BMPE, and the study has already led to improved communication and cooperation, including enhanced support for law enforcement efforts.

During the remainder of 2001, the United States will continue to participate in the Experts Working Group and contribute to the drafting of a report that concludes and recommends policies that will improve international cooperation in efforts to combat and dismantle the BMPE.

* OBJECTIVE 5: ENACT LEGISLATION TO ADDRESS DEFICIENCIES IN CURRENT MONEY LAUNDERING LAWS.

Although the 2001 Strategy mandates vigorous enforcement of existing money laundering laws, the Strategy also recognizes that the dynamic nature of money laundering activity requires the U.S. to periodically reexamine existing statutory schemes. The Departments of Treasury and Justice will seek to enhance law enforcement's ability to bring money launderers to justice by working with Congress to implement legislation that addresses the deficiencies in current money laundering statutes.

Priority 1: Work to introduce legislation to address deficiencies in current federal money laundering statutes.

REV_00197220

Lead: Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice; Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;

Goals: Enact Money Laundering legislation that addresses current deficiencies in federal money laundering law. Submit a draft bill to Congress by October 2001.

The fight against money laundering should enjoy broad bipartisan support. The Under Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative Affairs, will work in close coordination with the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, to submit a money laundering bill–the Money Laundering Act of 2001—which will include, but not be limited to, the below provisions that will address deficiencies in the current federal money laundering statutes, and enhance criminal money laundering enforcement. The Money Laundering Act of 2001 would:

- criminalize the act of smuggling bulk cash in amounts exceeding $10,000 out of the country, with punishments including imprisonment and forfeiture;
- create a new criminal offense to prohibit the couriering and transporting of more than $10,000 of currency in interstate commerce with knowledge that the money is derived from an unlawful source;[12]
- create a criminal offense that prohibits the laundering of criminally derived proceeds through foreign banks by making it illegal for a person in the United States to send criminal proceeds abroad and launder them in a foreign bank; and
- make foreign public corruption a predicate offense under U.S. money laundering laws.[13]

The Department of Justice has submitted a comprehensive money laundering draft bill for interagency review through the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) process. The Department of the Treasury has cleared the bill and generally supports its provisions. The Departments of Justice and the Treasury will work together to introduce this legislation, and if enacted, will seek to implement these new authorities.

[12] The federal circuits have disagreed whether the interstate transportation of illicit proceeds constitutes a financial transaction, as required under 18 U.S.C. § 1956. Compare United States v. Reed, 77 F.3d 139 (6th Cir. 1996) with United States v. Gallo, 927 F.2d 815 (5th Cir. 1991).

[13] Foreign official corruption is not a per se predicate offense for money laundering under current U.S. law, nor does the United States have express authority to seize and forfeit proceeds derived from foreign official corruption under the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act of 2000. Current legal provisions hinder law enforcement from pursuing misappropriated foreign assets and preventing criminals from laundering the proceeds of foreign public corruption. These hindrances undermine U.S. efforts to promote democratic institutions and healthy international economic development.

GOAL 2: IMPROVE THE CAPACITY TO MEASURE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

REV_00197222

GOAL 2:

IMPROVE THE CAPACITY TO MEASURE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

Federal law enforcement must be able to objectively measure the effectiveness of its law enforcement efforts. If anti-money laundering initiatives are not making a significant difference in disrupting money-laundering activity, principles of good government mandate that law enforcement discontinue those efforts.

To evaluate our anti-money laundering initiatives, we must compare current results against past efforts. At the very least, the government should be able to report on a regular basis the significance and number of money laundering investigations, prosecutions, and convictions; the number of seizures; the value of property forfeited in all money laundering related cases; and the criminal market-place price of laundering money. Law enforcement must use this data to compare past and present performance and determine whether progress is being made in combating money laundering. These data collections will further provide law enforcement with a clearer picture of money laundering "hot spots," which will guide policy decisions on the proper allocations of resources, and, at the same time, identify "gaps" where money laundering investigations should be enhanced or prioritized.

The 2001 Strategy, therefore, tasks the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) to (1) develop a comprehensive information system that collects relevant data from law enforcement agencies with respect to money laundering enforcement efforts, and (2) produce reports that guide policy makers in evaluating the effectiveness of law enforcement's efforts to combat money laundering activity.

* OBJECTIVE 1: INSTITUTIONALIZE SYSTEMS TO MEASURE SUCCESS OF MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS AND RESULTS.

Priority 1: Devise and implement a uniform money laundering case reporting system.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice;

Goals: Develop a uniform case reporting mechanism to be used by all federal law enforcement agencies to record information that relates to money laundering investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and forfeitures. By September 2001, the Director of FinCEN, the Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, and the Director, Bureau of Justice Statistics, will convene a high-level working group to establish standardized reporting procedures for each federal law enforcement agency involved in money laundering investigations and prosecutions.

Federal law enforcement agencies have no standardized means of reporting money-laundering case or investigation information. Records are not organized in ways that promote timely reporting and interagency review. However, accountability and meaningful review require accurate, timely, and uniform production of information.

FinCEN and the Bureau of Justice Statistics are ideally positioned to create a money laundering case reporting system. The Director of FinCEN, under the supervision of the Under Secretary for Enforcement, in conjunction with the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will convene a high-level working group to establish standardized reporting procedures for each federal law enforcement agency for money laundering investigations and prosecutions. However, the reporting procedure will not only report the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, seizures, and forfeitures related to money laundering, but also develop a standardized method that determines the significance of each case. Our reports must be weighted to reflect the size and sophistication of organizations successfully dismantled, or for example, whether we are convicting heads of organizations, professional money launderers, or low-level smurfs. Similarly, law enforcement must assess the complexity of the investigative effort that was needed to achieve a successful result. A comprehensive, but readily applicable array of criteria must be developed to give law enforcement the most accurate picture of its efforts.

Developing an accurate uniform information system is a top priority of the 2001 Strategy, and FinCEN will identify the necessary investment in technology and infrastructure to put these uniform reporting mechanisms in place as quickly as possible to include the resource requirements of affected agencies.

Priority 2: Research other methods for determining the effectiveness of Federal anti-money laundering efforts, including whether law enforcement is impacting the cost of laundering money.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Money Laundering Coordination Center, U.S. Customs Service;
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Develop methodology for determining the baseline commission percentage for laundering money. By October 2001, the director of FinCEN and the Chief of Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section will establish an interagency group to develop a model to determine the baseline commission percentage for laundering money, so that this figure can be tracked over time.

Law enforcement agencies know from undercover work and experience in money laundering investigations that money launderers generally receive a percentage of the funds laundered. Some evidence suggests that the cost of laundering money currently ranges from 8% to 20% of principal. If law enforcement's efforts to combat money laundering are successful, the criminal marketplace should reflect that success as professional money launderers demand higher rates of commission. Thus, one way to determine the effectiveness of anti-money laundering efforts is whether the cost of laundering money is increasing. The 2001 Strategy tasks FinCEN to explore additional criminal marketplace costs and develop a comprehensive model of the professional money launderer's price of doing business.

Priority 3: Ensure that federal law enforcement agencies provide feedback to FinCEN on the use of SARs and other BSA information.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Require upper level supervision to ensure that law enforcement provides feedback to FinCEN regarding the utility of BSA-related information. By October 2001, FinCEN will meet with the federal law enforcement bureaus that receive FinCEN reports to assess (i) how the enforcement bureaus are providing feedback to FinCEN, (ii) any problems or issues the bureaus have in this area, and (iii) methods to resolve these problems.

Federal law requires financial institutions to submit currency transaction reports (CTRs) and suspicious activity reports (SARs) to FinCEN. In 2000, FinCEN received and processed 12 million CTRs and 125,000 SARs. FinCEN is tasked with organizing these reports in a manner that assists law enforcement in conducting financial crimes investigations. Law enforcement can access the reports to link banks, customers, accounts, and transactions, and aid them in coordinating investigations, assessing strategies, and generating cases. FinCEN must ensure that BSA-related material is being utilized effectively. However, without feedback from the agencies about "if," "how," and "when" the information is being used, FinCEN cannot evaluate or change its programs to fit the needs of law enforcement.

The 2001 Strategy directs FinCEN to continue current efforts to obtain feedback from law enforcement agency users. FinCEN will track law enforcement usage and utility of automated queries of BSA-related data as well as FinCEN's analytical reports. If law enforcement personnel do not respond after initial inquiries, the Director of FinCEN will request feedback directly from the appropriate law enforcement agency head. If the agency head does not respond to the FinCEN Director, the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will seek and obtain the required information. FinCEN will coordinate this data and provide appropriate feedback information to federal financial supervisory agencies as needed.

Priority 4: Develop analytic tools to identify money-laundering trends.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN); Assistant Commissioner for Investigations, U.S. Customs Service.

REV_00197225

Goals: Implement software solutions to assist in the extraction of trend and pattern information from the national Suspicious Activity Report database. By October 2001, FinCEN will complete the design, development and implementation of a system capable of identifying geographically based trends and patterns in financial transactions reported as suspicious by the nation's financial industry.

Relevant information must be cultivated to determine "hot spot" money laundering areas–those areas where anti-money laundering activities can have the greatest impact. This information is needed to determine the appropriate allocation of resources.

The criminal activity of money laundering, particularly laundering undertaken by organized criminal groups, those engaged in large-scale tax evasion, and those that divert public funds in other countries, usually involves complex financial transactions that are conducted along convoluted pathways across increasingly broad geographic areas. Improved understanding of the money laundering environment is essential (1) to identify the most serious money laundering threats; (2) to predict possible directions in which money laundering methods may evolve (often tied to advances in technology), (3) to measure the effectiveness in law enforcement and regulatory efforts to shut off or slow down the movement of criminal proceeds, and (4) to determine "hot spot" money laundering areas to guide policy makers in determining the appropriate allocation of resources.

Federal law enforcement agencies historically have had little success in identifying trends and patterns in money laundering because the available data has been geared more to the identification of investigative subjects than to the methods, techniques and pathways supporting illicit financial transactions. Implementation of the Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) requirement in 1996, however, created an opportunity to begin to study seriously the trends and patterns in money laundering. SARs contain detailed information about suspicious activity, and most importantly, a narrative section in which the filer can detail why they viewed the reported transaction as unusual.

During FY-2000, FinCEN began development of a system that arranges information contained within the national SAR database into an understandable set of derivative databases that are more easily accessible for analysis. The prototype system will make it possible to construct trends and patterns in organized criminal financial activity by pinpointing the geographic scope of the activity, defining the nature of the activity, and building a profile of the subjects involved in the activity.

Further development of the prototype system is necessary, especially in the areas of improving user interface and generating a fully developed series of automated reports to assist in the trend and pattern analysis of large-scale, complex money laundering activity.

Priority 5: Review the costs and resources devoted to anti-money laundering efforts to allow for inform budget allocations.

REV_00197226

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Management, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General for Administration, Department of Justice; Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

Goals: Develop a comprehensive budget review of resources devoted to anti-money laundering programs, and ensure that these resources are most appropriately and effectively used. By October 2001, the Departments of Treasury and Justice, in coordination with the Office of Management and Budget, will establish a high-level working group to include all elements of federal government that have a role in anti-money laundering programs to identify enforcement-related expenses.

Efforts to determine the effectiveness of money laundering initiatives must include a review of law enforcement costs. To capture the costs of enforcement, we will create an interagency working group that will develop a uniform system that identifies costs through timely collection of data relating to money laundering enforcement. This information will guide policy makers, who must review current spending levels and determine if those levels are consistent with the goals and objectives expressed in the 2001 Strategy.

GOAL 3: PREVENT MONEY LAUNDERING ACTIVITY THROUGH COOPERATIVE PUBLIC-PRIVATE EFFORTS AND NECESSARY REGULATORY MEASURES.

REV_00197228

GOAL 3:

PREVENT MONEY LAUNDERING ACTIVITY THROUGH COOPERATIVE PUBLIC-PRIVATE EFFORTS AND NECESSARY REGULATORY MEASURES.

In addition to the Goal 1 component of aggressive enforcement, the 2001 Strategy emphasizes prevention. Efforts to prevent money laundering must include an effective regulatory regime and close cooperation between the public and private sectors to deny money launderers easy access to the financial sector.

In creating and implementing effective regulatory procedures, policy makers must balance the needs of law enforcement against the compliance costs and privacy interests of the financial industry and the public. At the very least, Treasury must ensure that the information required to be reported is being effectively utilized for investigative purposes. With the implementation of Goal 2, law enforcement will continually measure the effectiveness of its programs, and evaluate how to refine regulations to increase regulatory benefits and decrease regulatory burdens.

All regulations and guidance procedures that the government proposes must be reasonable and cost-effective. Government must renew its commitment to balance the value of reported information with the cost of compliance and privacy concerns. Therefore, to design and implement an effective and efficient preventative program, the government must (1) examine the efficacy of existing reporting obligations, (2) enhance the ability of U.S. financial institutions to defend against money laundering, including through the use of foreign correspondent banks, (3) expand, as necessary, the types of financial institutions that are subject to BSA reporting requirements, and (4) increase the usefulness of information that financial institutions report to law enforcement and federal financial supervisory agencies.

* OBJECTIVE 1: EXAMINE THE EFFICACY OF EXISTING REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

The Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) imposes requirements on financial institutions to report currency transactions over $10,000 and transactions of a suspicious nature. This information is intended to assist law enforcement in their money laundering investigations. Reporting requirements, however, impose costs on the financial sector. The 2001 Strategy recognizes that the United States must be sensitive to these added costs. To this end, Treasury Enforcement must obtain accurate information on actual costs of compliance imposed on financial institutions. Our policy makers must be able to rely on accurate data, and evaluate whether the benefits of regulation justify the costs imposed. The 2001 Strategy is committed to ensuring that the costs imposed on financial institutions are neither unreasonable nor overly burdensome.

Priority 1: Survey depository institutions to determine the actual costs of Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs) and Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs).

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Secretary for Financial Markets, Department of the Treasury; Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Prepare a detailed report regarding the CTR and SAR reporting costs imposed on depository institutions, including large, medium, and small sized institutions. By February 2002, the Department of the Treasury will prepare a survey that will be posted on federal bank regulators' and FinCEN's websites.

The 2001 Strategy tasks the Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group[14] to work with FinCEN and federal bank regulators to develop a survey to determine the costs of federal regulatory compliance imposed on large, medium, and small-scale depository institutions. The creators of the survey must ensure an appropriate statistical sample of the financial industry and distribute the surveys accordingly. Because such a survey may impose significant costs to disseminate, FinCEN and the federal bank regulators will prepare a web-based version, which institutions can access on all of the agencies' websites.

Priority 2: Work with the financial sector to increase utilization of existing Currency Transaction Report (CTR) filing exemptions for low-risk financial transactions.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Secretary for Financial Markets, Department of the Treasury; Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Increase utilization of current CTR filing exemptions. By November 2001, FinCEN will consult with the Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group to develop a methodology to increase usage of current CTR filing exemptions.

The Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) requires certain financial institutions to preserve specified transaction and account records, and file CTRs for currency transactions of more than $10,000 with the Department of the Treasury.[15] In 1994, Congress enacted legislation to reduce the number of CTRs filed by exempting certain low-risk transactions, including currency transactions conducted by state government agencies or other financial institutions, entities on major stock exchanges, and "qualified business customers" who operate cash intensive businesses and make frequent cash deposits.[16] Many entities in the financial sector, however, continue to report exempted transactions.

[14] The Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group is chaired by the Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury. It is co-chaired by the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, the Director of FinCEN, and a representative of the financial sector. Congress created the group to act as a liaison between law enforcement and the private sector regarding BSA-related reporting information. See Pub. L. 102-550, Title XV, Subtitle F, § 1564, 106 Stat. 4073 (1992).

[15] See 31 C.F.R. 103.22; 31 U.S.C. § 5313.

[16] See 31 U.S.C. § 5313(d) – (g) (providing mandatory CTR-filing exemptions including transactions between a depository institutions, state or federal deposits, and deposits by any business or category of businesses that have little or no value for law enforcement purposes, and discretionary exemptions including "qualified business customers").

REV_00197230

The Treasury Department must work to educate the financial sector about CTR-exempt transactions. FinCEN estimates that if financial institutions complied with current transaction exemptions, annual CTR filings would be reduced by at least 30 percent, substantially decreasing the burden imposed on the financial sector, FinCEN, and FinCEN's customers. Moreover, there is no reason to report cash transactions that have no value to law enforcement. If financial institutions know about the transaction exemptions, we must work with them to determine why they are not taking advantage of the exemptions, and develop mechanisms that will enable them to change their reporting systems so that exempted transactions are not reported to the Treasury Department.

Priority 3: Survey financial sector regarding the possible expansion of currency transaction reporting exemptions.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Assistant Secretary for Financial Markets, Department of the Treasury;
Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Submit a report that outlines the financial industry's recommendations for further CTR filing exemptions. By October 2001, FinCEN will meet with the Bank Secrecy Act Advisor Group to examine possible additional categories of CTR filing exemptions.

Each year, FinCEN receives over 12 million currency transaction reports (CTRs). This volume places a huge burden on the financial sector, FinCEN, and FinCEN's customers. Millions of these reports, however, are of little value to law enforcement because they are low-risk transactions and subject to CTR filing exemptions.

FinCEN has published a temporary rule, which went into effect last year, that would expand the types of accounts that may be exempted from CTR reporting. Efforts should be made to encourage banks to use this rule, and in addition, FinCEN will meet with financial sector representatives to examine additional categories of CTR filing exemptions for low-risk transactions. CTR reduction is a priority and we must further reduce CTR filings without exempting those that have criminal investigative value.

* OBJECTIVE 2: WORK TO EXPAND TYPES OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS SUBJECT TO EFFECTIVE BANK SECRECY ACT REQUIREMENTS AS NECESSARY.

Previous National Money Laundering Strategies identified the fact that depository institutions are subject to more stringent BSA requirements than other types of financial institutions as a weakness in the anti-money laundering strategy. Currently, only those institutions that come under the jurisdiction of the federal bank supervisory agencies are required to file SARs. To rectify this weakness, the 2000 Strategy called upon the Department of the Treasury to issue final rules requiring suspicious activity reporting by money services businesses (MSBs) and casinos, and to work with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in proposing rules for suspicious activity reporting by brokers and dealers in securities. The priorities below reflect the progress that has been made in this area, and reaffirm our commitment to accomplish each task.

Priority 1: Work with the SEC to propose rules for reporting suspicious activity by brokers and dealers in securities.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Securities Exchange Commission (SEC).

Goals: Issue a proposed rule and draft form for suspicious activity reporting by securities brokers and dealers (SAR-S), and begin to develop compliance guidance for the industry. Additionally, continue to educate the industry about the need to develop systems to guard against and detect money-laundering abuse by its customers. By January 2002, FinCEN will prepare and circulate for public comment a proposed rule requiring brokers and dealers in securities to file SARs, and will work with the SEC's Office of Compliance, Inspection and Examination to develop compliance guidelines for the industry. By June 2002, after review of the comments, a final rule will be issued.

FinCEN has discussed with SEC staff, self-regulatory organizations, law enforcement, and representatives from the securities industry, the measures necessary to implement an effective and practical system to detect and report suspicious transactions conducted by customers of brokers and dealers.

These organizations were predominantly of the view that because of the manner in which financial activity is conducted through brokerage firms, special rules and systems need to be applied to this industry to ensure conformity with existing examination and enforcement programs of securities regulators. Further, special rules and systems are appropriate because the securities industry generally is not utilized during the "placement" stage of a money laundering operation. However, the services and products provided by the securities industry, including (i) the efficient transfer of funds between accounts and to other financial institutions, (ii) the ability to conduct international transactions, and (iii) the liquidity of securities, do provide opportunities for money launderers to obscure and move illicit funds.

In 2000, FinCEN and the SEC met with federal banking regulators and federal and state law enforcement to discuss several key issues associated with the development of a SAR regulatory regime for broker-dealers. Thereafter, FinCEN drafted a proposed rule and, in April 2001, submitted it to the staff of the SEC for its review on technical and policy grounds. In June 2001, the SEC prepared comprehensive written comments and suggestions. FinCEN will continue to work closely with the staff of the SEC to finalize and publish a proposed SAR rule by January 2002, and publish a final rule by June 2002.

Implementation of a SAR regime for the securities industry is an extension of FinCEN's broader effort to implement a comprehensive system of suspicious activity reporting for all significant providers of financial services. FinCEN, in consultation with the SEC and the industry's selfregulatory organizations, intends to issue a proposed rule requiring SAR reporting for the securities industry, together with a draft SAR-S reporting form and compliance guidance. After the proposed rule's publication, FinCEN will hold at least two regional meetings to receive specific input on ways to make these requirements as effective as possible without imposing undue burdens on the industry or its customers. The input gained from these meetings will then be used in the preparation of the final rule, as well as the subsequent SAR guidance document.

Priority 2: Ensure that money services businesses (MSBs) are educated about their obligations under the new rules that require them to register and report suspicious activity.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Compliance Director, Small Business/Self-Employed Division, Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Goals: Accelerate implementation schedule to ensure meeting new implementation dates. By December 2001, publish final MSB registration form and proposed SAR form, and complete registration guidance materials and web site.

FinCEN has been actively addressing three challenges: (i) the complexity of the MSB industry[17] and the impact this complexity has on the implementation of the new reporting rules; (ii) the need to build the government program infrastructure to implement both rules simultaneously; and (iii) orchestrating the educational outreach program to such a diverse industry through development of forms, guidance, and other materials. To address these challenges, FinCEN has issued two rules. First, the MSB industry must register with the Department of the Treasury and, second, two classes of MSB's must report suspicious activity: (i) money transmitters; and (ii) issuers, sellers, and redeemers of money orders and travelers checks.

To ensure the rules are implemented effectively, efficiently, and cohesively, FinCEN has extended the MSB registration date to June 30, 2002, and the MSB suspicious activity reporting requirement to October 1, 2002. This will allow the industries, FinCEN, and the IRS to operate the registration system before adding the additional SAR requirements, as well as allowing the outreach campaign to continue.

FinCEN has made progress in each category through meetings with a number of industry representatives, hiring a contractor to develop the outreach campaign, holding focus groups throughout the country which developed information used to guide the creation of the rest of the education campaign, and publication of the proposed MSB registration form. Additional efforts are underway to create the necessary program and training materials, to build the various databases needed to process and house the data collected, and to work with the IRS to develop the implementation program. Development of the final MSB and proposed SAR form, as well as the website and guidance materials, will help prepare the industry for compliance. The website will contain a guide which will allow any MSB to determine whether it is subject to the BSA, and if so, how the BSA applies to that MSB and what the MSB must do to comply with the regulation.

[17] The MSB industry is comprised of more than eight multi-national corporations and 160,000 independent or local businesses across the country that serve as agents of the larger companies or offer independent products.

The Secretary of the Treasury has delegated the responsibility to the IRS to examine certain non-bank financial institutions, including MSBs, to ensure compliance with the BSA.[18] The IRS performs essential functions to administer the BSA, including identifying institutions that are subject to BSA requirements, educating them regarding their BSA obligations, and conducting BSA compliance examinations. The IRS will name an MSB liaison to FinCEN to work on MSB and SAR implementation planning by September 1, 2001, and a comprehensive MSB implementation plan regarding functions, including the hiring and training of additional staff, will be submitted by December 31, 2001.

Priority 3: Provide an additional opportunity for the industry to comment on a draft rule requiring the reporting of suspicious activity by casinos and card clubs.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Compliance Director, Small Business/Self-Employed Division, Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Goals: Issue a clarification and seek industry comments on a proposed rule requiring suspicious activity reporting for the casino and card club industries. Once the rule and form are issued, FinCEN will engage in a comprehensive outreach program with the casino and card club industries and with their state regulators, and provide revised guidance to the industry on SAR compliance issues. By December 2001, FinCEN will renotice the proposed SAR rule and invite comment on whether the standards for reporting suspicious activity are flexible and clear enough to apply to suspicious activity in a casino or card club. After considering these comments, FinCEN will finalize the SAR rule and thereafter provide outreach and guidance to the industry on these new requirements. In addition, FinCEN will publish for comment a proposed final SAR form and instructions.

On May 18, 1998, FinCEN published a proposed rule in the Federal Register that requires casinos and card clubs subject to the BSA to report suspicious transactions. The proposed standards for reporting were similar to those in effect for banks, but with a lowered threshold of $3,000. A new form was developed–Suspicious Activity Report for Casinos (SARC)–and is currently utilized by Nevada casinos, which are already subject to a state requirement to file SARCs with FinCEN.

After FinCEN issued the proposed SAR rule for casinos and card clubs, it received a significant number of written and oral comments expressing concern that the standards for reporting suspicious activity did not fully address the activities of a casino or card club. FinCEN will re-notice in December 2001 and will seek further comments, with a goal of issuing a final rule. Once the rule is finalized, FinCEN will undertake a concerted outreach effort (which will include SAR compliance guidance) with the casino and card club industries and their state regulators to assist federal authorities in ensuring compliance with these new requirements.

[18] See 31 C.F.R. § 103.46(b)(8) and Treasury Directive 15.41.

REV_00197234

* OBJECTIVE 3: INCREASE USEFULNESS OF REPORTED INFORMATION TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES AND THE FINANCIAL INDUSTRY.

Information sharing among law enforcement, regulators, and the regulated industry is crucial to the success of this country's anti-money laundering strategy. The past year has seen increased public-private sector dialogue about law enforcement's use of reported information and how the government's analysis of reported information could be made more useful not only to law enforcement, but to the financial industry itself. As noted elsewhere in the 2001 Strategy, reporting requirements impose costs on financial institutions, and thus the government must restrict its reporting requirements to that information which is useful for fighting financial crime. In 2001, FinCEN will continue its work to ensure that the SAR program operates as a collaborative effort among all the parties involved.

Priority 1: FinCEN will continue to provide information to financial institutions and law enforcement from SARs and other BSA reports concerning the utility of these reports.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Prepare and disseminate two issues of The SAR Activity Review–Trends, Tips and Issues, and implement an industry-driven survey mechanism to determine the value of the publication. By November 2001, FinCEN will publish two issues of The SAR Activity Review. In cooperation with the financial industry, FinCEN will develop a survey designed to statistically capture viable feedback on the value of the publication to the industry, and to provide financial institutions the opportunity to suggest changes in format, content, and overall objectives.

The Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group created a SAR Feedback Subcommittee, co-chaired by FinCEN and the American Bankers Association, to develop and implement a system for addressing industry interest in understanding the value of BSA information–especially SARs–to government recipients of the information. The Subcommittee is composed of representatives of the financial industry, financial regulators, law enforcement, and FinCEN.

The Subcommittee agreed to prepare and disseminate a periodic report that would address the three primary areas of concern identified in initial meetings: (i) analytic feedback on money laundering trends, patterns and methodologies; (ii) utility and usage of SARs by law enforcement; and (iii) banking industry compliance with BSA requirements. The Subcommittee agreed that the report, The SAR Activity Review–Trends, Tips and Patterns, would initially be published twice a year with an ultimate goal of up to four issues annually. The first issue was published in October 2000, and the second issue was released in June 2001.

Financial industry representatives, federal regulators and federal law enforcement are expected to continue to actively participate in the Working Group. FinCEN will continue to coordinate the collection of SAR use and utility information from Treasury participants, including the Customs Service, Secret Service, and Internal Revenue Service. The Department of Justice, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will continue to contribute to this work.

Priority 2: The federal bank regulatory agencies will continue to identify and implement enhancements to their examination procedures where necessary to address the ever changing nature of money laundering.

Lead: All Federal Bank Regulators.

Goals: Ensure that anti-money laundering supervision is risk-focused, with increased emphasis on identifying those institutions or practices that are most susceptible to money laundering. Each federal bank supervisory agency will continue to review existing examination procedures and, when necessary, revise, develop and implement new examination procedures consistent with the goal identified above. By October 2001, the OTS will issue supplemental guidance to examiners based on its analysis of the efforts of other agencies.

In September 2000, the OCC issued its updated Bank Secrecy Act/Anti-Money Laundering Examination Handbook, applicable to banks supervised by the OCC and to national bank examiners. The handbook establishes examination procedures to evaluate a bank's system to detect and report suspicious activity, and identifies common money laundering schemes (e.g., structuring, the Black Market Peso Exchange, Mexican Bank Drafts, and factored third-party checks). The handbook also identifies high-risk products and services, including international correspondent banking relationships, special use accounts, and private banking, and establishes examination procedures to address these subjects. The revised examination procedures are more risk-focused, and require transaction testing at every bank examination.

As described above, the OCC initiated a program to identify banks that may be vulnerable to money laundering and to examine those banks using agency experts and specialized procedures. Some of those examinations focused on foreign correspondent banking. Banks are selected for such examinations based on, among other things, their location in high-intensity drug trafficking or money laundering areas, law enforcement leads, excessive currency flows, significant private banking activities, suspicious activity reporting and large currency transaction reporting patterns, and funds transfers or account relationships with drug source or stringent bank secrecy countries.

In addition to these efforts undertaken by the OCC, the OTS implemented examination procedures that were updated in 1999. The FDIC is also in the process of issuing revised Bank Secrecy Act/Anti-Money Laundering risk-focused examination procedures. The Federal Reserve Board has incorporated the use of Risk-Focused Supervision Modules in their examination process. These modules are intended to move the examination procedures to a more risk-focused approach, concentrating less on technical compliance and more on ensuring that banks implement effective systems to manage operational, legal, and reputational risks as they pertain to anti-money laundering efforts and BSA compliance.

Priority 3: Study how technological change impacts money-laundering enforcement.

Lead: Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice;
Director, United States Secret Service;
Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Determine if technologically advanced payment systems have been used to conduct illicit activity, and if so, plan a conference in 2002 to consider the implications of technological change on money laundering enforcement efforts and regulations. By September 2001, Treasury will form a working group to study whether technologically advanced payment systems have been used to launder dirty money. If it is determined that these systems have been used to commit illicit financial crimes, the committee will organize and sponsor a conference during 2002 to explore strategic responses.

Technology provides money launderers new avenues to disguise the source and ownership of their illicit proceeds. Internet money transfers and new payment technologies such as "e-cash,"[19] electronic purses, and smart-card based electronic payment systems, make it more difficult for law enforcement to trace money laundering activity and potentially easier for money launderers to use and store their illegitimate funds. Although the Bank Secrecy Act requires financial institutions to file reports and record transactions, the internet offers "peer to peer" transactions and other payment methods that may take place without the intermediary of a financial institution. These faceless transactions and anonymous dealings pose new challenges to law enforcement that must be addressed.

FATF has recognized the challenges of electronic money transfers and storage, and has directed countries "to pay special attention to money laundering threats inherent in new or developing technologies that may favor anonymity, and take measures, if needed, to prevent their use in money laundering schemes."[20] The Department of the Treasury will organize an interagency planning group to determine if individuals are using these methods to conduct illicit financial

[19] Electronic cash, or "e-cash," is a digital representation of money and may reside on a "smart card" or on a computer hard drive. Using special readers, users subtract stored monetary value from the card or, in the case of computer e-cash, deduct monetary value from the electronic account when a purchase is made. When the monetary value is depleted, the user discards the card or, in some systems, restores value using specially equipped machines. Telephone calling cards are the most widely used stored-value smart cards.

Smart cards can also store vast quantities of data in a highly secure manner. Smart cards can serve many functions, including credit, debit, security (building or computer access), and storage of medical or other records. Depending on the specifications determined by the issuer, e-cash value stored on a smart card may be transferred between individuals in a peer-to-peer fashion or between consumers and merchants.

activity. Thereafter, the planning group will sponsor a conference to be held during 2002 that will explore the implications of technological change on money laundering enforcement efforts. The conference will review electronic money laundering methods and recommend strategies to counter these schemes.

Priority 4: Continue to address the role of legal and accounting professionals in combating money laundering.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Educate legal and accounting professional organizations with regard to anti-money laundering efforts. Analyze within the FATF's review of the Forty Recommendations the appropriate role of these professionals in combating money laundering. By February 2002, develop a draft approach within the FATF to discuss with industry representatives and non-FATF members the role of professionals within the Forty Recommendations.

Because of the role they play as "gatekeepers" to the domestic and international financial system, professionals such as lawyers and accountants may be positioned to detect and deter money laundering or to facilitate the crime. A Gatekeepers Working Group has engaged in a first round of candid discussions with a range of professional bodies to solicit their efforts in assuring that their members and the businesses they serve are not unwittingly complicit in money laundering. The Working Group will continue its efforts to analyze existing professional legal and accounting literature and standards for their application, or adequacy, to detect and prevent money laundering. The Working Group plans an assessment of recent and planned educational efforts, especially as they relate to the complementary efforts of the FATF Working Group C on Gatekeepers.

 OBJECTIVE 4: ENHANCE THE ABILITY OF U.S. FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO DEFEND AGAINST MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGH FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT BANKS.

Priority 1: Discuss approaches to reduce the threat of money laundering posed by foreign correspondent banks.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Under Secretary for Domestic Finance, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Develop a set of "best practices" to minimize the money laundering exposure of financial institutions via the private banking and correspondent banking sectors of their business. By October 2001, Treasury Department officials and federal bank regulatory representatives will establish a federal/private working group to examine the threat of money laundering posed by foreign correspondent banks. By December 2001, the working group will make recommendations to reduce the threat of money laundering exposure to these banks.

The use by unknown foreign account holders of a U.S. financial institution's correspondent bank account at that foreigner's own bank hinders law enforcement's ability to combat money laundering. The U.S. Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations recognized this problem and issued a comprehensive staff report on the vulnerability of correspondent banking to money laundering activity. Although federal regulators exercise Bank Secrecy Act regulatory authority over a financial institution's activities in the United States, the regulators do not have the statutory authority to regulate non-U.S. operations of a foreign-licensed institution or the affiliate of a foreign-licensed institution that operates outside the United States because the BSA does not have extraterritorial application.

Law enforcement must address money laundering in all its forms. Therefore, Treasury officials and federal bank regulators will convene a working group to draft guidelines for anti-money laundering policies and procedures that relate to correspondent banking, including shell banks, offshore banks, and institutions in high-risk areas. The working group will consider current efforts to address the problem, including the New York Clearing House Association's draft guidelines concerning correspondent bank policies and the OCC's program to identify banks that may be especially vulnerable to money laundering activity.[21] The working group should also consider whether to propose that FATF address foreign correspondent banking in the revision of its Forty Recommendations.

The Department of the Treasury will continue to encourage U.S. financial institutions to review existing and future relationships with correspondent account customers to determine whether to apply heightened anti-money laundering safeguards to any of these relationships.

Priority 2: Require foreign banks that maintain a correspondent account in the U.S. to appoint an agent who is authorized to accept service of legal process.

Lead: Under Secretary for Domestic Finance, Department of the Treasury;
Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;

Goals: Issue a proposed regulation to require U.S. banks that offer correspondent accounts to foreign financial institutions to require those institutions to appoint an agent in the U.S. who is authorized to accept service of legal process. By October 2001, officials from the Department of the Treasury and federal bank regulatory agencies will draft a proposed regulation.

Federal regulatory and enforcement officials need to be able to access the records of non-U.S. citizens who move money in, out, and, through the U.S. via correspondent bank accounts that foreign banks maintain with U.S. banks. Currently, no provision requires the foreign bank to accept service of process in the U.S. for information relating to the users of its correspondent account, and the foreign banks are not required to produce records relating to those accounts as a condition of maintaining a correspondent account with a U.S. financial institution.

The Department of the Treasury and other interested agencies will draft and issue a proposed regulation to require U.S. banks that offer correspondent accounts to foreign banks to require those banks to appoint an agent in the U.S. who is authorized to accept service of legal process for information relating to the correspondent account that the foreign bank maintains in the U.S.

GOAL 4: ENHANCE PARTNERSHIPS WITH STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO FIGHT MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES.

REV_00197241

GOAL 4:

ENHANCE PARTNERSHIPS WITH STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO FIGHT MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES

The 2001 Strategy recognizes the importance of state and local government in money laundering prevention, detection, and enforcement, and draws upon this important resource in its fight against money laundering.

The Money Laundering and Financial Crimes Strategy Act of 1998 created the Financial Crime-Free Communities Support Program (C-FIC).[22] Overseen by the Department of the Treasury and administered by the Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), Office of Justice Programs (OJP), C-FIC is designed to provide technical assistance, training, and information on best practices to support state and local law enforcement efforts to detect and prevent money laundering and other financial crime activity. In FY2000, Congress appropriated $2.9 million for C-FIC, and in October 2000, Congress awarded inaugural C-FIC grants to nine different agencies throughout the country.

The Departments of the Treasury and Justice have solicited new applications from eligible candidates and intend to disperse $2.5 million in C-FIC funds by September 2001. The Departments of the Treasury and Justice will also continue to reach out to state and local partners for input on the Strategy to ensure consistency between federal, state and local priorities and programs.

* OBJECTIVE 1: PROVIDE SEED CAPITAL FOR STATE AND LOCAL COUNTER-MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS.

Priority 1: Review applications and award grants under the C-FIC program.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Director, Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), Department of Justice.

Goals: Award approximately $2.5 million in C-FIC grant funds to eligible applicants. By September 28, 2001, complete review of C-FIC applications and award the next round of C-FIC monies.

The Treasury Department, in coordination with the Justice Department, operates the C-FIC program on a competitive basis. C-FIC grants are to be used as seed money for state and local programs that seek to address money-laundering systems within their areas. State and local personnel can use grant funds, for example, to build or expand financial intelligence computer systems, train officers to investigate money-laundering activity, or hire auditors to monitor money flows in certain types of high-risk businesses. In assessing and analyzing the peer review rankings, BJA and Treasury give special preference, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. § 5354(b), to applicants who "demonstrate collaborate efforts of two or more State and local law enforcement agencies or prosecutors who have a history of Federal, State, and local cooperative law enforcement and prosecutorial efforts in responding to such criminal activity."[23]

The emphasis of C-FIC grants is to award applicants who propose a strategic and collaborative response to money laundering activity. An applicant's location in or near a HIFCA will be considered a favorable factor for a C-FIC candidate, as HIFCAs are areas that have been formally designated as areas of serious money laundering concern that merit an increased focus of federal, state, and local efforts. Although state and local programs within HIFCAs are particularly appropriate grant candidates, any qualifying state or local law enforcement agency or prosecutor's office may compete for and be eligible to receive a C-FIC grant. Applications for C-FIC grants are now available.[24]

Priority 2: Evaluate the progress of existing C-FIC grant recipients.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Director, Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), Department of Justice.

Goals: Treasury and Justice will collect information from the 2000 C-FIC recipients and evaluate the effectiveness of the program. By August 2001, BJA will collect information from each C-FIC regarding the effectiveness of the program.

Following a competitive process, the Department of the Treasury selected nine initial grantees of C-FIC funds in Fall 2000. The initial grantees and the approved use of their C-FIC monies are as follows:

San Diego Police Department: The San Diego Police Department (SDPD) applied for C-FIC monies to fund two full-time detectives to work on money laundering investigations and to participate on the existing SAR review team administered by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of California. The C-FIC-funded detectives were to communicate regularly with both the Los Angeles and Southwest border HIFCA Task Forces. The SDPD was also to use the C-FIC funds to purchase computer equipment and provide training necessary for analytical support.

San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department: The San Bernardino County, California Sheriff's Department requested C-FIC monies to fund the creation of a money laundering investigations task force unit, which functions within a regional narcotics task force. C-FIC monies were to [24] The Department of the Treasury and BJA have developed the application package for the next round of C-FIC grant funds, and posted the materials on the BJA website (www.ojp.usdoj.gov/BJA). Applications were due by July 6, 2001. It is anticipated that the Department of the Treasury will award approximately $2.5 million in C-FIC grant monies, but that no single C-FIC grant will exceed $300,000.

fund the unit's personnel costs while San Bernardino County pays for the unit's operational and administrative expenses. The unit was to target the shipment of bulk cash across the Mexican border.

New York State Police: The New York State Police applied for C-FIC funds to create a financial crimes investigation team to focus on money laundering investigations in upstate New York. The C-FIC monies were to pay for personnel expenses and cover the costs of purchasing computer support equipment. The financial crimes investigation unit was to work with State and local law enforcement agencies, regulatory agencies, and financial institutions to identify suspicious activity and to conduct preliminary investigations. The unit was to exchange information with the New York/New Jersey HIFCA Task Force, and collaborate with state regulatory and enforcement agencies.

New York Attorney General's Office: The New York Attorney General's Organized Crime Strike Force applied for C-FIC monies to commission a non-public study to analyze the major geographic money laundering problem areas within New York. The study was expected to enhance law enforcement's ability to allocate its resources in order to have the greatest deterrent effect on narcotics sales in New York.

Arizona Attorney General's Office: The Arizona Attorney General's Office requested C-FIC funds to establish a Southwest Border Money Transmitter Program to examine the domestic movement of laundered funds through money transmitters and money service businesses (MSBs). The C-FIC-funded program was to target bulk shipment of cash along the Southwest border, a primary purpose of the Southwest border HIFCA Task Force.

Texas Attorney General's Office: The Texas Attorney General's Office, Special Crimes Division requested C-FIC monies to fund a bulk currency prosecution project in order to expand the number of bulk cash smuggling investigations and prosecutions. The Texas Attorney General's project was to focus on the movement of cash through correspondent accounts, money exchanges, and armored car services.

Illinois State Police: The Illinois State Police applied for C-FIC monies to fund a money laundering intelligence and investigations support unit. The State Police was also to use C-FIC funds to finance training programs and purchase computer equipment to support the unit.

Chicago Police Department: The Chicago Police Department applied for C-FIC monies to create a money-laundering unit to develop and investigate cases for prosecution. The officers in the unit were to receive training in accounting, finance, banking, economics, real estate, computers, and business law, as needed.

Florida State Attorney's Office, 15th Judicial District (West Palm Beach): The Florida State Attorney's Office in West Palm Beach, Florida requested C-FIC grant monies to establish a task force to review Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs) in order to identify and target significant money laundering targets in the region. The task force was to share intelligence about money laundering activity with appropriate law enforcement agencies.

BJA will circulate a questionnaire to C-FIC award winners in July 2001 and January 2002 to collect information (number of arrests, indictments, seizures, and forfeitures that related to the C-FIC program) to help determine the effectiveness of the grants. The questionnaire will also measure the program's coordination and cooperation with HIFCA Task Forces.

* OBJECTIVE 2: IMPROVE COORDINATION WITH STATE AND LOCAL ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

HIFCA Task Forces, the centerpiece of the federal government's enforcement effort, are designed to include the participation of all relevant state and local enforcement, regulatory, and prosecution agencies. The 2001 Strategy, therefore, makes it a priority to ensure that state and local personnel participate as strategic members of the HIFCA Task Forces.

Priority 1: Increase involvement of state and local enforcement agencies through participation in the HIFCA Task Forces and SAR Review Teams.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
HIFCA Task Forces;
HIFCA Working Group.

Goals: Each HIFCA Task Force and SAR Review Team will expand state and local participation in money laundering investigations and prosecutions. By October 2001, each HIFCA Task Force will report to the HIFCA Working Group regarding the participation of state and local enforcement, regulatory, and prosecution agencies in the Task Force, and notify the Working Group about how the Task Force will seek to expand participation to include all relevant entities.

The active participation of state and local enforcement, regulatory, and prosecution agencies is vital to the success of federal money laundering programs. State and local officials have in-depth knowledge about the activities and persons that operate within their jurisdiction. HIFCA Task Forces and SAR Review Teams, therefore, will seek to incorporate and leverage this information and talent whenever possible.

The New York/New Jersey HIFCA Task Force already employs the talents of the New York City District Attorney's Offices and the New York State Banking regulators in its work, and is a good model of federal, state, and local cooperation and coordination.

* OBJECTIVE 3: ENHANCE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT'S ACCESS TO AND USE OF BANK SECRECY ACT (BSA) DATA.

The active participation of state and local law enforcement in accessing BSA data is crucial to their effectiveness in combating money laundering. State and local law enforcement agencies have direct access to BSA information through FinCEN's Gateway Program. This program is available to all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. It is imperative that FinCEN has the capability to control access and audit usage of the BSA information.

Priority 1: Provide the most effective and efficient methods for accessing BSA data.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Enhance law enforcement's electronic access to the BSA data in a secure environment. By December 2001, establish a prototype secure electronic link between FinCEN's Gateway Secure Outreach Web and RISS.net. Develop a plan to provide Gateway users with access to Gateway resources via the RISS.net.

Technological advances in the delivery of data requires FinCEN to evaluate new and emerging capabilities and incorporate appropriate systems to further enhance the Gateway Program. The six federally-funded Regional Information Sharing Systems whose membership is comprised of many of the FinCEN/Gateway Coordinating agencies have developed a nationwide information sharing network (RISS.net). The utility of this existing secure network, which is presently being utilized by state, local, and certain federal agencies, will enhance the Gateway Program.

Priority 2: Improve the Gateway System.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Enhance networking and audit/inspection capabilities. By January 2002, FinCEN will improve the efficiency of the networking process, add additional law enforcement databases, and conduct at least ten field inspections of Gateway users.

One of the key elements of the Gateway process allows FinCEN to alert two or more agencies about information on the same subjects of interest. This alert process provides a coordination mechanism for money laundering investigations conducted worldwide. The access to BSA-related data through the Gateway process is provided through a secure and carefully monitored system. FinCEN's managers and Gateway staff personnel audit queries through record reviews and on-site visits to ensure all inquiries are connected to actual or potential criminal violations.

Priority 3: Continue to provide training and outreach to state and local law enforcement regarding access to and utility of BSA data.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Conduct outreach to Gateway users. In October 2001, FinCEN will host a Gateway State and Local Coordinator conference. By January 2002, FinCEN will publish the first in a series of "newsletters" that educate Gateway users of system changes, trends in usage, success stories, etc....

REV_00197246

Through training for state and local law enforcement officers, FinCEN will re-enforce the importance of BSA-related information available to them and demonstrate how that information is accessed, analyzed, and utilized in money laundering investigations. In-service or re-training is also critical to Gateway users to keep them informed of system changes and money laundering trends. The "newsletters" will serve as an interim communication medium to keep users current on relevant issues.

GOAL 5: STRENGTHEN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION TO COMBAT THE GLOBAL PROBLEM OF MONEY LAUNDERING.

REV_00197248

GOAL 5:

STRENGTHEN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION TO COMBAT THE GLOBAL PROBLEM OF MONEY LAUNDERING

Law enforcement cannot limit its fight against money laundering to domestic efforts. Money launderers know that illegitimate funds can escape detection and forfeiture more easily when dispersed from country to country. Computer technology has provided the means to transfer funds quickly, easily, and silently, and offshore banks are increasingly accessible, offering tax havens and secrecy in exchange for small service fees.

Money launderers also take advantage of the laws and protections of foreign states to escape investigation and prosecution. Various nation-states have critical deficiencies in their anti-money laundering regimes: they have not enacted laws that prohibit money laundering; they do not aggressively enforce existing anti-money laundering legislation; or they fail to cooperate internationally to investigate and prosecute money launderers at large.

These global problems require a global response. The 2001 Strategy mandates that the United States (1) enhance international cooperation and effectiveness in investigating and prosecuting money launderers, (2) continue its active role in FATF and other regional task force bodies, (3) spearhead efforts to provide technical assistance, as appropriate, to non-cooperating countries and territories who have shown a willingness to change their practices, (4) work with international financial institutions to enhance anti-money laundering efforts, and (5) take unilateral action, as necessary, against money laundering threats.

* OBJECTIVE 1: ENHANCE INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AND EFFECTIVENESS IN INVESTIGATING AND PROSECUTING MONEY LAUNDERERS.

To successfully investigate and prosecute persons involved in complex, transnational money laundering schemes, U.S. law enforcement agencies must work in close coordination with their foreign counterparts. For example, in the early 1990's, the DEA, IRS-CI, and the FBI engaged in Operation Dinero, a multi-year undercover investigation that focused on the drug money laundering operations of the Cali cartels. U.S. law enforcement, in conjunction with agencies in Canada, the United Kingdom, Spain, and Italy, seized over $90 million in cash and other property, nine tons of cocaine, and arrested 116 people as a result of the investigation. Similarly, during Operation Green Ice, which also targeted the financial infrastructure of the Cali drug cartel, British and Canadian law enforcement authorities assisted U.S. Customs, DEA, and IRS-CI in conducting the criminal money laundering and drug investigation. Law enforcement authorities from Italy, Colombia, Spain, Costa Rica, and the Cayman Islands also participated. As a result of the investigation, law enforcement officials seized approximately $66 million in U.S. currency and property, nearly 14,000 pounds of cocaine, 16 pounds of heroin, and arrested over 250 people.

The 2001 Strategy recognizes that this type of international cooperation and coordination is critical in the global fight against money laundering. Although foreign law enforcement officials do cooperate with each other on a case-by-case basis, the United States should enhance international law enforcement efforts by (i) seeking to establish model international financial task forces, (ii) considering coverage of money laundering offenses as a key objective in setting priorities for extradition and mutual legal assistance treaty negotiations, and (iii) stressing the importance of asset forfeiture as a tool to combat money laundering.

Priority 1: Review key existing extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties and recommend that coverage of money laundering offenses be considered an important objective in assessing future treaty negotiations.

Lead: Office of International Affairs, Department of Justice;
Office of the Legal Advisor, Department of State.

Goals: Complete a report that identifies key U.S. extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties that do not provide for extradition of money launderers or full cooperation in money laundering investigations. By October 2001, identify priority countries whose extradition or mutual legal assistance relationships with the United States have impeded money laundering investigations or extradition of money launderers.

Successful international cooperation in money laundering prosecutions and investigations requires that the United States ensure extradition of money launderers and mutual legal assistance on money laundering matters in bilateral treaty agreements. Appropriate officials from the Departments of State, Justice, and Treasury will work to (i) identify the priority countries from whom extradition or mutual legal assistance is needed in support of money laundering investigations and prosecutions, (ii) review the treatment of money laundering offenses under any applicable treaties with these countries, and (iii) provide this information to the Department of State, with a recommendation that the Department of State consider coverage of money laundering offenses as an important objective in assessing USG priorities for amending existing treaties or negotiating new ones.

Priority 2: Enhance international cooperation of money laundering investigations through equitable sharing of seized assets.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Enhanced cooperation in international money laundering investigations through increased utilization of the international asset sharing provisions under federal law. By September 2001, establish an interagency working group to explore how international cooperation in money laundering investigations can be enhanced by pursuing international equitable sharing of assets.

REV_00197250

Sharing the proceeds of forfeited assets among nations enhances international cooperation by creating an incentive for countries to work together in combating international drug trafficking and money laundering. The value of sharing confiscated proceeds is acknowledged in the United Nations Convention Against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances. Article 5, paragraph 5(b)(ii), provides that parties may enter into agreements on a regular or case-by-case basis to share the proceeds or property derived from drug trafficking and money laundering.[25] One commentator noted: "Such asset-sharing agreements may be among the most potent inducements to international cooperation and may result in significant enhancements of law enforcement capabilities in producing and transit states."[26]

The United States Code provides the United States government with the authority to transfer forfeited assets to a foreign country.[27] As a general rule, the amount of the forfeited funds shared with the cooperating foreign country should reflect the proportional contribution of the foreign government in the specific case that gave rise to forfeiture relative to the assistance provided by other foreign and domestic law enforcement participants.

From its inception in 1989 through December 2000, the international asset-sharing program administered by the Department of Justice has resulted in the forfeiture by the United States of $389,229,323, of which $169,397,853 has been shared with 26 foreign governments that cooperated and assisted in the investigations. Since 1994, the Department of the Treasury shared over $21 million with seventeen different countries. The Department of Justice should continue and seek to expand their international asset sharing programs. Likewise, the 2001 Strategy requires that the Department of the Treasury make more productive use of its ability to encourage international cooperation through international asset sharing.

The Strategy also recognizes the FATF's 2001 Annual Report, which reveals that a significant number of the United States' closest allies have not fully implemented the FATF recommendations concerning asset forfeiture or international asset sharing.[28] The United States, therefore, should model the benefits of international asset sharing and encourage our allies to implement legislation that allows them to do the same.

Priority 3: Enhance mechanisms for the international exchange of financial intelligence through support and expansion of membership in the Egmont Group of financial intelligence units (FIUs) and report developments to U.S. law enforcement.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Promote and expand recognition, membership, and participation in the Egmont Group, and report to U.S. law enforcement on Egmont developments and trends analysis. By December 2001, promote the recognition and use of FIUs by U.S. law enforcement agencies through an awareness campaign. By January 2002, FinCEN will connect at least seven new FIUs to the Egmont Secure Web. FinCEN will continue to reach out to new Egmont Group members and priority countries to encourage the introduction of anti-money laundering legislation, and support the development of financial intelligence units in thee countries. FinCEN will also expand the number of investigative information exchanges via the financial intelligence unit network, consistent with the Egmont Group principles. FinCEN will report to U.S. law enforcement on new Egmont partners and the availability of information through the Egmont process.

One of the most important developments in the implementation of international counter-money laundering standards has been the successful cooperation between and among FIUs. These entities are created to receive international suspicious activity reports (required under their respective domestic laws), analyze financial information related to law enforcement activity, disseminate information to domestic enforcement agencies, and exchange information internationally.

There are now fifty-three financial intelligence units participating in the "Egmont Group" of FIUs. As an active participant, FinCEN arranged 159 information exchanges in 2000. FinCEN is currently in the process of arranging training initiatives with many of the new FIUs and has already taken a lead role in the first Egmont-sponsored training seminar in 2001.

FIUs can play a critical role in ongoing investigations and in the effective implementation of anti-money laundering measures. FinCEN will initiate a program to better inform law enforcement agencies of the opportunity to obtain financial intelligence from our Egmont partners. FinCEN will report to U.S. law enforcement on a regular basis on Egmont developments, including trends analysis to enhance the efforts of our domestic law enforcement agencies to complete the financial component of civil and criminal investigations.

Priority 4: Explore the feasibility of establishing model international financial task forces to plan and coordinate significant multilateral money laundering investigations.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

REV_00197252

Goals: Discuss with our foreign law enforcement counterparts the feasibility of establishing multilateral law enforcement task forces to target major money laundering enterprises and professional money launderers that operate transnationally. The Departments of Treasury, Justice, and State, together with leading Treasury and Justice law enforcement bureaus involved in international money laundering investigations, will establish an interagency working group to discuss the formation of a model international money laundering task force that targets professional money launderers and their organizations.

The United States has built a record of successful cooperative international investigations with Canada, the United Kingdom, and other foreign countries. With the active participation of the Department of State and senior officials from Justice and the Treasury, key law enforcement bureaus with a successful track record in international investigations should consider approaching law enforcement officials in strategically allied countries to discuss the formation of an international financial crimes task force. The task force would focus on professional money launderers and major money laundering organizations that operate in or through the United States and other countries participating in the task force. Task force members would jointly investigate multinational money laundering organizations and systems through shared intelligence and operational experiences. The participating law enforcement agencies would determine how best to structure the task force and assign responsibilities. The international financial crimes task force should further coordinate activities and work closely with INTERPOL.

* OBJECTIVE 2: CONTINUE ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN FATF AND FATF-STYLE REGIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.

The international community has generated momentum to combat illicit money laundering. The 2001 Strategy seeks to take advantage of that momentum and continue the multilateral efforts that have begun to produce positive and identifiable changes in the global fight against money laundering.

In June 2000, the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) posted fifteen jurisdictions on a list of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCTs) because of serious deficiencies in their anti-money laundering systems. FATF assesses its member countries based on national compliance with FATF's Forty Recommendations (a list of anti-money laundering measures), and other countries based on the twenty-five criteria (a list of practices considered to impede the international fight against money laundering). In response, many NCCTs took corrective action to eliminate bank secrecy laws and strengthen reporting requirements to make their financial systems less vulnerable to abuse from criminal activities. In fact, in June 2001, FATF removed four countries from the original NCCT list because they substantially progressed in implementing anti-money laundering measures. However, FATF added six new countries to the list after of a second round of reviews. In short, the international community can credit the FATF-NCCT list for encouraging countries to improve their anti-money laundering systems.[29]

[29] Just this summer, the Russian Federation completed work on a long-awaited comprehensive money laundering reform law.

REV_00197253

The United States should continue to support and actively participate in the FATF and other FATF-style regional bodies to make financial systems less vulnerable to financial crimes and money laundering.

Priority 1: Continue the United States' role within FATF in identifying and monitoring the progress of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCTs).

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice; Assistant Secretary, International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State.

Goals: Work through FATF to complete the second round of NCCT reviews to identify non-cooperating countries. Throughout the year, monitor the progress made by listed jurisdictions in addressing noted deficiencies and implementing corrective measures, and monitor progress made by countries removed from NCCT list in June 2001. By September 2001, (1) attend FATF plenary meeting, (2) complete the second round of NCCT reviews, and (3) participate within the FATF to remove from the NCCT list all jurisdictions that have taken appropriate measures to address previously identified deficiencies in their anti-money laundering regimes. By October 2001, impose counter-measures for listed jurisdictions that have failed to demonstrate the willingness to meaningfully respond to their NCCT listing.

The U.S. has supported FATF financially and played an active role in its governance. The 2001 Strategy mandates that the U.S. continue its involvement at every level, including efforts to enhance its leadership role in FATF and other regional bodies. With strong leadership, FATF can continue to increase its momentum and leverage international resources and influence against non-compliant jurisdictions in its international fight against money laundering.

Priority 2: Work within the FATF to revise the Forty Recommendations to reflect the experience of the international community, including the evolution of money laundering activities, and the relationship of the Recommendations to the criteria used to determine whether countries are "non-cooperative" in the fight against money laundering.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Discuss the full range of issues under consideration in connection with the review of the FATF Forty Recommendations. Encourage an open and inclusive process to ensure that the views of non-FATF members are considered. By October 2001, the U.S. will develop interagency agreed positions on the issues under consideration by the three working groups established for the review of the Forty Recommendations (customer identification, corporate vehicles, and "gatekeepers"). By February 2002, the U.S. delegation will work to ensure the publication of draft issue papers by the FATF soliciting public comment on the review of the Recommendations.

In 1990, the FATF established Forty Recommendations deemed essential to establish an effective counter-money laundering regime. The international community has since recognized the Forty Recommendations as the standard of an effective anti-money laundering regime. The Financial Stability Forum, established by the G-7, has included the FATF Forty Recommendations as one of the 12 key standards in its Compendium of Standards. More recently, the U.N. Convention on Transnational Organized Crime included specific reference to the FATF Forty Recommendations in connection with a provision requiring states to implement civil measures to control money laundering. The International Monetary Fund and World Bank have also recognized the FATF Forty as the accepted standard in combating money laundering.

FATF periodically revises the Forty Recommendations to address new anti-money laundering challenges. In 1996, for example, FATF revised the recommendations (i) to expand the predicate offenses for money laundering beyond drugs to all serious crimes, (ii) to require mandatory suspicious transaction reporting, and (iii) to recognize the inherent threat posed by new technologies. To preserve the continued vitality of the FATF Forty Recommendations and reflect the experience of the international community in this area over the past eleven years, FATF must again revise its principles for action.

In 2000, the FATF agreed to initiate a review of the Forty Recommendations, including the issues of particular concern identified in the June 2000 report on Non-Cooperative Countries and Territories (NCCTs). The FATF discussed the best methods for approaching this exercise and agreed that work should begin to conduct an initial examination of the specific issues of concern. In 2001, the FATF established several working groups to facilitate and complete this process.

In 2001, the U.S. will work with the FATF to revise the FATF Forty to reflect our experience and the evolution of money laundering activities, and to address any inconsistencies between the existing recommendations and the FATF's 25 Criteria for determining whether jurisdictions are "non-cooperative" in the fight against money laundering.

 OBJECTIVE 3: PROVIDE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE TO JURISDICTIONS WILLING AND COMMITTED TO STRENGTHENING THEIR ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

The U.S. cannot combat money laundering effectively as long as there are safe havens available to move illicit proceeds. FATF has identified a number of these safe havens through the "non-cooperative countries and territories" (NCCT) process. The U.S. believes that in addition to adopting the necessary laws and regulations to combat money laundering, many NCCT jurisdictions also require substantial assistance in operating the necessary institutions to investigate and prosecute money launderers.

Priority 1: Provide technical assistance to NCCT jurisdictions, as appropriate, to develop strong domestic anti-money laundering legislation.

REV_00197255

Lead: Assistant Secretary for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State.

Goals: Identify NCCT jurisdictions that have demonstrated a commitment to correcting their anti-money laundering deficiencies and make recommendations for providing assistance to help these jurisdictions draft anti-money laundering legislation and/or critical analysis of their legislative proposals. On an ongoing basis, monitor developments in NCCT jurisdictions that need anti-money laundering legislation, and make recommendations for delivering needed technical assistance through designated expert teams. By December 2001, recommend use of available U.S. assistance funds to satisfy anticipated technical assistance needs for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The United States, its G-7 partners, and other FATF members have valuable experience in crafting effective, comprehensive anti-money laundering legislation. The challenge is to concentrate this wealth of experience and deliver it to jurisdictions that are struggling to develop an area of financial oversight, which may, in many instances, be completely new. To accomplish this goal, the United States must coordinate with its international partners to avoid duplication of effort and ensure that appropriate experts are engaged and utilized in the most productive manner.

Priority 2: Convene an inter-agency working group to recommend the optimal use of U.S. Government and international expertise in developing and providing appropriate technical assistance to NCCT institutions and jurisdictions.

Lead: Assistant Secretary, International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State.

Goals: Convene an inter-agency working group to consider how best to optimize U.S. government technical expertise to develop strong anti-money laundering infrastructures in NCCT jurisdictions. By September 2001, identify the members of the inter-agency working group and by December 2001, the group will recommend a plan to marshal and deliver, as appropriate, U.S. and international technical assistance to address the money laundering deficiencies occurring in NCCT jurisdictions.

The Departments of Treasury, Justice, and State offer various international anti-money laundering training and technical assistance programs. Most of the funding used to carry out international anti-money laundering training and technical assistance programs is appropriated to the Department of State. The objective is to coordinate the delivery of these programs to avoid duplication of efforts, identify gaps in training, and to ensure that trainisng efforts are comprehensive and effective. An inter-agency working group will be formed to coordinate and ensure that technical assistance draws upon the proper mix of private sector, governmental, and international resources.

* OBJECTIVE 4: WORK WITH THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND WORLD BANK TO ENHANCE ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

Money laundering has the potential to weaken the rule of law and increase the risks to domestic and global financial systems. Because of these macroeconomic concerns, the International Financial Institutions (IFIs) have agreed to take on an enhanced role in the global fight against money laundering. In April 2001, the IMF and World Bank Executive Boards recognized the FATF Forty Recommendations as the accepted international anti-money laundering standard. The IFIs also agreed to: a) intensify their focus on anti-money laundering elements in all relevant supervisory principles; b) work more closely with major international anti-money laundering groups; c) increase the provision of technical assistance; d) include anti-money laundering concerns in their surveillance and other operational activities when macroeconomic relevant, and e) undertake additional studies and publicize the importance of countries acting to protect themselves against money laundering. This agenda embraces the goals of the 2001 Strategy.

Money laundering is a problem of global dimensions that requires concerted and cooperative action on the part of a broad range of institutions. The submission of the IMF/World Bank report creates an opportunity for the United States and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) to work with these institutions on anti-money laundering issues. The United States will coordinate with G-7 and FATF members to ensure that the IMF and World Bank incorporates the Forty Recommendations into their operational work and promote the Forty Recommendations as the international standard.

Priority 1: The United States will work with other nations, the IFIs, and FATF, in an effort to incorporate anti-money laundering issues into the IFIs on-going work and programs, including the development of a separate "Reports on Observance of Standards and Codes" (ROSC) module on money laundering.

Lead: Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Monetary and Financial Policy, Department of the Treasury

Goals: For IFIs to incorporate the FATF Forty Recommendations and evaluation of anti-money laundering concerns into their on-going operations with member countries this year (including as part of Financial Sector Assessment Programs – FSAPs). By February 2002, IFIs will incorporate anti-money laundering concerns into their FSAPs, and FATF will draft and present to the IMF a ROSC module on money laundering.

In April 2001, the IMF stated, "Money laundering is a problem of global concern. It poses a threat to financial system integrity, and may undermine the sound functioning of financial systems, good governance and the fight against corruption. The important link between financial market integrity and financial stability is underscored by the key principles for financial sector supervision."[30] In addition to recognizing the FATF Forty, the IFIs recognize the need to factor anti-money laundering concerns into their work with members' financial sectors.

[30] IMF Executive Board Discussed Money Laundering, IMF Public Information Notice No. 01/41, April 29, 2001.

REV_00197257

As part of an enhanced engagement on anti-money laundering, the IFIs have agreed to: work closely with FATF and other major international anti-money laundering groups; increase the provision of technical assistance; include anti-money laundering concerns in their surveillance and other operational activities (including as part of FASPs); and, undertake additional studies and publicize the importance of countries taking steps to protect themselves against money laundering. During the second half of 2001, the IFIs and FATF plan to resolve how the Bank and Fund can adapt and operationalize the FATF Forty Recommendations, consistent with IFI mandates and processes.

The United States, its G-7 partners, and other FATF members have urged the IFIs to incorporate the relevant FATF Forty into a separate ROSC module on money laundering. Such a module would provide a comprehensive and articulated guide for assessing the status and performance of a country's anti-money laundering regime.

Priority 2: Support IFI steps to provide necessary technical assistance and regulatory training that furthers anti-money laundering efforts.

Lead: Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Monetary and Financial Policy, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Foster enhanced IFI and international engagement in developing technical assistance programs ready for implementation in early 2002. By January 2002, the United States, along with its G-7 and FATF partners, will work with the IMF and World Bank towards a proposal to provide technical assistance to willing jurisdictions. {tc "Milestones\: By October 2001, the United States will provide the IMF and World Bank with a proposal that outlines joint IMF/Bank/U.S. efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to NCCTs. "}

The 2001 Strategy recognizes that the IMF and the World Bank have indicated their willingness to work with other international organizations and provide technical assistance to countries in order to combat global money laundering. The United States along with the other G-7 countries should build upon this momentum and seek to work with the IMF and World Bank to implement training programs for nations that are struggling in their fight against money laundering.

Priority 3: Support bilateral, regional, and multilateral efforts in financial fora to urge countries and territories to adopt and adhere to international anti-money laundering standards.

Lead: Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Monetary and Financial Policy, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Timely stock taking of IMF assessments of offshore financial centers' supervisory and regulatory regimes. Help foster and implement initiatives focused on anti-money laundering and financial abuse in regional money laundering fora, and by the Multilateral Development Banks (MDBs). Continue to raise money laundering issues with foreign officials in bilateral settings, as appropriate. By early next year, review with other G-7 the MDBs action plan to help members implement codes and standards.

The Financial Stability Forum's (FSF) spring 2000 report of offshore financial centers concluded that enhanced implementation of international standards by OFCs, particularly with regards to regulation and supervision, disclosure and information sharing, would help to prevent criminal abuse of the international financial system. The G-7 meeting in Rome in July 2001 called on the FSF to prepare a report on the progress in implementing its recommendations and options for any future action to be made at the Finance Ministers' meeting in September 2001.

At a meeting of the Committee on Hemispheric Financial Issues (CHFI) in Ottawa in the spring of 2001, member Finance Ministers called on the IMF and World Bank to recognize the FATF Forty Recommendations as the international anti-money laundering standard, and asked them to incorporate relevant portions of the FATF Forty in their on-going operations with members, including a ROSC module on money laundering. During the first half of 2001, APEC member Finance Ministers indicated their support for anti-money laundering efforts conducted by the Asia Development Bank and the Asia Pacific Group on Money Laundering (APG).

At the July 2001 meeting in Rome, the G-7 asked the MDBs to play a more proactive role in assisting borrowers to develop institutional capacity and appropriate strategies to meet international codes and standards, including FATF anti-money laundering standards. The G-7 asked for a joint MDB report, including an Action Plan that outlined their role in supporting implementation of codes and standards to be prepared by the end of 2001.

* OBJECTIVE 5: TAKE COORDINATED ACTION AGAINST MONEY LAUNDERING THREATS, AS NECESSARY.

The United States will combat international money laundering by taking unilateral action against money laundering threats, as necessary. In practice, this translates into domestic efforts that block and seek to forfeit assets designated by OFAC's Foreign Terrorist and Narcotics Sanctions Programs.[31] In addition, the 2001 Strategy mandates that the United States initiate appropriate countermeasures against those countries that do not have or seek to create appropriate anti-money laundering laws or enforcement mechanisms. Imposition of counter-measures, however, should be made after an evaluation of the potentially adverse effects on the U.S. banking industry.

Priority 1: Continue to provide guidance to our domestic financial institutions regarding international money laundering risks.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

---

[31] For a discussion of the 2001 Strategy's proposal to target blocked assets designated by OFAC's Foreign Terrorist and Narcotics Sanctions Programs for potential forfeiture, see supra Goal 1, Objective 2, Priority 3.

REV_00197259

Goals: Maintain a current set of advisories on NCCT jurisdictions. In September 2001, issue new advisories for countries added to the NCCT list.

The 2001 Strategy mandates that the Department of the Treasury, under the existing authority of the Bank Secrecy Act (BSA), issue bank advisories to domestic financial institutions in response to countries that fail to implement appropriate anti-money laundering regimes. Advisories will ensure that our financial institutions are informed about the heightened risk of doing business with these countries. The advisories, coupled with the multilateral initiative of the FATF in naming non-cooperative jurisdictions, will encourage nations to improve their anti-money laundering regimes.

Priority 2: Initiate appropriate countermeasures against non-cooperative countries and territories.

Lead: Secretary of the Treasury;
Secretary of State;
Federal Reserve Board;
Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC).

Goals: Initiate appropriate countermeasures against jurisdictions that have made inadequate progress in combating money laundering. By October 2001, the Department of the Treasury, with the Departments of State and Justice, will determine what countermeasures, if any, to enact against Nauru, the Philippines, and Russia.

In June 2001, "FATF recommend[ed] to its members the application of counter-measures . . . to Nauru, the Philippines, and Russia, which were identified as non-cooperative . . . and which have not made adequate progress, unless their governments enact significant legislation to address FATF-identified money laundering concerns."[32] FATF recommended the following counter-measures:

- "Stringent requirements for identifying clients and enhancement of advisories, including jurisdiction-specific financial advisories, to financial institutions for identification of the beneficial owners before business relationships are established with individuals or companies from these countries;

- Enhanced relevant reporting mechanisms or systematic reporting of financial transactions on the basis that financial transactions with such countries are more likely to be suspicious;

[32] See FATF Review to Identify Non-Cooperative Countries or Territories: Increasing the Worldwide Effectiveness of Anti-Money Laundering Measures, The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering, at 3 (June 1999). Since June 2001, each of the three countries identified has taken legislative steps to address the FATF's concerns.

REV_00197260

- In considering requests for approving the establishment in FATF member countries of subsidiaries or branches or representative offices of banks, taking into account the fact that the relevant bank is from an NCCT;

- Warning non-financial sector businesses that transactions with entities within the NCCTs might run the risk of money laundering."[33]

None of these countermeasures should impose an unreasonable burden on our domestic financial institutions. Before any such measures are taken, the Department of the Treasury will review the potentially adverse effects of the measures on the U.S. financial services industry.

THE 2001 NATIONAL MONEY LAUNDERING STRATEGY

Prepared by

The Office of Enforcement, U.S. Department of the Treasury,
In consultation with the U.S. Department of Justice

August 9, 2001

TABLE OF CONTENTS

GOAL 1: FOCUS ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS ON THE PROSECUTION OF MAJOR MONEY LAUNDERING ORGANIZATIONS. 8

OBJECTIVE 1: FOCUS MISSION OF HIGH RISK MONEY LAUNDERING AND RELATED FINANCIAL CRIME AREA (HIFCA) TASK FORCES. 9

Priority 1: Design organizational structure of HIFCA Task Forces, and focus their enforcement efforts on large-impact cases and professional money launderers. 9

Priority 2: The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will meet every four months with Treasury Bureau Heads and DOJ law enforcement agencies to coordinate and review the progress of each HIFCA Task Force. 11

Priority 3: Develop and provide advanced money laundering training for HIFCA Task Force participants. 12

Priority 4: Designate new HIFCAs. 13

OBJECTIVE 2: ENHANCE USE OF FEDERAL CRIMINAL AND CIVIL ASSET FORFEITURE LAWS. 15

Priority 1: HIFCA Task Forces will submit action plans to intensify use of federal asset forfeiture laws. 15

Priority 2: Provide asset forfeiture training that emphasizes major case development to federal, state, and local law enforcement officials. 16

Priority 3: Aggressively exploit OFAC-held information about blocked assets of foreign terrorist groups and agents and of those individuals and entities appearing on the OFAC Narcotics Sanctions Programs designation lists for potential forfeiture. 17

Priority 4: Develop reporting system to measure assets forfeited or seized pursuant to money laundering prosecutions. 17

REV_00197263

OBJECTIVE 3: ENHANCE INTRA-AGENCY AND INTER-AGENCY COORDINATION OF MONEY LAUNDERING INVESTIGATIONS. 18

Priority 1: Coordinate and consolidate existing Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) Review Teams in every U.S. Attorney's Office, and develop SAR Review Teams where they do not exist. 18

OBJECTIVE 4: EXPAND EFFORTS TO DISMANTLE THE BLACK MARKET PESO EXCHANGE (BMPE) MONEY LAUNDERING SYSTEM. 19

Priority 1: Work with the private sector to conclude and implement a comprehensive "best practices" BMPE anti-money laundering system. 19

Priority 2: Identify and report patterns and trends in the BMPE. 20

Priority 3: Develop a training program to enable law enforcement to identify, understand, investigate and prosecute BMPE schemes. 21

Priority 4: Enhance website that promotes law enforcement's fight against the BMPE money laundering system. 21

Priority 5: Conclude multinational study with the governments of Colombia, Aruba, Panama, and Venezuela in the cooperative fight against the BMPE. 22

Objective 5: Enact Legislation to Address Deficiencies in Current Money Laundering Laws. 22

Priority 1: Work to introduce legislation to address deficiencies in current federal money laundering statutes. 22

GOAL 2: IMPROVE THE CAPACITY TO MEASURE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS. 24

OBJECTIVE 1: INSTITUTIONALIZE SYSTEMS TO MEASURE SUCCESS OF MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS AND RESULTS. 25

Priority 1: Devise and implement a uniform money laundering case reporting system. 25

Priority 2: Research other methods for determining the effectiveness of Federal anti-money laundering efforts, including whether law enforcement is impacting the cost of laundering money. 26

Priority 3: Ensure that federal law enforcement agencies provide feedback to FinCEN on the use of SARs and other BSA information. 27

Priority 4: Develop analytic tools to identify money-laundering trends. 27

Priority 5: Review the costs and resources devoted to anti-money laundering efforts to allow for inform budget allocations. 28

GOAL 3: PREVENT MONEY LAUNDERING ACTIVITY THROUGH COOPERATIVE PUBLIC-PRIVATE EFFORTS AND NECESSARY REGULATORY MEASURES. 30

Objective 1: Examine the Efficacy of Existing Reporting Requirements. 31

Priority 1: Survey depository institutions to determine the actual costs of Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs) and Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs). 31

Priority 2: Work with the financial sector to increase utilization of existing Currency Transaction Report (CTR) filing exemptions for low-risk financial transactions. 32

Priority 3: Survey financial sector regarding the possible expansion of currency transaction reporting exemptions. 33

Objective 2: Work to Expand Types of Financial Institutions Subject to Effective Bank Secrecy Act Requirements as Necessary. 33

Priority 1: Work with the SEC to propose rules for reporting suspicious activity by brokers and dealers in securities. 34

Priority 2: Ensure that money services businesses (MSBs) are educated about their obligations under the new rules that require them to register and report suspicious activity. 35

Priority 3: Provide an additional opportunity for the industry to comment on a draft rule requiring the reporting of suspicious activity by casinos and card clubs. 36

OBJECTIVE 3: INCREASE USEFULNESS OF REPORTED INFORMATION TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES AND THE FINANCIAL INDUSTRY. 37

Priority 1: FinCEN will continue to provide information to financial institutions and law enforcement from SARs and other BSA reports concerning the utility of these reports. 37

Priority 2: The federal bank regulatory agencies will continue to identify and implement enhancements to their examination procedures where necessary to address the ever changing nature of money laundering. 38

Priority 3: Study how technological change impacts money-laundering enforcement. 39

Priority 4: Continue to address the role of legal and accounting profession als in combating money laundering. 40

Objective 4: Enhance the Ability of U.S. Financial Institutions to Defend against Money Laundering through Foreign Correspondent Banks. 40

Priority 1: Discuss approaches to reduce the threat of money laundering posed by foreign correspondent banks. 40

Priority 2: Require foreign banks that maintain a correspondent account in the U.S. to appoint an agent who is authorized to accept service of legal process. 41

GOAL 4: ENHANCE PARTNERSHIPS WITH STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO FIGHT MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES. 43

Objective 1: Provide Seed Capital for State and Local Counter-Money Laundering Enforcement Efforts. 44

Priority 1: Review applications and award grants under the C-FIC program. 44

Priority 2: Evaluate the progress of existing C-FIC grant recipients. 45

Objective 2:
Improve Coordination with State and Local Enforcement agencies. 47

Priority 1: Increase involvement of state and local enforcement agencies through participation in the HIFCA Task Forces and SAR Review Teams. 47

Objective 3:
Enhance the Effectiveness of State and Local Law Enforcement's Access to and Use of Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) Data. 47

Priority 1: Provide the most effective and efficient methods for accessing BSA data. 48

Priority 2: Improve the Gateway System. 48

Priority 3: Continue to provide training and outreach to state and local law enforcement regarding access to and utility of BSA data. 48

GOAL 5: STRENGTHEN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION TO COMBAT THE GLOBAL PROBLEM OF MONEY

REV_00197267

LAUNDERING. 50

Objective 1: Enhance International Cooperation and Effectiveness in Investigating and Prosecuting Money Launderers. 51

Priority 1: Review key existing extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties for coverage of money laundering offenses, and recommend that coverage of money laundering offenses be considered an important objective in assessing future United States government treaty negotiation. 52

Priority 2: Enhance international cooperation of money laundering investigations through equitable sharing of seized assets. 52

Priority 3: Enhance mechanisms for the international exchange of financial intelligence through support and expansion of membership in the Egmont Group of financial intelligence units (FIUs) and report developments to U.S. law enforcement. 54

Priority 4: Explore the feasibility of establishing model international financial task forces to plan and coordinate significant multilateral money laundering investigations. 54

OBJECTIVE 2: CONTINUE ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN FATF AND FATF-STYLE REGIONAL ORGANIZATIONS. 55

Priority 1: Continue the United States' role within FATF in identifying and monitoring the progress of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCTs). 56

Priority 2: Work within the FATF to revise the Forty Recommendations to reflect the experience of the international community, including the evolution of money laundering activities, and the relationship of the Forty Recommendations to the criteria used to determine whether countries are "non-cooperative" in the fight against money laundering. 56

OBJECTIVE 3: PROVIDE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE TO JURISDICTIONS WILLING AND COMMITTED TO STRENGTHENING THEIR ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS. 57

REV_00197268

Priority 1: Provide technical assistance to NCCT jurisdictions, as appropriate, to develop strong domestic anti-money laundering legislation. 57

Priority 2: Convene an inter-agency working group to recommend the optimal use of U.S. Government and international expertise in developing and providing appropriate technical assistance to NCCT institutions and jurisdictions. 58

OBJECTIVE 4: WORK WITH THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND WORLD BANK TO ENHANCE ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS. 59

Priority 1: The United States will work with other nations, the IFIs, and FATF, in an effort to incorporate anti-money laundering issues into the IFIs on-going work and programs, including as a separate "Reports on Observance of Standards and Codes" (ROSC) module on money laundering. 59

Priority 2: Support IFI steps to provide necessary technical assistance and regulatory training that further anti-money laundering efforts. 60

Priority 3: Support bilateral, regional, and multilateral efforts in financial for a to urge countries and territories to adopt and adhere to international anti-money laundering standards. 60

Objective 5: Take Coordinated Action Against Money Laundering Threats, as Necessary.

Priority 1: Continue to provide guidance to our domestic financial institutions regarding international money laundering risks. 61

Priority 2: Initiate appropriate countermeasures against non-cooperative countries and territories. 62

GOAL 1: FOCUS ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS ON THE PROSECUTION OF MAJOR MONEY LAUNDERING ORGANIZATIONS.

GOAL 1:

FOCUS ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS ON THE PROSECUTION OF MAJOR MONEY LAUNDERING ORGANIZATIONS.

The top priority of the 2001 Strategy is to focus enforcement efforts on the investigation, prosecution, and disruption of major money laundering organizations. Because federal law enforcement resources are limited, they must be concentrated where they will have the greatest impact. It is therefore imperative to focus enforcement efforts on large-scale investigations and prosecutions that disrupt and dismantle entire criminal organizations and enterprises.

To focus our resources against major money laundering organizations, this Strategy mandates that law enforcement (1) establish inter-agency task forces in High Risk Money Laundering and Related Financial Crimes Areas (HIFCAs), (2) intensify use of federal criminal and civil asset forfeiture laws, (3) enhance intra-agency, inter-agency, and international coordination of money laundering investigations, (4) expand efforts to dismantle the Black Market Peso Exchange (BMPE), and (5) recommend legislation necessary to correct deficiencies in current money laundering laws, thereby strengthening law enforcement's ability to fight money laundering organizations.

* OBJECTIVE 1: FOCUS MISSION OF HIGH RISK MONEY LAUNDERING AND RELATED FINANCIAL CRIME AREA (HIFCA) TASK FORCES.

HIFCA Task Forces occupy the flagship role in our efforts to disrupt and dismantle large-scale money laundering systems and organizations. The HIFCA Task Forces are the model for drawing on intelligence for targeting and working in a task force approach to develop high-impact investigations and prosecutions, and the 2001 Strategy provides for their structure, training, supervision, and expansion. HIFCA Task Forces, however, are only one part of what must be an all agency, all regions effort. The 2001 Strategy, therefore, enlists all federal anti-money laundering law enforcement components, including the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF); High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas (HIDTA); the Money Laundering Control Center (MLCC); and the Special Operations Division, Money Laundering Section (SOD-MLS) to work together, and with their state and local counterparts, to target, arrest, and prosecute professional money launderers and forfeit their assets.

Priority 1: Design organizational structure of HIFCA Task Forces, and focus their enforcement efforts on large-impact cases and professional money launderers.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Initiate targeted federal money laundering investigations led by recently created or newly designated HIFCA Task Forces. By September 2001, the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will design the organizational structure of HIFCA Task Forces, and designate regional HIFCA Task Force directors. By October 2001, assembled HIFCA Task Forces will submit action plans that detail (i) how they will focus resources to target large-scale money laundering activities, and (ii) specific priorities and dates for accomplishing these activities.

The 2001 Strategy seeks to focus and implement the mission of the HIFCA program – to concentrate law enforcement efforts at the federal, state, and local level, and combat money laundering in designated high intensity money laundering zones. HIFCA Task Forces will lead the investigation of complex, transnational money laundering schemes perpetrated by professional money launderers by drawing upon the data, resources, training, and expertise of various enforcement agencies. Further, HIFCA Task Forces will share information with the Office of Foreign Assets Control to assist its investigative efforts of the Narcotics Sanctions[1] and Foreign Terrorist Programs.[2]

The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury, and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice, bear ultimate responsibility for implementation and supervision of each HIFCA Task Force. The HIFCA Task Forces will:

- be composed of all relevant federal, state, and local enforcement authorities; prosecutors; and federal financial supervisory agencies as needed;
- work closely with the HIDTA and OCDETF Task Forces within the HIFCA area;
- focus on collaborative investigative techniques, both within the HIFCA and between the HIFCAs and other areas;
- attend OFAC briefings on Narcotics Sanctions Programs and OFAC Foreign Terrorist Programs;

[1] OFAC's Narcotics Sanctions Programs include the Foreign Narcotics Kingpin Designation Act Program (authorized under 21 U.S.C. § 1901-08 and 8 U.S.C. § 1182) and the Colombian Specially Designated Narcotics Traffickers (SDNT)-International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA) (50 U.S.C. § 1701-06, Executive Order 12978). OFAC's Foreign Terrorist Programs encompass the activities of the Foreign Terrorist Asset Tracking Center, the Specially Designated Terrorists program under IEEPA, and OFAC's participation in the Foreign Terrorist Organization designation process.

[2] See 21 U.S.C. § 1901-08; 8 U.S.C. § 1182.

- attend FinCEN briefings to ensure meaningful and effective utilization of FinCEN information and expertise;

- attend briefing by the Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture on the use of federal civil and criminal forfeiture laws, with specific emphasis on changes effected by the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act of 2000;

- ensure a more systematic exchange of information on money laundering between HIFCA participants; and

- attend advanced money laundering and asset forfeiture courses conducted by the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center.

To pursue the goals and objectives of this year's Strategy, inter- and intra-agency coordination is key. The HIFCA Task Forces must be the driving force to unite our law enforcement agencies, and draw upon all available relevant information to conduct successful investigations and prosecutions.

Priority 2: The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will meet every four months with Treasury Bureau Heads and DOJ law enforcement agencies to coordinate and review the progress of each HIFCA Task Force.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Coordinate investigations and monitor progress of investigative targets within and between HIFCAs. By December 2001, representatives from each HIFCA Task Force will brief the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, on HIFCA Task Force activities and coordination efforts. The briefing will detail the involvement and participation of state and local law enforcement agencies in the HIFCAs. The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will thereafter host meetings every four months with federal law enforcement bureau heads or senior executives with full decision-making authority, to monitor and resolve coordination issues within the HIFCAs.

The 2001 Strategy mandates that members of the Treasury and Justice Department law enforcement agencies engage in inter-agency, intra-agency, and international coordination, especially in HIFCAs, where Task Forces rely on the expertise of Treasury and Justice law enforcement agencies, U.S. Attorneys' Offices, federal financial supervisory agencies, and state and local enforcement officials to investigate and prosecute major money laundering schemes and organizations.

The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, are responsible for coordinating inter- and intra-agency efforts and ensuring that Treasury and Justice enforcement components are engaged in the work of the HIFCA Task Forces. Beginning January 2002, the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will meet with federal law enforcement bureau heads or senior executives with full decision-making authority to monitor and resolve coordination issues within the HIFCAs.

Every four months, the manager and other HIFCA
Task Force representatives will brief Treasury and Justice officials on the HIFCA's actual and projected activities and targets, and the actual and proposed involvement that state, local, and federal law enforcement and regulatory agencies have in the HIFCA Task Force mission. The Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will coordinate efforts between HIFCA Task Forces, and will meet as necessary to ensure that cooperation issues are resolved expeditiously.

Priority 3: Develop and provide advanced money laundering training for HIFCA Task Force participants.

Lead: Director, Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC); Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Deliver advanced money laundering training to HIFCA Task Force participants to ensure that federal, state, and local enforcement agents have the necessary training and expertise to investigate and prosecute major money laundering schemes and organizations. By December 2001, FLETC will develop a new series of advanced money laundering training modules for HIFCA Task Force participants. The training package will focus on the operational experiences of veteran investigators, and will educate the HIFCA Task Force members on the full range of inter- and intra-agency capabilities available to fight money-laundering operations. By January 2002, FLETC will schedule training session dates with each existing HIFCA Task Force.

The Departments of Treasury and Justice offer a substantial amount of fundamental, advanced, and specialized training to task forces, agencies, investigators, and prosecutors through components such as the Office of Legal Education (OLE), the Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section (AFMLS), FBI-Quantico, DEA-Quantico, the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC), and the Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture (EAOF). By the end of FY 2001, for example, the OLE and AFMLS alone, will have conducted 32 different financial investigations, money laundering, and asset forfeiture courses, reaching 3,000 federal law enforcement agents and AUSAs; participated as trainers in over 140 federal and state money laundering and asset forfeiture conferences; and distributed over 150,000 publications and training materials

The 2001 Strategy mandates that the Department of the Treasury and Justice build on this training expertise, and expand the scope of existing and planned training to include a comprehensive training program that is tailored to address the needs and the mission of HIFCA Task Forces. The FLETC, in close coordination with the AFMLS, will lead our efforts to design and provide HIFCA Task Forces with specialized programs that draw from the experiences of successful large-scale money laundering investigations and prosecutions such as Operations Casablanca, Dinero, Greenback, Polar Cap, and Green Ice. These programs will utilize a "lessons learned" approach to educate HIFCA Task Force members about ideal methods to set up, operate, investigate, and prosecute major money laundering schemes and operations.

Priority 4: Designate new HIFCAs.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Designate additional HIFCAs as appropriate. Review applications for HIFCA designations, and make timely recommendation to the Departments of the Treasury and Justice for decision.

REV_00197274

The 1998 Strategy Act requires the National Money Laundering Strategy to designate HIFCAs.[3] The statute provides a list of factors to be considered in designating a HIFCA: (1) demographic and general economic data; (2) patterns of BSA filings and related information; and (3) descriptive information that identifies trends and patterns in money laundering activity and the level of law enforcement response to money laundering in the region.[4] The statute does not mandate that enforcement personnel designate HIFCAs solely in geographic terms; HIFCAs also can be created to address money laundering in an industry, sector, financial institution, or group of financial institutions.

The HIFCA Working Group[5] will select future HIFCAs from applications received. A prospective applicant must submit an application to FinCEN that includes:

- a description of the proposed area, system, or sector to be designated;
- the focus and plan for the counter-money laundering projects that the HIFCA designation will support;
- the reasons such a designation is appropriate, taking into account the relevant statutory standards; and
- a point of contact.

HIFCA Designations for Year 2001

Based on the recommendation of the HIFCA Working Group, the 2001 Strategy designates two new HIFCAs: the Northern District of Illinois (Chicago); and the Northern District of California (San Francisco). These new HIFCAs will develop task forces that build upon existing interagency resources in their communities.

1. Northern District of Illinois (Chicago)

A. Demographic/Economic Information

According to the Census Bureau, Chicago is the third largest city in the United States with a population of nearly 3 million people. The greater Chicago metropolitan area is made up of six counties with a combined total population of 8 million. Chicago is a major financial center with more than 300 banks and 30 U.S. branches of foreign banks. The city is home to the Federal

[5] The HIFCA Working Group is comprised of representatives from DOJ's Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, the Office of Enforcement of the Treasury Department, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, the U.S. Customs Service, the Internal Revenue Service, the Secret Service, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Postal Inspection Service, the Executive Office for U.S. Attorneys, the Executive Office for the Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Forces, and the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

Reserve Bank of Chicago, the seventh largest U.S. bank, and five of the top fifty banks by total assets in the nation.

Chicago is also a major international transportation center. O'Hare International Airport remains the commercial aviation capital of the world; international carriers offer direct service to 60 cities outside of the United States. Chicago is also a major railroad center, and has an international port that handles large amounts of cargo.

B. BSA Filings

From 1998-99, Chicago area banks filed 800,615 Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs), with an aggregate value over $30 billion. Chicago's number of CTRs exceeds the combined total of CTRs filed in Los Angeles and San Juan, and approaches the 878,460 filed in the New York/New Jersey area. The value of the CTRs exceeds the value of those filed in Los Angeles for this period. Chicago banks also filed nearly 5,000 Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs), compared to the 5,171 SARs filed in Los Angeles and 566 in San Juan during the same period.

C. Law Enforcement Activity

Law enforcement staffing levels and money laundering-related cases are similar to other HIFCAs. The FBI reports a large number of active investigations involving significant money laundering transactions. Further, Chicago not only serves as the core city for the Great Lakes Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF), but is also designated as a High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA).

2. Northern District of California (San Francisco)

A. Demographic/Economic Information

According to the Census Bureau, the San Francisco Consolidated Metropolitan Statistical Area (San Francisco/Oakland/San Jose) is ranked fifth in the United States. The area has the highest concentration in the United States for technology exports and the greatest access to the internet of any U.S. region. San Francisco is a major financial center, and is home to numerous national banks, a Federal Reserve Bank, and the Pacific Stock Exchange.

The San Francisco area has three major airports, with the Oakland International airport ranked 25th in the world for air cargo. The area has two major seaports. The Port of Oakland is the fourth largest in the country, and handles 98 percent of all containerized cargo that passes under the Golden Gate Bridge.

B. BSA Filings

In 1999, San Francisco-area banks filed over 1.5 million CTR filings, with an aggregate value totaling $80 billion. These numbers exceed the combined total of CTR filings and amounts for Los Angeles and San Juan, and exceed the number of CTRs filed in New York/New Jersey. Further, area banks filed more than 18,000 SARs in 1999.

C. Law Enforcement Activity

The Financial Investigative Task Force (FITF) has been operating successfully in the Northern District of California for approximately seven years. Since 1993, the FITF has initiated 147 investigations, 20 of which developed into full money laundering investigations. The FITF will serve as the foundation of the new HIFCA Task Force. In addition, the area serves as the San Francisco Bay Area HIDTA, and home to the Pacific OCDETF.

 OBJECTIVE 2: ENHANCE USE OF FEDERAL CRIMINAL AND CIVIL ASSET FORFEITURE LAWS.

Congress has recognized that illegal proceeds are the lifeblood of large-scale criminal operations. Through forfeiture statutes, Congress has empowered law enforcement to attack criminal enterprises at their roots by seizing and forfeiting illicit proceeds involved in, and property traceable to, money laundering activity.

To enhance use of federal criminal and civil asset forfeiture laws directed at major money laundering activity, this year's Strategy proposes four priorities: (1) local HIFCA strategic planning; (2) large-scale asset forfeiture case training to federal, state, and local law enforcement; (3) aggressive investigations of assets designated by OFAC's Foreign Terrorist and Narcotics Sanctions Programs; and (4) measured evaluation of investigations and prosecutions that lead to asset forfeiture. These priorities will ensure that forfeiture is a top priority in our efforts to disrupt and dismantle major money laundering activities.

Priority 1: HIFCA Task Forces will submit action plans to intensify use of federal asset forfeiture laws.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Implement HIFCA action plans and intensify use of federal asset forfeiture in money laundering prosecutions. By October 2001, HIFCA Task Forces will submit asset forfeiture action plans to the Treasury Assistant Secretary (Enforcement) and Justice Assistant Attorney General for review and approval.

To ensure effective utilization of federal forfeiture laws in dismantling major money laundering operations, each HIFCA Task Force will design a local asset forfeiture action plan to intensify the area's use of federal forfeiture laws. HIFCA Task Forces should consult with DOJ's Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section and the Treasury's Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture to aid in design and implementation of their action plans. Each Task Force will submit its action plan to the Treasury Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and Justice Assistant Attorney General for review and approval.

Action plans provide customized strategies and funding options for each HIFCA Task Force, but plans and strategies do not fight crime. Task Forces must implement their strategies and administrators must review Task Force performance to ensure that forfeiture is a priority in our fight against money laundering. On a quarterly basis, each HIFCA Task Force will prepare reports that summarize the value of assets seized and forfeited.

Priority 2: Provide asset forfeiture training that emphasizes major case development to federal, state, and local law enforcement officials.

Lead: Director, Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC);
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Develop advanced asset forfeiture training programs. By September 2001, the Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, and Director, Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, Department of the Treasury, will assess current forfeiture training programs. FLETC, in concert with the Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, and Director, Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, will develop a new advanced asset forfeiture training program by January 2002.

This year's Strategy requires continued education of federal, state, and local investigators, analysts, and prosecutors concerning asset forfeiture statutory modifications and caselaw developments. In 2000, Congress enacted extensive changes to civil asset forfeiture law in the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act of 2000 (CAFRA). The CAFRA altered the burden of proof in civil asset forfeiture cases, authorized appointment of counsel in certain circumstances, allowed for pre-trial release of property in certain circumstances, changed the requirements of the innocent owner defense, and codified Bajakajian's "grossly disproportional" test of excessive forfeitures under the Eighth Amendment's Excessive Fines Clause.[6] Sweeping legislative modifications often have chilling effects on law enforcement efforts because investigators and prosecutors are uncertain of the application of the legislative changes and prefer to take the approach of "wait and see." Advanced asset forfeiture training programs, therefore, must inform law enforcement of significant statutory changes such as CAFRA, and instruct them how to investigate and prosecute successfully under the new provisions.

Training programs must also reflect the 2001 Strategy's primary emphasis–to focus enforcement efforts against major money laundering organizations. Advanced asset forfeiture training will include extensive sessions that focus on the lessons learned from successful large-scale investigations and prosecutions such as Operations Casablanca, Dinero, and Greenback. Training programs will teach investigators, analysts, and prosecutors how to use federal forfeiture statutes to the fullest extent and strip major money launderers of their illicit proceeds.

Priority 3: Aggressively exploit OFAC-held information about blocked assets of foreign terrorist groups and agents and of those individuals and entities appearing on the OFAC Narcotics Sanctions Programs designation lists for potential forfeiture.

Lead: Director, Office of Foreign Assets Control, Department of the Treasury; Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Pursue investigative leads developed from exploitation of information concerning assets blocked pursuant to OFAC's Narcotic Sanctions Programs or Foreign Terrorists Programs. By October 2001, create a mechanism to develop investigative leads and evidence from exploitation of information concerning assets blocked pursuant to OFAC's Narcotics Sanctions or Foreign Terrorists Programs. FLETC will incorporate this mechanism into its advanced asset forfeiture training programs.

The President, under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA)[7] and Executive Orders,[8] and Congress, through other statutes,[9] have imposed sanctions programs that prohibit named foreign terrorists, foreign drug kingpins, and their fronts and operatives from using their assets within U.S. jurisdiction or engaging in business or other financial activities with U.S.-based companies or individuals. Asset blockings are a valuable tool to fight foreign-origin threats to U.S. national security and foreign policy, including foreign criminal organizations. The 2001 Strategy requires that law enforcement step beyond the sanctions programs and use the sanctions-based asset blockings as a "force multiplier" to pursue all foreign terrorist and narcotics program asset blockings as leads for potential forfeitures through money laundering prosecutions.

Inter- and intra-agency cooperation is essential to implement this priority. OFAC, the Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, and bureau heads will cooperate to design a mechanism that identifies leads from OFAC-held information relating to blocked assets of foreign narcotics traffickers and terrorists, as well as from the OFAC administrative record in support of a designation. Criminal investigative agencies will, thereafter, pursue these leads to determine if legal cause exists to civilly or criminally forfeit the assets.

Priority 4: Develop reporting system to measure assets forfeited or seized pursuant to money laundering prosecutions.

Lead: Director, Executive Office of Asset Forfeiture, Department of the Treasury;
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Design a reporting system to report forfeiture of assets related to money laundering activity. By October 2001, establish interagency working group to develop asset forfeiture reporting system. By January 2002, establish a new asset forfeiture reporting system and implement its usage throughout the United States.

Federal law enforcement must develop a method to measure the costs and benefits of asset forfeiture strategies so that future programs can allocate resources where they are most needed and productive. A comprehensive system of measurement must distinguish between seizures and forfeitures related to money laundering. Accurate measurements will allow federal law enforcement to quantitatively measure the benefits of anti-money laundering efforts, including all "criminal contributions" that underwrite enforcement programs in the form of civil and criminal asset forfeitures.

 OBJECTIVE 3: ENHANCE INTRA-AGENCY AND INTER-AGENCY COORDINATION OF MONEY LAUNDERING INVESTIGATIONS.

Priority 1: Coordinate and consolidate existing Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) Review Teams in every U.S. Attorney's Office, and develop SAR Review Teams where they do not exist.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Implement SAR review teams in all federal districts. By September 2001, contact United States Attorneys and obtain commitments to create SAR review teams where they do not exist, and increase the participation of additional federal agencies in existing SAR review teams. By January 2002, United States Attorneys should create SAR review teams in every district, and report on the efforts of the new and existing SAR teams.

SARs provide valuable information that enables law enforcement to identify and target money launderers, other criminals, and forfeitable assets. However, the evidence necessary to advance a money laundering investigation usually is not immediately evident in the SAR, and finding relevant information, as well as identifying the wider trends and patterns hidden in the SARs requires patient analysis.

SAR review teams evaluate all SARs filed in their respective federal district. Teams are composed of an Assistant United States Attorney and representatives from federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies. Various districts have successfully implemented SAR Review Teams that assess SARs to coordinate investigations, set and assess investigative strategies, and generate cases.

FinCEN and law enforcement agencies are currently developing and testing state-of-the-art data mining tools. These systems will allow investigators and prosecutors to streamline and enhance the SAR review process by identifying and linking investigative leads, trends, and patterns contained in SARs. Data mining technology provides an organized investigative window of money laundering and related financial crimes that allows the user to manipulate the data to identify proactive and reactive leads. FinCEN has current contracts with experts in the data mining field to design these advanced analytical tools, and will provide demonstrations of these systems to U.S. Attorneys and investigators as soon as the modules are developed.

Based on past SAR Review Team successes and FinCEN's technological advances, all United States Attorneys' Offices are strongly encouraged to implement standardized SAR Review Team programs to develop, realize, and utilize the full investigative value of SAR information.

* OBJECTIVE 4: EXPAND EFFORTS TO DISMANTLE THE BLACK MARKET PESO EXCHANGE (BMPE) MONEY LAUNDERING SYSTEM.

The Black Market Peso Exchange (BMPE) is the largest money laundering system in the Western Hemisphere. Colombian narcotics traffickers are the primary users of BMPE, repatriating up to $5 billion annually to Colombia.

The BMPE is a system that converts and launders illicit drug proceeds from dollars to Colombian pesos. For example, dealers sell Colombian drugs in the U.S. in return for U.S. dollars. The dealers thereafter sell the U.S. currency to a Colombian black market peso broker's agent in the United States. In return for the dealer's U.S. currency deposit, the BMPE agent deposits the agreed-upon equivalent[10] of Colombian pesos into the cartel's bank account in Colombia. At this point, the cartel has successfully converted its drug dollars into pesos, and the Colombian broker and his agent now assume the risk for integrating the drug dollars into the U.S. banking system. The broker funnels the money into financial markets by selling the dollars to Colombian importers, who then purchase U.S. goods that are often smuggled into Colombia to avoid taxes and customs duties.

In response to BMPE, the Treasury Department has formed the BMPE Working Group, which unites law enforcement, banking, and other agencies in an effort to dismantle the BMPE system. The BMPE Working Group continues to develop comprehensive plans to coordinate all available investigative, regulatory, and trade policy tools to form a multi-faceted attack against BMPE.

Priority 1: Work with the private sector to conclude and implement a comprehensive "best practices" BMPE anti-money laundering system.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Implement the private sector's comprehensive "best practices" BMPE anti-money laundering compliance program. By October 2001, coordinate a workshop for industry leaders to finalize their anti-money laundering "best practices" compliance program and begin to develop an implementation strategy. By January 2001, the BMPE anti-money laundering "best practices" compliance program will be implemented, with quarterly reports of activities to the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

The BMPE functions when peso brokers are able to purchase U.S. manufactured trade goods with illicit proceeds. A major step towards dismantling the BMPE is to restrict these transactions so that they cannot occur. Therefore, law enforcement must intensify its efforts to educate the business community about BMPE activity, especially those industries that are particularly vulnerable to BMPE.

In June 2000, the Departments of Treasury and Justice personnel briefed senior industry officials on the operations of the BMPE and discussed the vulnerability of the industries to the BMPE system. Treasury and Justice offered to host three workshops that would assist the industries to develop BMPE anti-money laundering compliance programs along with best practices guidelines designed to minimize the likelihood that their products will be sold on the black market in Colombia. Following the first two meetings, industry officials prepared and circulated a BMPE anti-money laundering compliance program draft. The 2001 Strategy tasks the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement to continue these efforts by hosting the third private industry workshop to finalize the "best practices" document and to oversee and monitor the implementation of its provisions.

Priority 2: Identify and report patterns and trends in the BMPE.

Lead: Assistant Commissioner for Investigations, U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Identify and track patterns and trends of suspected BMPE funds into the financial system, and focus enforcement efforts accordingly. By January 2002, prepare a report that outlines trends and patterns in BMPE, and prepare training programs to educate industry and enforcement officials accordingly. Conduct BMPE outreach and training to industries that may receive suspicious payments, and expand effort to reach out to and educate free trade zone merchants operating in the U.S. about the BMPE and due diligence to avoid involvement in money laundering operations.

In the BMPE, the peso broker must arrange for the placement of street currency into the financial system or for the bulk shipment of the currency out of the United States. The Money Laundering Coordination Center (MLCC), operated by the U.S. Customs Service, conducts strategic analyses of operational and financial intelligence to identify the most common methods for the placement of narcotics proceeds into the financial system. MLCC also identifies specific businesses and individuals that are suspected of participating in the BMPE, and refers the information to the appropriate field office for investigation.

The MLCC continues to track wire transfers of accounts that belong to suspected violators. Customs, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN), United States Postal Inspection Service (USPIS), IRS-CI, DEA, FBI and other members of the BMPE Working Group[11] will continue to analyze operational intelligence, postal money order data, SARs, and other BSA information in efforts to identify BMPE transaction patterns of money laundering organizations. The BMPE Working Group members will continue their outreach to alert both the business and banking industry of emerging trends in the BMPE and emerging money laundering systems.

Priority 3: Develop a training program to enable law enforcement to identify, understand, investigate and prosecute BMPE schemes.

Lead: Director, Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, (FLETC); Director, Money Laundering Communications Center (MLCC), U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Deliver BMPE training to law enforcement officials to ensure the complete investigation of these international schemes. By January 2002, FLETC will develop a training module on BMPE. The training will focus on schemes, culpable parties, and specific investigative techniques. By February 2002, FLETC will schedule its training sessions, with principle focus on the HIFCA Task Forces.

BMPE is a unique and complex scheme that utilizes legitimate United States companies to facilitate the transfer of drug proceeds from the U.S., where the profits are generated, to Columbia, where the cartel owners reside. Evidence exists that indicates that legitimate U.S. companies knowingly have sold goods to individuals and businesses involved in BMPE operations. Successful investigations should target all facets of the scheme, to include the drug dealer, the peso broker, money service businesses, and U.S. individuals and businesses, where appropriate.

Priority 4: Enhance website that promotes law enforcement's fight against the BMPE money laundering system.

Lead: Assistant Commissioner for Investigations, U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Enhance and maintain a web site that: (1) promotes awareness of the BMPE money laundering system; (2) lists the Colombian financial institutions authorized to issue payments for U.S. trade goods; and (3) links users to the OFAC website's list of Specially Designated Narcotics Traffickers (SDNTs) of Colombia with which U.S. persons are prohibited from dealing. By November 2001, design and implement a BMPE web site.

[11] The BMPE Working Group is discussed and defined supra at Goal 1, Objective 4.

Law enforcement must relay BMPE information and news to many small companies in addition to industry giants. Businesses and enforcement officials need up-to-date access to lists of Colombian companies that lawfully may engage in international commerce with U.S. businesses. An enhanced BMPE web site, hosted by U.S. Customs Service at www.customs.gov, will provide this much-needed access.

Priority 5: Conclude multinational study with the governments of Colombia, Aruba, Panama, and Venezuela in the cooperative fight against the BMPE.

Lead: Director, Office of Policy Development, Department of the Treasury (OPD).

Goals: By October 2001, the BMPE Experts Working Group will prepare a report that recommends initiatives to each participating government. During October 2001, the multinational BMPE Experts Working Group will produce a report that recommends BMPE initiatives to participating governments.

On August 29, 2000, at the initiative of Treasury Enforcement, representatives from Colombia, Aruba, Panama, Venezuela, and the U.S. signed the "Black Market Peso Exchange System Multilateral Working Group Directive." On October 21, 2000, the BMPE Task Force participated in the first meeting of the Experts Working Group, a 30-member group created by the BMPE Multilateral Directive. The members of the Experts Working Group discussed how the BMPE money laundering system affects each of the respective countries, developed a common understanding of how the BMPE system operates, learned how BMPE transactions are documented, examined loopholes in existing laws, and discussed methods to improve international cooperation.

The multinational BMPE study undertaken by Colombia, Aruba, Panama, Venezuela, and the U.S has enhanced the cooperation between these governments in combating the BMPE. Although much of the narcotics-related money laundering involves Colombia, Colombia does not bear the brunt of the BMPE alone. All of the governments participating in the study are directly affected by the BMPE, and the study has already led to improved communication and cooperation, including enhanced support for law enforcement efforts.

During the remainder of 2001, the United States will continue to participate in the Experts Working Group and contribute to the drafting of a report that concludes and recommends policies that will improve international cooperation in efforts to combat and dismantle the BMPE.

 Objective 5: Enact Legislation to Address Deficiencies in Current Money Laundering Laws.

Although the 2001 Strategy mandates vigorous enforcement of existing money laundering laws, the Strategy also recognizes that the dynamic nature of money laundering activity requires the U.S. to periodically reexamine existing statutory schemes. The Departments of Treasury and Justice will seek to enhance law enforcement's ability to bring money launderers to justice by working with Congress to implement legislation that addresses the deficiencies in current money laundering statutes.

Priority 1: Work to introduce legislation to address deficiencies in current federal money laundering statutes.

Lead: Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice; Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;

Goals: Enact Money Laundering legislation that addresses current deficiencies in federal money laundering law. Submit a draft bill to Congress by October 2001.

The fight against money laundering should enjoy broad bipartisan support. The Under Secretary for Enforcement and the Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative Affairs, will work in close coordination with the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, to submit a money laundering bill–the Money Laundering Act of 2001—which will include, but not be limited to, the below provisions that will address deficiencies in the current federal money laundering statutes, and enhance criminal money laundering enforcement. The Money Laundering Act of 2001 would:

- criminalize the act of smuggling bulk cash in amounts exceeding $10,000 out of the country, with punishments including imprisonment and forfeiture;

- create a new criminal offense to prohibit the couriering and transporting of more than $10,000 of currency in interstate commerce with knowledge that the money is derived from an unlawful source;[12]

- create a criminal offense that prohibits the laundering of criminally derived proceeds through foreign banks by making it illegal for a person in the United States to send criminal proceeds abroad and launder them in a foreign bank; and

- make foreign public corruption a predicate offense under U.S. money laundering laws.[13]

[12] The federal circuits have disagreed whether the interstate transportation of illicit proceeds constitutes a financial transaction, as required under 18 U.S.C. § 1956. Compare United States v. Reed, 77 F.3d 139 (6th Cir. 1996) with United States v. Gallo, 927 F.2d 815 (5th Cir. 1991).

[13] Foreign official corruption is not a per se predicate offense for money laundering under current U.S. law, nor

The Department of Justice has submitted a comprehensive money laundering draft bill for interagency review through the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) process. The Department of the Treasury has cleared the bill and generally supports its provisions. The Departments of Justice and the Treasury will work together to introduce this legislation, and if enacted, will seek to implement these new authorities.

does the United States have express authority to seize and forfeit proceeds derived from foreign official corruption under the Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act of 2000. Current legal provisions hinder law enforcement from pursuing misappropriated foreign assets and preventing criminals from laundering the proceeds of foreign public corruption. These hindrances undermine U.S. efforts to promote democratic institutions and healthy international economic development.

GOAL 2: IMPROVE THE CAPACITY TO MEASURE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

GOAL 2:

IMPROVE THE CAPACITY TO MEASURE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

Federal law enforcement must be able to objectively measure the effectiveness of its law enforcement efforts. If anti-money laundering initiatives are not making a significant difference in disrupting money-laundering activity, principles of good government mandate that law enforcement discontinue those efforts.

To evaluate our anti-money laundering initiatives, we must compare current results against past efforts. At the very least, the government should be able to report on a regular basis the significance and number of money laundering investigations, prosecutions, and convictions; the number of seizures; the value of property forfeited in all money laundering related cases; and the criminal market-place price of laundering money. Law enforcement must use this data to compare past and present performance and determine whether progress is being made in combating money laundering. These data collections will further provide law enforcement with a clearer picture of money laundering "hot spots," which will guide policy decisions on the proper allocations of resources, and, at the same time, identify "gaps" where money laundering investigations should be enhanced or prioritized.

The 2001 Strategy, therefore, tasks the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) to (1) develop a comprehensive information system that collects relevant data from law enforcement agencies with respect to money laundering enforcement efforts, and (2) produce reports that guide policy makers in evaluating the effectiveness of law enforcement's efforts to combat money laundering activity.

* OBJECTIVE 1: INSTITUTIONALIZE SYSTEMS TO MEASURE SUCCESS OF MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS AND RESULTS.

Priority 1: Devise and implement a uniform money laundering case reporting system.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice;

Goals: Develop a uniform case reporting mechanism to be used by all federal law enforcement agencies to record information that relates to money laundering investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and forfeitures. By September 2001, the Director of FinCEN, the Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, and the Director, Bureau of Justice Statistics, will convene a high-level working group to establish standardized reporting procedures for each federal law enforcement agency involved in money laundering investigations and prosecutions.

Federal law enforcement agencies have no standardized means of reporting money-laundering case or investigation information. Records are not organized in ways that promote timely reporting and interagency review. However, accountability and meaningful review require accurate, timely, and uniform production of information.

FinCEN and the Bureau of Justice Statistics are ideally positioned to create a money laundering case reporting system. The Director of FinCEN, under the supervision of the Under Secretary for Enforcement, in conjunction with the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will convene a high-level working group to establish standardized reporting procedures for each federal law enforcement agency for money laundering investigations and prosecutions. However, the reporting procedure will not only report the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, seizures, and forfeitures related to money laundering, but also develop a standardized method that determines the significance of each case. Our reports must be weighted to reflect the size and sophistication of organizations successfully dismantled, or for example, whether we are convicting heads of organizations, professional money launderers, or low-level smurfs. Similarly, law enforcement must assess the complexity of the investigative effort that was needed to achieve a successful result. A comprehensive, but readily applicable array of criteria must be developed to give law enforcement the most accurate picture of its efforts.

Developing an accurate uniform information system is a top priority of the 2001 Strategy, and FinCEN will identify the necessary investment in technology and infrastructure to put these uniform reporting mechanisms in place as quickly as possible to include the resource requirements of affected agencies.

Priority 2: Research other methods for determining the effectiveness of Federal anti-money laundering efforts, including whether law enforcement is impacting the cost of laundering money.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN); Money Laundering Coordination Center, U.S. Customs Service; Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

REV_00197289

Goals: Develop methodology for determining the baseline commission percentage for laundering money. By October 2001, the director of FinCEN and the Chief of Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section will establish an interagency group to develop a model to determine the baseline commission percentage for laundering money, so that this figure can be tracked over time.

Law enforcement agencies know from undercover work and experience in money laundering investigations that money launderers generally receive a percentage of the funds laundered. Some evidence suggests that the cost of laundering money currently ranges from 8% to 20% of principal. If law enforcement's efforts to combat money laundering are successful, the criminal marketplace should reflect that success as professional money launderers demand higher rates of commission. Thus, one way to determine the effectiveness of anti-money laundering efforts is whether the cost of laundering money is increasing. The 2001 Strategy tasks FinCEN to explore additional criminal marketplace costs and develop a comprehensive model of the professional money launderer's price of doing business.

Priority 3: Ensure that federal law enforcement agencies provide feedback to FinCEN on the use of SARs and other BSA information.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Require upper level supervision to ensure that law enforcement provides feedback to FinCEN regarding the utility of BSA-related information. By October 2001, FinCEN will meet with the federal law enforcement bureaus that receive FinCEN reports to assess (i) how the enforcement bureaus are providing feedback to FinCEN, (ii) any problems or issues the bureaus have in this area, and (iii) methods to resolve these problems.

Federal law requires financial institutions to submit currency transaction reports (CTRs) and suspicious activity reports (SARs) to FinCEN. In 2000, FinCEN received and processed 12 million CTRs and 125,000 SARs. FinCEN is tasked with organizing these reports in a manner that assists law enforcement in conducting financial crimes investigations. Law enforcement can access the reports to link banks, customers, accounts, and transactions, and aid them in coordinating investigations, assessing strategies, and generating cases. FinCEN must ensure that BSA-related material is being utilized effectively. However, without feedback from the agencies about "if," "how," and "when" the information is being used, FinCEN cannot evaluate or change its programs to fit the needs of law enforcement.

The 2001 Strategy directs FinCEN to continue current efforts to obtain feedback from law enforcement agency users. FinCEN will track law enforcement usage and utility of automated queries of BSA-related data as well as FinCEN's analytical reports. If law enforcement personnel do not respond after initial inquiries, the Director of FinCEN will request feedback directly from the appropriate law enforcement agency head. If the agency head does not respond to the FinCEN Director, the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement and the Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, will seek and obtain the required information. FinCEN will coordinate this data and provide appropriate feedback information to federal financial supervisory agencies as needed.

Priority 4: Develop analytic tools to identify money-laundering trends.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN); Assistant Commissioner for Investigations, U.S. Customs Service.

Goals: Implement software solutions to assist in the extraction of trend and pattern information from the national Suspicious Activity Report database. By October 2001, FinCEN will complete the design, development and implementation of a system capable of identifying geographically based trends and patterns in financial transactions reported as suspicious by the nation's financial industry.

Relevant information must be cultivated to determine "hot spot" money laundering areas–those areas where anti-money laundering activities can have the greatest impact. This information is needed to determine the appropriate allocation of resources.

The criminal activity of money laundering, particularly laundering undertaken by organized criminal groups, those engaged in large-scale tax evasion, and those that divert public funds in other countries, usually involves complex financial transactions that are conducted along convoluted pathways across increasingly broad geographic areas. Improved understanding of the money laundering environment is essential (1) to identify the most serious money laundering threats; (2) to predict possible directions in which money laundering methods may evolve (often tied to advances in technology), (3) to measure the effectiveness in law enforcement and regulatory efforts to shut off or slow down the movement of criminal proceeds, and (4) to determine "hot spot" money laundering areas to guide policy makers in determining the appropriate allocation of resources.

Federal law enforcement agencies historically have had little success in identifying trends and patterns in money laundering because the available data has been geared more to the identification of investigative subjects than to the methods, techniques and pathways supporting illicit financial transactions. Implementation of the Suspicious Activity Report (SAR) requirement in 1996, however, created an opportunity to begin to study seriously the trends and patterns in money laundering. SARs contain detailed information about suspicious activity, and most importantly, a narrative section in which the filer can detail why they viewed the reported transaction as unusual.

During FY-2000, FinCEN began development of a system that arranges information contained within the national SAR database into an understandable set of derivative databases that are more easily accessible for analysis. The prototype system will make it possible to construct trends and patterns in organized criminal financial activity by pinpointing the geographic scope of the activity, defining the nature of the activity, and building a profile of the subjects involved in the activity.

Further development of the prototype system is necessary, especially in the areas of improving user interface and generating a fully developed series of automated reports to assist in the trend and pattern analysis of large-scale, complex money laundering activity.

Priority 5: Review the costs and resources devoted to anti-money laundering efforts to allow for inform budget allocations.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Management, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General for Administration, Department of Justice; Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

Goals: Develop a comprehensive budget review of resources devoted to anti-money laundering programs, and ensure that these resources are most appropriately and effectively used. By October 2001, the Departments of Treasury and Justice, in coordination with the Office of Management and Budget, will establish a high-level working group to include all elements of federal government that have a role in anti-money laundering programs to identify enforcement-related expenses.

Efforts to determine the effectiveness of money laundering initiatives must include a review of law enforcement costs. To capture the costs of enforcement, we will create an interagency working group that will develop a uniform system that identifies costs through timely collection of data relating to money laundering enforcement. This information will guide policy makers, who must review current spending levels and determine if those levels are consistent with the goals and objectives expressed in the 2001 Strategy.

GOAL 3: PREVENT MONEY LAUNDERING ACTIVITY THROUGH COOPERATIVE PUBLIC-PRIVATE EFFORTS AND NECESSARY REGULATORY MEASURES.

GOAL 3:

PREVENT MONEY LAUNDERING ACTIVITY THROUGH COOPERATIVE PUBLIC-PRIVATE EFFORTS AND NECESSARY REGULATORY MEASURES.

In addition to the Goal 1 component of aggressive enforcement, the 2001 Strategy emphasizes prevention. Efforts to prevent money laundering must include an effective regulatory regime and close cooperation between the public and private sectors to deny money launderers easy access to the financial sector.

In creating and implementing effective regulatory procedures, policy makers must balance the needs of law enforcement against the compliance costs and privacy interests of the financial industry and the public. At the very least, Treasury must ensure that the information required to be reported is being effectively utilized for investigative purposes. With the implementation of Goal 2, law enforcement will continually measure the effectiveness of its programs, and evaluate how to refine regulations to increase regulatory benefits and decrease regulatory burdens.

All regulations and guidance procedures that the government proposes must be reasonable and cost-effective. Government must renew its commitment to balance the value of reported information with the cost of compliance and privacy concerns. Therefore, to design and implement an effective and efficient preventative program, the government must (1) examine the efficacy of existing reporting obligations, (2) enhance the ability of U.S. financial institutions to defend against money laundering, including through the use of foreign correspondent banks, (3) expand, as necessary, the types of financial institutions that are subject to BSA reporting requirements, and (4) increase the usefulness of information that financial institutions report to law enforcement and federal financial supervisory agencies.

* OBJECTIVE 1: EXAMINE THE EFFICACY OF EXISTING REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

The Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) imposes requirements on financial institutions to report currency transactions over $10,000 and transactions of a suspicious nature. This information is intended to assist law enforcement in their money laundering investigations. Reporting requirements, however, impose costs on the financial sector. The 2001 Strategy recognizes that the United States must be sensitive to these added costs. To this end, Treasury Enforcement must obtain accurate information on actual costs of compliance imposed on financial institutions. Our policy makers must be able to rely on accurate data, and evaluate whether the benefits of regulation justify the costs imposed. The 2001 Strategy is committed to ensuring that the costs imposed on financial institutions are neither unreasonable nor overly burdensome.

Priority 1: Survey depository institutions to determine the actual costs of Currency Transaction Reports (CTRs) and Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs).

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Secretary for Financial Markets, Department of the Treasury; Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Prepare a detailed report regarding the CTR and SAR reporting costs imposed on depository institutions, including large, medium, and small sized institutions. By February 2002, the Department of the Treasury will prepare a survey that will be posted on federal bank regulators' and FinCEN's websites.

The 2001 Strategy tasks the Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group[14] to work with FinCEN and federal bank regulators to develop a survey to determine the costs of federal regulatory compliance imposed on large, medium, and small-scale depository institutions. The creators of the survey must ensure an appropriate statistical sample of the financial industry and distribute the surveys accordingly. Because such a survey may impose significant costs to disseminate, FinCEN and the federal bank regulators will prepare a web-based version, which institutions can access on all of the agencies' websites.

Priority 2: Work with the financial sector to increase utilization of existing Currency Transaction Report (CTR) filing exemptions for low-risk financial transactions.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Secretary for Financial Markets, Department of the Treasury; Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Increase utilization of current CTR filing exemptions. By November 2001, FinCEN will consult with the Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group to develop a methodology to increase usage of current CTR filing exemptions.

The Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) requires certain financial institutions to preserve specified transaction and account records, and file CTRs for currency transactions of more than $10,000 with the Department of the Treasury.[15] In 1994, Congress enacted legislation to reduce the number of

[14] The Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group is chaired by the Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury. It is co-chaired by the Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, the Director of FinCEN, and a representative of the financial sector. Congress created the group to act as a liaison between law enforcement and the private sector regarding BSA-related reporting information. See Pub. L. 102-550, Title XV, Subtitle F, § 1564, 106 Stat. 4073 (1992).

[15] See 31 C.F.R. 103.22; 31 U.S.C. § 5313.

CTRs filed by exempting certain low-risk transactions, including currency transactions conducted by state government agencies or other financial institutions, entities on major stock exchanges, and "qualified business customers" who operate cash intensive businesses and make frequent cash deposits.[16] Many entities in the financial sector, however, continue to report exempted transactions.

The Treasury Department must work to educate the financial sector about CTR-exempt transactions. FinCEN estimates that if financial institutions complied with current transaction exemptions, annual CTR filings would be reduced by at least 30 percent, substantially decreasing the burden imposed on the financial sector, FinCEN, and FinCEN's customers. Moreover, there is no reason to report cash transactions that have no value to law enforcement. If financial institutions know about the transaction exemptions, we must work with them to determine why they are not taking advantage of the exemptions, and develop mechanisms that will enable them to change their reporting systems so that exempted transactions are not reported to the Treasury Department.

Priority 3: Survey financial sector regarding the possible expansion of currency transaction reporting exemptions.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Assistant Secretary for Financial Markets, Department of the Treasury; Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Submit a report that outlines the financial industry's recommendations for further CTR filing exemptions. By October 2001, FinCEN will meet with the Bank Secrecy Act Advisor Group to examine possible additional categories of CTR filing exemptions.

Each year, FinCEN receives over 12 million currency transaction reports (CTRs). This volume places a huge burden on the financial sector, FinCEN, and FinCEN's customers. Millions of these reports, however, are of little value to law enforcement because they are low-risk transactions and subject to CTR filing exemptions.

FinCEN has published a temporary rule, which went into effect last year, that would expand the types of accounts that may be exempted from CTR reporting. Efforts should be made to encourage banks to use this rule, and in addition, FinCEN will meet with financial sector representatives to examine additional categories of CTR filing exemptions for low-risk transactions. CTR reduction is a priority and we must further reduce CTR filings without exempting those that have criminal investigative value.

[16] See 31 U.S.C. § 5313(d) – (g) (providing mandatory CTR-filing exemptions including transactions between a depository institutions, state or federal deposits, and deposits by any business or category of businesses that have little or no value for law enforcement purposes, and discretionary exemptions including "qualified business customers").

* OBJECTIVE 2: WORK TO EXPAND TYPES OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS SUBJECT TO EFFECTIVE BANK SECRECY ACT REQUIREMENTS AS NECESSARY.

Previous National Money Laundering Strategies identified the fact that depository institutions are subject to more stringent BSA requirements than other types of financial institutions as a weakness in the anti-money laundering strategy. Currently, only those institutions that come under the jurisdiction of the federal bank supervisory agencies are required to file SARs. To rectify this weakness, the 2000 Strategy called upon the Department of the Treasury to issue final rules requiring suspicious activity reporting by money services businesses (MSBs) and casinos, and to work with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in proposing rules for suspicious activity reporting by brokers and dealers in securities. The priorities below reflect the progress that has been made in this area, and reaffirm our commitment to accomplish each task.

Priority 1: Work with the SEC to propose rules for reporting suspicious activity by brokers and dealers in securities.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Securities Exchange Commission (SEC).

Goals: Issue a proposed rule and draft form for suspicious activity reporting by securities brokers and dealers (SAR-S), and begin to develop compliance guidance for the industry. Additionally, continue to educate the industry about the need to develop systems to guard against and detect money-laundering abuse by its customers. By January 2002, FinCEN will prepare and circulate for public comment a proposed rule requiring brokers and dealers in securities to file SARs, and will work with the SEC's Office of Compliance, Inspection and Examination to develop compliance guidelines for the industry. By June 2002, after review of the comments, a final rule will be issued.

FinCEN has discussed with SEC staff, self-regulatory organizations, law enforcement, and representatives from the securities industry, the measures necessary to implement an effective and practical system to detect and report suspicious transactions conducted by customers of brokers and dealers.

These organizations were predominantly of the view that because of the manner in which financial activity is conducted through brokerage firms, special rules and systems need to be applied to this industry to ensure conformity with existing examination and enforcement programs of securities regulators. Further, special rules and systems are appropriate because the securities industry generally is not utilized during the "placement" stage of a money laundering operation. However, the services and products provided by the securities industry, including (i) the efficient transfer of funds between accounts and to other financial institutions, (ii) the ability to conduct international transactions, and (iii) the liquidity of securities, do provide opportunities for money launderers to obscure and move illicit funds.

In 2000, FinCEN and the SEC met with federal banking regulators and federal and state law enforcement to discuss several key issues associated with the development of a SAR regulatory regime for broker-dealers. Thereafter, FinCEN drafted a proposed rule and, in April 2001, submitted it to the staff of the SEC for its review on technical and policy grounds. In June 2001, the SEC prepared comprehensive written comments and suggestions. FinCEN will continue to work closely with the staff of the SEC to finalize and publish a proposed SAR rule by January 2002, and publish a final rule by June 2002.

Implementation of a SAR regime for the securities industry is an extension of FinCEN's broader effort to implement a comprehensive system of suspicious activity reporting for all significant providers of financial services. FinCEN, in consultation with the SEC and the industry's self-regulatory organizations, intends to issue a proposed rule requiring SAR reporting for the securities industry, together with a draft SAR-S reporting form and compliance guidance. After the proposed rule's publication, FinCEN will hold at least two regional meetings to receive specific input on ways to make these requirements as effective as possible without imposing undue burdens on the industry or its customers. The input gained from these meetings will then be used in the preparation of the final rule, as well as the subsequent SAR guidance document.

Priority 2: Ensure that money services businesses (MSBs) are educated about their obligations under the new rules that require them to register and report suspicious activity.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Compliance Director, Small Business/Self-Employed Division, Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Goals: Accelerate implementation schedule to ensure meeting new implementation dates. By December 2001, publish final MSB registration form and proposed SAR form, and complete registration guidance materials and web site.

FinCEN has been actively addressing three challenges: (i) the complexity of the MSB industry[17] and the impact this complexity has on the implementation of the new reporting rules; (ii) the need to build the government program infrastructure to implement both rules simultaneously; and (iii) orchestrating the educational outreach program to such a diverse industry through development of forms, guidance, and other materials. To address these challenges, FinCEN has issued two rules. First, the MSB industry must register with the Department of the Treasury and, second, two classes of MSB's must report suspicious activity: (i) money transmitters; and (ii) issuers, sellers, and redeemers of money orders and travelers checks.

To ensure the rules are implemented effectively, efficiently, and cohesively, FinCEN has extended the MSB registration date to June 30, 2002, and the MSB suspicious activity reporting requirement to October 1, 2002. This will allow the industries, FinCEN, and the IRS to operate the registration system before adding the additional SAR requirements, as well as allowing the outreach campaign to continue.

FinCEN has made progress in each category through meetings with a number of industry representatives, hiring a contractor to develop the outreach campaign, holding focus groups throughout the country which developed information used to guide the creation of the rest of the education campaign, and publication of the proposed MSB registration form. Additional efforts are underway to create the necessary program and training materials, to build the various databases needed to process and house the data collected, and to work with the IRS to develop the implementation program. Development of the final MSB and proposed SAR form, as well as the website and guidance materials, will help prepare the industry for compliance. The website will contain a guide which will allow any MSB to determine whether it is subject to the BSA, and if so, how the BSA applies to that MSB and what the MSB must do to comply with the regulation.

The Secretary of the Treasury has delegated the responsibility to the IRS to examine certain non-bank financial institutions, including MSBs, to ensure compliance with the BSA.[18] The IRS performs essential functions to administer the BSA, including identifying institutions that are subject to BSA requirements, educating them regarding their BSA obligations, and conducting BSA compliance examinations. The IRS will name an MSB liaison to FinCEN to work on MSB and SAR implementation planning by September 1, 2001, and a comprehensive MSB implementation plan regarding functions, including the hiring and training of additional staff, will be submitted by December 31, 2001.

Priority 3: Provide an additional opportunity for the industry to comment on a draft rule requiring the reporting of suspicious activity by casinos and card clubs.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Compliance Director, Small Business/Self-Employed Division, Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

[18] See 31 C.F.R. § 103.46(b)(8) and Treasury Directive 15.41.

Goals: Issue a clarification and seek industry comments on a proposed rule requiring suspicious activity reporting for the casino and card club industries. Once the rule and form are issued, FinCEN will engage in a comprehensive outreach program with the casino and card club industries and with their state regulators, and provide revised guidance to the industry on SAR compliance issues. By December 2001, FinCEN will renotice the proposed SAR rule and invite comment on whether the standards for reporting suspicious activity are flexible and clear enough to apply to suspicious activity in a casino or card club. After considering these comments, FinCEN will finalize the SAR rule and thereafter provide outreach and guidance to the industry on these new requirements. In addition, FinCEN will publish for comment a proposed final SAR form and instructions.

On May 18, 1998, FinCEN published a proposed rule in the Federal Register that requires casinos and card clubs subject to the BSA to report suspicious transactions. The proposed standards for reporting were similar to those in effect for banks, but with a lowered threshold of $3,000. A new form was developed–Suspicious Activity Report for Casinos (SARC)–and is currently utilized by Nevada casinos, which are already subject to a state requirement to file SARCs with FinCEN.

After FinCEN issued the proposed SAR rule for casinos and card clubs, it received a significant number of written and oral comments expressing concern that the standards for reporting suspicious activity did not fully address the activities of a casino or card club. FinCEN will re-notice in December 2001 and will seek further comments, with a goal of issuing a final rule. Once the rule is finalized, FinCEN will undertake a concerted outreach effort (which will include SAR compliance guidance) with the casino and card club industries and their state regulators to assist federal authorities in ensuring compliance with these new requirements.

* OBJECTIVE 3: INCREASE USEFULNESS OF REPORTED INFORMATION TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES AND THE FINANCIAL INDUSTRY.

Information sharing among law enforcement, regulators, and the regulated industry is crucial to the success of this country's anti-money laundering strategy. The past year has seen increased public-private sector dialogue about law enforcement's use of reported information and how the government's analysis of reported information could be made more useful not only to law enforcement, but to the financial industry itself. As noted elsewhere in the 2001 Strategy, reporting requirements impose costs on financial institutions, and thus the government must restrict its reporting requirements to that information which is useful for fighting financial crime. In 2001, FinCEN will continue its work to ensure that the SAR program operates as a collaborative effort among all the parties involved.

Priority 1: FinCEN will continue to provide information to financial institutions and law enforcement from SARs and other BSA reports concerning the utility of these reports.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Prepare and disseminate two issues of The SAR Activity Review–Trends, Tips and Issues, and implement an industry-driven survey mechanism to determine the value of the publication. By November 2001, FinCEN will publish two issues of The SAR Activity Review. In cooperation with the financial industry, FinCEN will develop a survey designed to statistically capture viable feedback on the value of the publication to the industry, and to provide financial institutions the opportunity to suggest changes in format, content, and overall objectives.

The Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group created a SAR Feedback Subcommittee, co-chaired by FinCEN and the American Bankers Association, to develop and implement a system for addressing industry interest in understanding the value of BSA information–especially SARs–to government recipients of the information. The Subcommittee is composed of representatives of the financial industry, financial regulators, law enforcement, and FinCEN.

The Subcommittee agreed to prepare and disseminate a periodic report that would address the three primary areas of concern identified in initial meetings: (i) analytic feedback on money laundering trends, patterns and methodologies; (ii) utility and usage of SARs by law enforcement; and (iii) banking industry compliance with BSA requirements. The Subcommittee agreed that the report, The SAR Activity Review–Trends, Tips and Patterns, would initially be published twice a year with an ultimate goal of up to four issues annually. The first issue was published in October 2000, and the second issue was released in June 2001.

Financial industry representatives, federal regulators and federal law enforcement are expected to continue to actively participate in the Working Group. FinCEN will continue to coordinate the collection of SAR use and utility information from Treasury participants, including the Customs Service, Secret Service, and Internal Revenue Service. The Department of Justice, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will continue to contribute to this work.

Priority 2: The federal bank regulatory agencies will continue to identify and implement enhancements to their examination procedures where necessary to address the ever changing nature of money laundering.

Lead: All Federal Bank Regulators.

Goals: Ensure that anti-money laundering supervision is risk-focused, with increased emphasis on identifying those institutions or practices that are most susceptible to money laundering. Each federal bank supervisory agency will continue to review existing examination procedures and, when necessary, revise, develop and implement new examination procedures consistent with the goal identified above. By October 2001, the OTS will issue supplemental guidance to examiners based on its analysis of the efforts of other agencies.

In September 2000, the OCC issued its updated Bank Secrecy Act/Anti-Money Laundering Examination Handbook, applicable to banks supervised by the OCC and to national bank examiners. The handbook establishes examination procedures to evaluate a bank's system to detect and report suspicious activity, and identifies common money laundering schemes (e.g., structuring, the Black Market Peso Exchange, Mexican Bank Drafts, and factored third-party checks). The handbook also identifies high-risk products and services, including international correspondent banking relationships, special use accounts, and private banking, and establishes examination procedures to address these subjects. The revised examination procedures are more risk-focused, and require transaction testing at every bank examination.

As described above, the OCC initiated a program to identify banks that may be vulnerable to money laundering and to examine those banks using agency experts and specialized procedures. Some of those examinations focused on foreign correspondent banking. Banks are selected for such examinations based on, among other things, their location in high-intensity drug trafficking or money laundering areas, law enforcement leads, excessive currency flows, significant private banking activities, suspicious activity reporting and large currency transaction reporting patterns, and funds transfers or account relationships with drug source or stringent bank secrecy countries.

In addition to these efforts undertaken by the OCC, the OTS implemented examination procedures that were updated in 1999. The FDIC is also in the process of issuing revised Bank Secrecy Act/Anti-Money Laundering risk-focused examination procedures. The Federal Reserve Board has incorporated the use of Risk-Focused Supervision Modules in their examination process. These modules are intended to move the examination procedures to a more risk-focused approach, concentrating less on technical compliance and more on ensuring that banks implement effective systems to manage operational, legal, and reputational risks as they pertain to anti-money laundering efforts and BSA compliance.

Priority 3: Study how technological change impacts money-laundering enforcement.

Lead: Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice;
Director, United States Secret Service;
Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Determine if technologically advanced payment systems have been used to conduct illicit activity, and if so, plan a conference in 2002 to consider the implications of technological change on money laundering enforcement efforts and regulations. By September 2001, Treasury will form a working group to study whether technologically advanced payment systems have been used to launder dirty money. If it is determined that these systems have been used to commit illicit financial crimes, the committee will organize and sponsor a conference during 2002 to explore strategic responses.

Technology provides money launderers new avenues to disguise the source and ownership of their illicit proceeds. Internet money transfers and new payment technologies such as "e-cash,"[19] electronic purses, and smart-card based electronic payment systems, make it more difficult for law enforcement to trace money laundering activity and potentially easier for money launderers to use and store their illegitimate funds. Although the Bank Secrecy Act requires financial institutions to file reports and record transactions, the internet offers "peer to peer" transactions and other payment methods that may take place without the intermediary of a financial institution. These faceless transactions and anonymous dealings pose new challenges to law enforcement that must be addressed.

FATF has recognized the challenges of electronic money transfers and storage, and has directed countries "to pay special attention to money laundering threats inherent in new or developing technologies that may favor anonymity, and take measures, if needed, to prevent their use in money laundering schemes."[20] The Department of the Treasury will organize an interagency planning group to determine if individuals are using these methods to conduct illicit financial activity. Thereafter, the planning group will sponsor a conference to be held during 2002 that will explore the implications of technological change on money laundering enforcement efforts. The conference will review electronic money laundering methods and recommend strategies to counter these schemes.

Priority 4: Continue to address the role of legal and accounting professionals in combating money laundering.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN);
Chief, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

[19] Electronic cash, or "e-cash," is a digital representation of money and may reside on a "smart card" or on a computer hard drive. Using special readers, users subtract stored monetary value from the card or, in the case of computer e-cash, deduct monetary value from the electronic account when a purchase is made. When the monetary value is depleted, the user discards the card or, in some systems, restores value using specially equipped machines. Telephone calling cards are the most widely used stored-value smart cards.

Smart cards can also store vast quantities of data in a highly secure manner. Smart cards can serve many functions, including credit, debit, security (building or computer access), and storage of medical or other records. Depending on the specifications determined by the issuer, e-cash value stored on a smart card may be transferred between individuals in a peer-to-peer fashion or between consumers and merchants.

[20] Financial Action Task Force's Forty Recommendations, Number 13, <http://www.oecd.org/fatf/40Recs_en.htm> (visited July 15, 2001).

Goals: Educate legal and accounting professional organizations with regard to anti-money laundering efforts. Analyze within the FATF's review of the Forty Recommendations the appropriate role of these professionals in combating money laundering. By February 2002, develop a draft approach within the FATF to discuss with industry representatives and non-FATF members the role of professionals within the Forty Recommendations.

Because of the role they play as "gatekeepers" to the domestic and international financial system, professionals such as lawyers and accountants may be positioned to detect and deter money laundering or to facilitate the crime. A Gatekeepers Working Group has engaged in a first round of candid discussions with a range of professional bodies to solicit their efforts in assuring that their members and the businesses they serve are not unwittingly complicit in money laundering. The Working Group will continue its efforts to analyze existing professional legal and accounting literature and standards for their application, or adequacy, to detect and prevent money laundering. The Working Group plans an assessment of recent and planned educational efforts, especially as they relate to the complementary efforts of the FATF Working Group C on Gatekeepers.

 OBJECTIVE 4: ENHANCE THE ABILITY OF U.S. FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO DEFEND AGAINST MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGH FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT BANKS.

Priority 1: Discuss approaches to reduce the threat of money laundering posed by foreign correspondent banks.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Under Secretary for Domestic Finance, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Develop a set of "best practices" to minimize the money laundering exposure of financial institutions via the private banking and correspondent banking sectors of their business. By October 2001, Treasury Department officials and federal bank regulatory representatives will establish a federal/private working group to examine the threat of money laundering posed by foreign correspondent banks. By December 2001, the working group will make recommendations to reduce the threat of money laundering exposure to these banks.

The use by unknown foreign account holders of a U.S. financial institution's correspondent bank account at that foreigner's own bank hinders law enforcement's ability to combat money laundering. The U.S. Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations recognized this problem and issued a comprehensive staff report on the vulnerability of correspondent banking to money laundering activity. Although federal regulators exercise Bank Secrecy Act regulatory authority over a financial institution's activities in the United States, the regulators do not have the statutory authority to regulate non-U.S. operations of a foreign-licensed institution or the affiliate of a foreign-licensed institution that operates outside the United States because the BSA does not have extraterritorial application.

Law enforcement must address money laundering in all its forms. Therefore, Treasury officials and federal bank regulators will convene a working group to draft guidelines for anti-money laundering policies and procedures that relate to correspondent banking, including shell banks, offshore banks, and institutions in high-risk areas. The working group will consider current efforts to address the problem, including the New York Clearing House Association's draft guidelines concerning correspondent bank policies and the OCC's program to identify banks that may be especially vulnerable to money laundering activity.[21] The working group should also consider whether to propose that FATF address foreign correspondent banking in the revision of its Forty Recommendations.

The Department of the Treasury will continue to encourage U.S. financial institutions to review existing and future relationships with correspondent account customers to determine whether to apply heightened anti-money laundering safeguards to any of these relationships.

Priority 2: Require foreign banks that maintain a correspondent account in the U.S. to appoint an agent who is authorized to accept service of legal process.

Lead: Under Secretary for Domestic Finance, Department of the Treasury;
Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;

Goals: Issue a proposed regulation to require U.S. banks that offer correspondent accounts to foreign financial institutions to require those institutions to appoint an agent in the U.S. who is authorized to accept service of legal process. By October 2001, officials from the Department of the Treasury and federal bank regulatory agencies will draft a proposed regulation.

Federal regulatory and enforcement officials need to be able to access the records of non-U.S. citizens who move money in, out, and, through the U.S. via correspondent bank accounts that foreign banks maintain with U.S. banks. Currently, no provision requires the foreign bank to accept service of process in the U.S. for information relating to the users of its correspondent account, and the foreign banks are not required to produce records relating to those accounts as a condition of maintaining a correspondent account with a U.S. financial institution.

The Department of the Treasury and other interested agencies will draft and issue a proposed regulation to require U.S. banks that offer correspondent accounts to foreign banks to require those banks to appoint an agent in the U.S. who is authorized to accept service of legal process for information relating to the correspondent account that the foreign bank maintains in the U.S.

[21] The OCC selects banks vulnerable to money laundering for examination based on location in high-intensity drug trafficking or money laundering areas, law enforcement leads, excessive currency flows, significant private banking activities, suspicious activity reporting patterns, large currency transaction reporting patterns, and fund transfers or account relationships with drug sources or countries with stringent bank secrecy laws.

GOAL 4: ENHANCE PARTNERSHIPS WITH STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO FIGHT MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES.

GOAL 4:

ENHANCE PARTNERSHIPS WITH STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO FIGHT MONEY LAUNDERING THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES

The 2001 Strategy recognizes the importance of state and local government in money laundering prevention, detection, and enforcement, and draws upon this important resource in its fight against money laundering.

The Money Laundering and Financial Crimes Strategy Act of 1998 created the Financial Crime-Free Communities Support Program (C-FIC).[22] Overseen by the Department of the Treasury and administered by the Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), Office of Justice Programs (OJP), C-FIC is designed to provide technical assistance, training, and information on best practices to support state and local law enforcement efforts to detect and prevent money laundering and other financial crime activity. In FY2000, Congress appropriated $2.9 million for C-FIC, and in October 2000, Congress awarded inaugural C-FIC grants to nine different agencies throughout the country.

The Departments of the Treasury and Justice have solicited new applications from eligible candidates and intend to disperse $2.5 million in C-FIC funds by September 2001. The Departments of the Treasury and Justice will also continue to reach out to state and local partners for input on the Strategy to ensure consistency between federal, state and local priorities and programs.

 OBJECTIVE 1: PROVIDE SEED CAPITAL FOR STATE AND LOCAL COUNTER-MONEY LAUNDERING ENFORCEMENT EFFORTS.

Priority 1: Review applications and award grants under the C-FIC program.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Director, Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), Department of Justice.

Goals: Award approximately $2.5 million in C-FIC grant funds to eligible applicants. By September 28, 2001, complete review of C-FIC applications and award the next round of C-FIC monies.

The Treasury Department, in coordination with the Justice Department, operates the C-FIC program on a competitive basis. C-FIC grants are to be used as seed money for state and local programs that seek to address money-laundering systems within their areas. State and local personnel can use grant funds, for example, to build or expand financial intelligence computer systems, train officers to investigate money-laundering activity, or hire auditors to monitor money flows in certain types of high-risk businesses. In assessing and analyzing the peer review rankings, BJA and Treasury give special preference, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. § 5354(b), to applicants who "demonstrate collaborate efforts of two or more State and local law enforcement agencies or prosecutors who have a history of Federal, State, and local cooperative law enforcement and prosecutorial efforts in responding to such criminal activity."[23]

The emphasis of C-FIC grants is to award applicants who propose a strategic and collaborative response to money laundering activity. An applicant's location in or near a HIFCA will be considered a favorable factor for a C-FIC candidate, as HIFCAs are areas that have been formally designated as areas of serious money laundering concern that merit an increased focus of federal, state, and local efforts. Although state and local programs within HIFCAs are particularly appropriate grant candidates, any qualifying state or local law enforcement agency or prosecutor's office may compete for and be eligible to receive a C-FIC grant. Applications for C-FIC grants are now available.[24]

Priority 2: Evaluate the progress of existing C-FIC grant recipients.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury; Director, Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), Department of Justice.

Goals: Treasury and Justice will collect information from the 2000 C-FIC recipients and evaluate the effectiveness of the program. By August 2001, BJA will collect information from each C-FIC regarding the effectiveness of the program.

Following a competitive process, the Department of the Treasury selected nine initial grantees of C-FIC funds in Fall 2000. The initial grantees and the approved use of their C-FIC monies are as follows:

San Diego Police Department: The San Diego Police Department (SDPD) applied for C-FIC monies to fund two full-time detectives to work on money laundering investigations and to participate on the existing SAR review team administered by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of California. The C-FIC-funded detectives were to communicate regularly with both the Los Angeles and Southwest border HIFCA Task Forces. The SDPD was also to use the C-FIC funds to purchase computer equipment and provide training necessary for analytical support.

San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department: The San Bernardino County, California Sheriff's Department requested C-FIC monies to fund the creation of a money laundering investigations task force unit, which functions within a regional narcotics task force. C-FIC monies were to fund the unit's personnel costs while San Bernardino County pays for the unit's operational and administrative expenses. The unit was to target the shipment of bulk cash across the Mexican border.

New York State Police: The New York State Police applied for C-FIC funds to create a financial crimes investigation team to focus on money laundering investigations in upstate New York. The C-FIC monies were to pay for personnel expenses and cover the costs of purchasing computer support equipment. The financial crimes investigation unit was to work with State and local law enforcement agencies, regulatory agencies, and financial institutions to identify suspicious activity and to conduct preliminary investigations. The unit was to exchange information with the New York/New Jersey HIFCA Task Force, and collaborate with state regulatory and enforcement agencies.

[24] The Department of the Treasury and BJA have developed the application package for the next round of C-FIC grant funds, and posted the materials on the BJA website (www.ojp.usdoj.gov/BJA). Applications were due by July 6, 2001. It is anticipated that the Department of the Treasury will award approximately $2.5 million in C-FIC grant monies, but that no single C-FIC grant will exceed $300,000.

New York Attorney General's Office: The New York Attorney General's Organized Crime Strike Force applied for C-
FIC monies to commission a non-public study to analyze the major geographic money laundering problem areas within New York. The study was expected to enhance law enforcement's ability to allocate its resources in order to have the greatest deterrent effect on narcotics sales in New York.

Arizona Attorney General's Office: The Arizona Attorney General's Office requested C-FIC funds to establish a Southwest Border Money Transmitter Program to examine the domestic movement of laundered funds through money transmitters and money service businesses (MSBs). The C-FIC-funded program was to target bulk shipment of cash along the Southwest border, a primary purpose of the Southwest border HIFCA Task Force.

Texas Attorney General's Office: The Texas Attorney General's Office, Special Crimes Division requested C-FIC monies to fund a bulk currency prosecution project in order to expand the number of bulk cash smuggling investigations and prosecutions. The Texas Attorney General's project was to focus on the movement of cash through correspondent accounts, money exchanges, and armored car services.

Illinois State Police: The Illinois State Police applied for C-FIC monies to fund a money laundering intelligence and investigations support unit. The State Police was also to use C-FIC funds to finance training programs and purchase computer equipment to support the unit.

Chicago Police Department: The Chicago Police Department applied for C-FIC monies to create a money-laundering unit to develop and investigate cases for prosecution. The officers in the unit were to receive training in accounting, finance, banking, economics, real estate, computers, and business law, as needed.

Florida State Attorney's Office, 15th Judicial District (West Palm Beach): The Florida State Attorney's Office in West Palm Beach, Florida requested C-FIC grant monies to establish a task force to review Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs) in order to identify and target significant money laundering targets in the region. The task force was to share intelligence about money laundering activity with appropriate law enforcement agencies.

BJA will circulate a questionnaire to C-FIC award winners in July 2001 and January 2002 to collect information (number of arrests, indictments, seizures, and forfeitures that related to the C-FIC program) to help determine the effectiveness of the grants. The questionnaire will also measure the program's coordination and cooperation with HIFCA Task Forces.

 OBJECTIVE 2: IMPROVE COORDINATION WITH STATE AND LOCAL ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

HIFCA Task Forces, the centerpiece of the federal government's enforcement effort, are designed to include the participation of all relevant state and local enforcement, regulatory, and prosecution agencies. The 2001 Strategy, therefore, makes it a priority to ensure that state and local personnel participate as strategic members of the HIFCA Task Forces.

Priority 1: Increase involvement of state and local enforcement agencies through participation in the HIFCA Task Forces and SAR Review Teams.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
HIFCA Task Forces;
HIFCA Working Group.

Goals: Each HIFCA Task Force and SAR Review Team will expand state and local participation in money laundering investigations and prosecutions. By October 2001, each HIFCA Task Force will report to the HIFCA Working Group regarding the participation of state and local enforcement, regulatory, and prosecution agencies in the Task Force, and notify the Working Group about how the Task Force will seek to expand participation to include all relevant entities.

The active participation of state and local enforcement, regulatory, and prosecution agencies is vital to the success of federal money laundering programs. State and local officials have in-depth knowledge about the activities and persons that operate within their jurisdiction. HIFCA Task Forces and SAR Review Teams, therefore, will seek to incorporate and leverage this information and talent whenever possible.

The New York/New Jersey HIFCA Task Force already employs the talents of the New York City District Attorney's Offices and the New York State Banking regulators in its work, and is a good model of federal, state, and local cooperation and coordination.

 OBJECTIVE 3: ENHANCE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT'S ACCESS TO AND USE OF BANK SECRECY ACT (BSA) DATA.

The active participation of state and local law enforcement in accessing BSA data is crucial to their effectiveness in combating money laundering. State and local law enforcement agencies have direct access to BSA information through FinCEN's Gateway Program. This program is available to all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. It is imperative that FinCEN has the capability to control access and audit usage of the BSA information.

Priority 1: Provide the most effective and efficient methods for accessing BSA data.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Enhance law enforcement's electronic access to the BSA data in a secure environment. By December 2001, establish a prototype secure electronic link between FinCEN's Gateway Secure Outreach Web and RISS.net. Develop a plan to provide Gateway users with access to Gateway resources via the RISS.net.

Technological advances in the delivery of data requires FinCEN to evaluate new and emerging capabilities and incorporate appropriate systems to further enhance the Gateway Program. The six federally-funded Regional Information Sharing Systems whose membership is comprised of many of the FinCEN/Gateway Coordinating agencies have developed a nationwide information sharing network (RISS.net). The utility of this existing secure network, which is presently being utilized by state, local, and certain federal agencies, will enhance the Gateway Program.

Priority 2: Improve the Gateway System.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Enhance networking and audit/inspection capabilities. By January 2002, FinCEN will improve the efficiency of the networking process, add additional law enforcement databases, and conduct at least ten field inspections of Gateway users.

One of the key elements of the Gateway process allows FinCEN to alert two or more agencies about information on the same subjects of interest. This alert process provides a coordination mechanism for money laundering investigations conducted worldwide. The access to BSA-related data through the Gateway process is provided through a secure and carefully monitored system. FinCEN's managers and Gateway staff personnel audit queries through record reviews and on-site visits to ensure all inquiries are connected to actual or potential criminal violations.

Priority 3: Continue to provide training and outreach to state and local law enforcement regarding access to and utility of BSA data.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Conduct outreach to Gateway users. In October 2001, FinCEN will host a Gateway State and Local Coordinator conference. By January 2002, FinCEN will publish the first in a series of "newsletters" that educate Gateway users of system changes, trends in usage, success stories, etc....

Through training for state and local law enforcement officers, FinCEN will re-enforce the importance of BSA-related information available to them and demonstrate how that information is accessed, analyzed, and utilized in money laundering investigations. In-service or re-training is also critical to Gateway users to keep them informed of system changes and money laundering trends. The "newsletters" will serve as an interim communication medium to keep users current on relevant issues.

GOAL 5: STRENGTHEN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION TO COMBAT THE GLOBAL PROBLEM OF MONEY LAUNDERING.

GOAL 5:

STRENGTHEN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION TO COMBAT THE GLOBAL PROBLEM OF MONEY LAUNDERING

Law enforcement cannot limit its fight against money laundering to domestic efforts. Money launderers know that illegitimate funds can escape detection and forfeiture more easily when dispersed from country to country. Computer technology has provided the means to transfer funds quickly, easily, and silently, and offshore banks are increasingly accessible, offering tax havens and secrecy in exchange for small service fees.

Money launderers also take advantage of the laws and protections of foreign states to escape investigation and prosecution. Various nation-states have critical deficiencies in their anti-money laundering regimes: they have not enacted laws that prohibit money laundering; they do not aggressively enforce existing anti-money laundering legislation; or they fail to cooperate internationally to investigate and prosecute money launderers at large.

These global problems require a global response. The 2001 Strategy mandates that the United States (1) enhance international cooperation and effectiveness in investigating and prosecuting money launderers, (2) continue its active role in FATF and other regional task force bodies, (3) spearhead efforts to provide technical assistance, as appropriate, to non-cooperating countries and territories who have shown a willingness to change their practices, (4) work with international financial institutions to enhance anti-money laundering efforts, and (5) take unilateral action, as necessary, against money laundering threats.

* OBJECTIVE 1: ENHANCE INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AND EFFECTIVENESS IN INVESTIGATING AND PROSECUTING MONEY LAUNDERERS.

To successfully investigate and prosecute persons involved in complex, transnational money laundering schemes, U.S. law enforcement agencies must work in close coordination with their foreign counterparts. For example, in the early 1990's, the DEA, IRS-CI, and the FBI engaged in Operation Dinero, a multi-year undercover investigation that focused on the drug money laundering operations of the Cali cartels. U.S. law enforcement, in conjunction with agencies in Canada, the United Kingdom, Spain, and Italy, seized over $90 million in cash and other property, nine tons of cocaine, and arrested 116 people as a result of the investigation. Similarly, during Operation Green Ice, which also targeted the financial infrastructure of the Cali drug cartel, British and Canadian law enforcement authorities assisted U.S. Customs, DEA, and IRS-CI in conducting the criminal money laundering and drug investigation. Law enforcement authorities from Italy, Colombia, Spain, Costa Rica, and the Cayman Islands also participated.

As a result of the investigation, law enforcement officials seized approximately $66 million in U.S. currency and property, nearly 14,000 pounds of cocaine, 16 pounds of heroin, and arrested over 250 people.

The 2001 Strategy recognizes that this type of international cooperation and coordination is critical in the global fight against money laundering. Although foreign law enforcement officials do cooperate with each other on a case-by-case basis, the United States should enhance international law enforcement efforts by (i) seeking to establish model international financial task forces, (ii) considering coverage of money laundering offenses as a key objective in setting priorities for extradition and mutual legal assistance treaty negotiations, and (iii) stressing the importance of asset forfeiture as a tool to combat money laundering.

Priority 1: Review key existing extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties and recommend that coverage of money laundering offenses be considered an important objective in assessing future treaty negotiations.

Lead: Office of International Affairs, Department of Justice;
Office of the Legal Advisor, Department of State.

Goals: Complete a report that identifies key U.S. extradition and mutual legal assistance treaties that do not provide for extradition of money launderers or full cooperation in money laundering investigations. By October 2001, identify priority countries whose extradition or mutual legal assistance relationships with the United States have impeded money laundering investigations or extradition of money launderers.

Successful international cooperation in money laundering prosecutions and investigations requires that the United States ensure extradition of money launderers and mutual legal assistance on money laundering matters in bilateral treaty agreements. Appropriate officials from the Departments of State, Justice, and Treasury will work to (i) identify the priority countries from whom extradition or mutual legal assistance is needed in support of money laundering investigations and prosecutions, (ii) review the treatment of money laundering offenses under any applicable treaties with these countries, and (iii) provide this information to the Department of State, with a recommendation that the Department of State consider coverage of money laundering offenses as an important objective in assessing USG priorities for amending existing treaties or negotiating new ones.

Priority 2: Enhance international cooperation of money laundering investigations through equitable sharing of seized assets.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;

REV_00197314

Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Enhanced cooperation in international money laundering investigations through increased utilization of the international asset sharing provisions under federal law. By September 2001, establish an interagency working group to explore how international cooperation in money laundering investigations can be enhanced by pursuing international equitable sharing of assets.

Sharing the proceeds of forfeited assets among nations enhances international cooperation by creating an incentive for countries to work together in combating international drug trafficking and money laundering. The value of sharing confiscated proceeds is acknowledged in the United Nations Convention Against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances. Article 5, paragraph 5(b)(ii), provides that parties may enter into agreements on a regular or case-by-case basis to share the proceeds or property derived from drug trafficking and money laundering.[25] One commentator noted: "Such asset-sharing agreements may be among the most potent inducements to international cooperation and may result in significant enhancements of law enforcement capabilities in producing and transit states."[26]

The United States Code provides the United States government with the authority to transfer forfeited assets to a foreign country.[27] As a general rule, the amount of the forfeited funds shared with the cooperating foreign country should reflect the proportional contribution of the foreign government in the specific case that gave rise to forfeiture relative to the assistance provided by other foreign and domestic law enforcement participants.

From its inception in 1989 through December 2000, the international asset-sharing program administered by the Department of Justice has resulted in the forfeiture by the United States of $389,229,323, of which $169,397,853 has been shared with 26 foreign governments that cooperated and assisted in the investigations.

Since 1994, the Department of the Treasury shared over $21 million with seventeen different countries. The Department of Justice should continue and seek to expand their international asset sharing programs. Likewise, the 2001 Strategy requires that the Department of the Treasury make more productive use of its ability to encourage international cooperation through international asset sharing.

The Strategy also recognizes the FATF's 2001 Annual Report, which reveals that a significant number of the United States' closest allies have not fully implemented the FATF recommendations concerning asset forfeiture or international asset sharing.[28] The United States, therefore, should model the benefits of international asset sharing and encourage our allies to implement legislation that allows them to do the same.

Priority 3: Enhance mechanisms for the international exchange of financial intelligence through support and expansion of membership in the Egmont Group of financial intelligence units (FIUs) and report developments to U.S. law enforcement.

Lead: Director, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN).

Goals: Promote and expand recognition, membership, and participation in the Egmont Group, and report to U.S. law enforcement on Egmont developments and trends analysis. By December 2001, promote the recognition and use of FIUs by U.S. law enforcement agencies through an awareness campaign. By January 2002, FinCEN will connect at least seven new FIUs to the Egmont Secure Web. FinCEN will continue to reach out to new Egmont Group members and priority countries to encourage the introduction of anti-money laundering legislation, and support the development of financial intelligence units in thee countries. FinCEN will also expand the number of investigative information exchanges via the financial intelligence unit network, consistent with the Egmont Group principles. FinCEN will report to U.S. law enforcement on new Egmont partners and the availability of information through the Egmont process.

One of the most important developments in the implementation of international counter-money laundering standards has been the successful cooperation between and among FIUs. These entities are created to receive international suspicious activity reports (required under their respective domestic laws), analyze financial information related to law enforcement activity, disseminate information to domestic enforcement agencies, and exchange information internationally.

There are now fifty-three financial intelligence units participating in the "Egmont Group" of FIUs. As an active participant, FinCEN arranged 159 information exchanges in 2000. FinCEN is currently in the process of arranging training initiatives with many of the new FIUs and has already taken a lead role in the first Egmont-sponsored training seminar in 2001.

[28]28 See FATF Annual Report for 2001, at 20 Annex D, pp. 51-54 (conerning the members' self-assessment of compliance with the FATF Recommendations).

FIUs can play a critical role in ongoing investigations and in the effective implementation of anti-money laundering measures. FinCEN will initiate a program to better inform law enforcement agencies of the opportunity to obtain financial intelligence from our Egmont partners. FinCEN will report to U.S. law enforcement on a regular basis on Egmont developments, including trends analysis to enhance the efforts of our domestic law enforcement agencies to complete the financial component of civil and criminal investigations.

Priority 4: Explore the feasibility of establishing model international financial task forces to plan and coordinate significant multilateral money laundering investigations.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Discuss with our foreign law enforcement counterparts the feasibility of establishing multilateral law enforcement task forces to target major money laundering enterprises and professional money launderers that operate transnationally. The Departments of Treasury, Justice, and State, together with leading Treasury and Justice law enforcement bureaus involved in international money laundering investigations, will establish an interagency working group to discuss the formation of a model international money laundering task force that targets professional money launderers and their organizations.

The United States has built a record of successful cooperative international investigations with Canada, the United Kingdom, and other foreign countries. With the active participation of the Department of State and senior officials from Justice and the Treasury, key law enforcement bureaus with a successful track record in international investigations should consider approaching law enforcement officials in strategically allied countries to discuss the formation of an international financial crimes task force. The task force would focus on professional money launderers and major money laundering organizations that operate in or through the United States and other countries participating in the task force. Task force members would jointly investigate multinational money laundering organizations and systems through shared intelligence and operational experiences. The participating law enforcement agencies would determine how best to structure the task force and assign responsibilities. The international financial crimes task force should further coordinate activities and work closely with INTERPOL.

* OBJECTIVE 2: CONTINUE ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN FATF AND FATF-STYLE REGIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.

The international community has generated momentum to combat illicit money laundering. The 2001 Strategy seeks to take advantage of that momentum and continue the multilateral efforts that have begun to produce positive and identifiable changes in the global fight against money laundering.

In June 2000, the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) posted fifteen jurisdictions on a list of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCTs) because of serious deficiencies in their anti-money laundering systems. FATF assesses its member countries based on national compliance with FATF's Forty Recommendations (a list of anti-money laundering measures), and other countries based on the twenty-five criteria (a list of practices considered to impede the international fight against money laundering). In response, many NCCTs took corrective action to eliminate bank secrecy laws and strengthen reporting requirements to make their financial systems less vulnerable to abuse from criminal activities. In fact, in June 2001, FATF removed four countries from the original NCCT list because they substantially progressed in implementing anti-money laundering measures. However, FATF added six new countries to the list after of a second round of reviews. In short, the international community can credit the FATF-NCCT list for encouraging countries to improve their anti-money laundering systems.[29]

The United States should continue to support and actively participate in the FATF and other FATF-style regional bodies to make financial systems less vulnerable to financial crimes and money laundering.

Priority 1: Continue the United States' role within FATF in identifying and monitoring the progress of non-cooperative countries and territories (NCCTs).

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice;
Assistant Secretary, International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State.

Goals: Work through FATF to complete the second round of NCCT reviews to identify non-cooperating countries. Throughout the year, monitor the progress made by listed jurisdictions in addressing noted deficiencies and implementing corrective measures, and monitor progress made by countries removed from NCCT list in June 2001. By September 2001, (1) attend FATF plenary meeting, (2) complete the second round of NCCT reviews, and (3) participate within the FATF to remove from the NCCT list all jurisdictions that have taken appropriate measures to address previously identified deficiencies in their anti-money laundering regimes. By October 2001, impose counter-measures for listed jurisdictions that have failed to demonstrate the willingness to meaningfully respond to their NCCT listing.

The U.S. has supported FATF financially and played an active role in its governance. The 2001 Strategy mandates that the U.S. continue its involvement at every level, including efforts to enhance its leadership role in FATF and other regional bodies. With strong leadership, FATF can continue to increase its momentum and leverage international resources and influence against non-compliant jurisdictions in its international fight against money laundering.

[29] Just this summer, the Russian Federation completed work on a long-awaited comprehensive money laundering reform law.

Priority 2: Work within the FATF to revise the Forty Recommendations to reflect the experience of the international community, including the evolution of money laundering activities, and the relationship of the Recommendations to the criteria used to determine whether countries are "non-cooperative" in the fight against money laundering.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury;
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice.

Goals: Discuss the full range of issues under consideration in connection with the review of the FATF Forty Recommendations. Encourage an open and inclusive process to ensure that the views of non-FATF members are considered. By October 2001, the U.S. will develop interagency agreed positions on the issues under consideration by the three working groups established for the review of the Forty Recommendations (customer identification, corporate vehicles, and "gatekeepers"). By February 2002, the U.S. delegation will work to ensure the publication of draft issue papers by the FATF soliciting public comment on the review of the Recommendations.

In 1990, the FATF established Forty Recommendations deemed essential to establish an effective counter-money laundering regime. The international community has since recognized the Forty Recommendations as the standard of an effective anti-money laundering regime. The Financial Stability Forum, established by the G-7, has included the FATF Forty Recommendations as one of the 12 key standards in its Compendium of Standards. More recently, the U.N. Convention on Transnational Organized Crime included specific reference to the FATF Forty Recommendations in connection with a provision requiring states to implement civil measures to control money laundering. The International Monetary Fund and World Bank have also recognized the FATF Forty as the accepted standard in combating money laundering.

FATF periodically revises the Forty Recommendations to address new anti-money laundering challenges. In 1996, for example, FATF revised the recommendations (i) to expand the predicate offenses for money laundering beyond drugs to all serious crimes, (ii) to require mandatory suspicious transaction reporting, and (iii) to recognize the inherent threat posed by new technologies. To preserve the continued vitality of the FATF Forty Recommendations and reflect the experience of the international community in this area over the past eleven years, FATF must again revise its principles for action.

In 2000, the FATF agreed to initiate a review of the Forty Recommendations, including the issues of particular concern identified in the June 2000 report on Non-Cooperative Countries and Territories (NCCTs). The FATF discussed the best methods for approaching this exercise and agreed that work should begin to conduct an initial examination of the specific issues of concern. In 2001, the FATF established several working groups to facilitate and complete this process.

In 2001, the U.S. will work with the FATF to revise the FATF Forty to reflect our experience and the evolution of money laundering activities, and to address any inconsistencies between the existing recommendations and the FATF's 25 Criteria for determining whether jurisdictions are "non-cooperative" in the fight against money laundering.

 OBJECTIVE 3: PROVIDE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE TO JURISDICTIONS WILLING AND COMMITTED TO STRENGTHENING THEIR ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

The U.S. cannot combat money laundering effectively as long as there are safe havens available to move illicit proceeds. FATF has identified a number of these safe havens through the "non-cooperative countries and territories" (NCCT) process. The U.S. believes that in addition to adopting the necessary laws and regulations to combat money laundering, many NCCT jurisdictions also require substantial assistance in operating the necessary institutions to investigate and prosecute money launderers.

Priority 1: Provide technical assistance to NCCT jurisdictions, as appropriate, to develop strong domestic anti-money laundering legislation.

Lead: Assistant Secretary for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State.

Goals: Identify NCCT jurisdictions that have demonstrated a commitment to correcting their anti-money laundering deficiencies and make recommendations for providing assistance to help these jurisdictions draft anti-money laundering legislation and/or critical analysis of their legislative proposals. On an ongoing basis, monitor developments in NCCT jurisdictions that need anti-money laundering legislation, and make recommendations for delivering needed technical assistance through designated expert teams. By December 2001, recommend use of available U.S. assistance funds to satisfy anticipated technical assistance needs for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The United States, its G-7 partners, and other FATF members have valuable experience in crafting effective, comprehensive anti-money laundering legislation. The challenge is to concentrate this wealth of experience and deliver it to jurisdictions that are struggling to develop an area of financial oversight, which may, in many instances, be completely new. To accomplish this goal, the United States must coordinate with its international partners to avoid duplication of effort and ensure that appropriate experts are engaged and utilized in the most productive manner.

Priority 2: Convene an inter-agency working group to recommend the optimal use of U.S. Government and international expertise in developing and providing appropriate technical assistance to NCCT institutions and jurisdictions.

Lead: Assistant Secretary, International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, Department of State.

Goals: Convene an inter-agency working group to consider how best to optimize U.S. government technical expertise to develop strong anti-money laundering infrastructures in NCCT jurisdictions. By September 2001, identify the members of the inter-agency working group and by December 2001, the group will recommend a plan to marshal and deliver, as appropriate, U.S. and international technical assistance to address the money laundering deficiencies occurring in NCCT jurisdictions.

The Departments of Treasury, Justice, and State offer various international anti-money laundering training and technical assistance programs. Most of the funding used to carry out international anti-money laundering training and technical assistance programs is appropriated to the Department of State. The objective is to coordinate the delivery of these programs to avoid duplication of efforts, identify gaps in training, and to ensure that trainisng efforts are comprehensive and effective. An inter-agency working group will be formed to coordinate and ensure that technical assistance draws upon the proper mix of private sector, governmental, and international resources.

CTIVE 4: WORK WITH THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND WORLD BANK TO ENHANCE ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING EFFORTS.

Money laundering has the potential to weaken the rule of law and increase the risks to domestic and global financial systems. Because of these macroeconomic concerns, the International Financial Institutions (IFIs) have agreed to take on an enhanced role in the global fight against money laundering. In April 2001, the IMF and World Bank Executive Boards recognized the FATF Forty Recommendations as the accepted international anti-money laundering standard. The IFIs also agreed to: a) intensify their focus on anti-money laundering elements in all relevant supervisory principles; b) work more closely with major international anti-money laundering groups; c) increase the provision of technical assistance; d) include anti-money laundering concerns in their surveillance and other operational activities when macroeconomic relevant, and e) undertake additional studies and publicize the importance of countries acting to protect themselves against money laundering. This agenda embraces the goals of the 2001 Strategy.

Money laundering is a problem of global dimensions that requires concerted and cooperative action on the part of a broad range of institutions. The submission of the IMF/World Bank report creates an opportunity for the United States and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) to work with these institutions on anti-money laundering issues. The United States will coordinate with G-7 and FATF members to ensure that the IMF and World Bank incorporates the Forty Recommendations into their operational work and promote the Forty Recommendations as the international standard.

Priority 1: The United States will work with other nations, the IFIs, and FATF, in an effort to incorporate anti-money laundering issues into the IFIs on-going work and programs, including the development of a separate "Reports on Observance of Standards and Codes" (ROSC) module on money laundering.

Lead: Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Monetary and Financial Policy, Department of the Treasury

Goals: For IFIs to incorporate the FATF Forty Recommendations and evaluation of anti-money laundering concerns into their on-going operations with member countries this year (including as part of Financial Sector Assessment Programs – FSAPs). By February 2002, IFIs will incorporate anti-money laundering concerns into their FSAPs, and FATF will draft and present to the IMF a ROSC module on money laundering.

In April 2001, the IMF stated, "Money laundering is a problem of global concern. It poses a threat to financial system integrity, and may undermine the sound functioning of financial systems, good governance and the fight against corruption. The important link between financial market integrity and financial stability is underscored by the key principles for financial sector supervision."[30] In addition to recognizing the FATF Forty, the IFIs recognize the need to factor anti-money laundering concerns into their work with members' financial sectors.

As part of an enhanced engagement on anti-money laundering, the IFIs have agreed to: work closely with FATF and other major international anti-money laundering groups; increase the provision of technical assistance; include anti-money laundering concerns in their surveillance and other operational activities (including as part of FASPs); and, undertake additional studies and publicize the importance of countries taking steps to protect themselves against money laundering. During the second half of 2001, the IFIs and FATF plan to resolve how the Bank and Fund can adapt and operationalize the FATF Forty Recommendations, consistent with IFI mandates and processes.

The United States, its G-7 partners, and other FATF members have urged the IFIs to incorporate the relevant FATF Forty into a separate ROSC module on money laundering. Such a module would provide a comprehensive and articulated guide for assessing the status and performance of a country's anti-money laundering regime.

Priority 2: Support IFI steps to provide necessary technical assistance and regulatory training that furthers anti-money laundering efforts.

Lead: Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Monetary and Financial Policy, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Foster enhanced IFI and international engagement in developing technical assistance programs ready for implementation in early 2002. By January 2002, the United States, along with its G-7 and FATF partners, will work with the IMF and World Bank towards a proposal to provide technical assistance to willing jurisdictions.

The 2001 Strategy recognizes that the IMF and the World Bank have indicated their willingness to work with other international organizations and provide technical assistance to countries in order to combat global money laundering. The United States along with the other G-7 countries should build upon this momentum and seek to work with the IMF and World Bank to implement training programs for nations that are struggling in their fight against money laundering.

Priority 3: Support bilateral, regional, and multilateral efforts in financial fora to urge countries and territories to adopt and adhere to international anti-money laundering standards.

Lead: Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Monetary and Financial Policy, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Timely stock taking of IMF assessments of offshore financial centers' supervisory and regulatory regimes. Help foster and implement initiatives focused on anti-money laundering and financial abuse in regional money laundering fora, and by the Multilateral Development Banks (MDBs). Continue to raise money laundering issues with foreign officials in bilateral settings, as appropriate. By early next year, review with other G-7 the MDBs action plan to help members implement codes and standards.

[30] IMF Executive Board Discussed Money Laundering, IMF Public Information Notice No. 01/41, April 29, 2001.

The Financial Stability Forum's (FSF) spring 2000 report of offshore financial centers concluded that enhanced implementation of international standards by OFCs, particularly with regards to regulation and supervision, disclosure and information sharing, would help to prevent criminal abuse of the international financial system. The G-7 meeting in Rome in July 2001 called on the FSF to prepare a report on the progress in implementing its recommendations and options for any future action to be made at the Finance Ministers' meeting in September 2001.

At a meeting of the Committee on Hemispheric Financial Issues (CHFI) in Ottawa in the spring of 2001, member Finance Ministers called on the IMF and World Bank to recognize the FATF Forty Recommendations as the international anti-money laundering standard, and asked them to incorporate relevant portions of the FATF Forty in their on-going operations with members, including a ROSC module on money laundering. During the first half of 2001, APEC member Finance Ministers indicated their support for anti-money laundering efforts conducted by the Asia Development Bank and the Asia Pacific Group on Money Laundering (APG).

At the July 2001 meeting in Rome, the G-7 asked the MDBs to play a more proactive role in assisting borrowers to develop institutional capacity and appropriate strategies to meet international codes and standards, including FATF anti-money laundering standards. The G-7 asked for a joint MDB report, including an Action Plan that outlined their role in supporting implementation of codes and standards to be prepared by the end of 2001.

 OBJECTIVE 5: TAKE COORDINATED ACTION AGAINST MONEY LAUNDERING THREATS, AS NECESSARY.

The United States will combat international money laundering by taking unilateral action against money laundering threats, as necessary. In practice, this translates into domestic efforts that block and seek to forfeit assets designated by OFAC's Foreign Terrorist and Narcotics Sanctions Programs.[31] In addition, the 2001 Strategy mandates that the United States initiate appropriate countermeasures against those countries that do not have or seek to create appropriate anti-money laundering laws or enforcement mechanisms. Imposition of counter-measures, however, should be made after an evaluation of the potentially adverse effects on the U.S. banking industry.

Priority 1: Continue to provide guidance to our domestic financial institutions regarding international money laundering risks.

Lead: Under Secretary for Enforcement, Department of the Treasury.

Goals: Maintain a current set of advisories on NCCT jurisdictions. In September 2001, issue new advisories for countries added to the NCCT list.

The 2001 Strategy mandates that the Department of the Treasury, under the existing authority of the Bank Secrecy Act (BSA), issue bank advisories to domestic financial institutions in response to countries that fail to implement appropriate anti-money laundering regimes. Advisories will ensure that our financial institutions are informed about the heightened risk of doing business with these countries. The advisories, coupled with the multilateral initiative of the FATF in naming non-cooperative jurisdictions, will encourage nations to improve their anti-money laundering regimes.

[31] For a discussion of the 2001 Strategy's proposal to target blocked assets designated by OFAC's Foreign Terrorist and Narcotics Sanctions Programs for potential forfeiture, see supra Goal 1, Objective 2, Priority 3.

Priority 2: Initiate appropriate countermeasures against non-cooperative countries and territories.

Lead: Secretary of the Treasury;
Secretary of State;
Federal Reserve Board;
Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC).

Goals: Initiate appropriate countermeasures against jurisdictions that have made inadequate progress in combating money laundering. By October 2001, the Department of the Treasury, with the Departments of State and Justice, will determine what countermeasures, if any, to enact against Nauru, the Philippines, and Russia.

In June 2001, "FATF recommend[ed] to its members the application of counter-measures . . . to Nauru, the Philippines, and Russia, which were identified as non-cooperative . . . and which have not made adequate progress, unless their governments enact significant legislation to address FATF-identified money laundering concerns."[32] FATF recommended the following counter-measures:

- "Stringent requirements for identifying clients and enhancement of advisories, including jurisdiction-specific financial advisories, to financial institutions for identification of the beneficial owners before business relationships are established with individuals or companies from these countries;
- Enhanced relevant reporting mechanisms or systematic reporting of financial transactions on the basis that financial transactions with such countries are more likely to be suspicious;
- In considering requests for approving the establishment in FATF member countries of subsidiaries or branches or representative offices of banks, taking into account the fact that the relevant bank is from an NCCT;
- Warning non-financial sector businesses that transactions with entities within the NCCTs might run the risk of money laundering."[33]

None of these countermeasures should impose an unreasonable burden on our domestic financial institutions. Before any such measures are taken, the Department of the Treasury will review the potentially adverse effects of the measures on the U.S. financial services industry.

[32] See FATF Review to Identify Non-Cooperative Countries or Territories: Increasing the Worldwide Effectiveness of Anti-Money Laundering Measures, The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering, at 3 (June 1999). Since June 2001, each of the three countries identified has taken legislative steps to address the FATF's concerns.

Subject: Karl Rove Request

We received an OA65 from Karl Rove's assistant on Tuesday requesting that his contacts be exported from a Lotus Notes database that either Scott Bussey or Marvin Miller set up. They asked that it be exported to a spreadsheet or tabular text file. NG came back and said it would take 3 days to write a script to do that and asked for more information about the data format desired.

I just received a phone call from a Scott Sciarrino (SSciarrino@USTR.GOV), who works at USTR and has been assisting Karl Rove for whatever reason. He said that the data should be in comma separated text format and that the data was to be imported into Mr. Rove's Outlook on his personally owned Macintosh and also imported onto his personally owned PalmPilot. He said it would be a one-time export.

This is totally out of scope for tasks that NG does, but knowing who requested it, someone above me needs to rule on this one and decide if we should assist him.

I'll be out of the office until next Wednesday, but Jennifer's familiar with the request and the Magic ticket is #8639.

Thanks.

I have a call in to Paul on another (unofficial) matter, so I can inquire about this as well. I am sure the short answer is that they filed an amicus brief that is correct on the law, which is what SG is supposed to do in amicus briefs. Note that even the critics in the article concede there are good legal points in the brief.

Case Leaves Disabilities Activists Wary Of Bush Policy

By Sarah Schafer
Washington Post Staff Writer
Wednesday, August 8, 2001; Page E01

The Justice Department has filed a Supreme Court brief supporting a company that is being sued for allegedly discriminating against a woman with a disability, worrying some activists about the Bush administration's willingness to defend the rights of the disabled.

In the brief, the solicitor general argues that a lower court used flawed reasoning to classify the woman as disabled. The brief further argues that the high court should send the case back to the lower court so it can reconsider its ruling.

Advocates for the disabled said that the Justice Department made good legal points. But they question why the administration took sides, filing a brief that favors the employer, Toyota Motor Manufacturing Kentucky Inc.

"They could have done it because they were being hyper-technical, or they could have done it because they were trying to pander in some way to the business community," said Chai Feldblum, a professor at the Georgetown University Law Center who helped draft the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990.

Many activists said they fear the latter. They are watching closely for how the Justice Department behaves in several upcoming cases. "This is one step in the wrong direction," Feldblum said.

Dan Nelson, a Justice Department spokesman, said that "the brief speaks for itself" and would not comment further.

The White House said it is committed to supporting the rights of disabled Americans.

"As you know, President Bush is a strong supporter of the Americans With Disabilities Act," said White House spokesman Scott Stanzel, adding that the president introduced an initiative early in his presidency to fund transportation for disabled workers and encourage companies to create technology to assist them at work, among other things. "President Bush will remain vigilant in protecting the rights of individuals with disabilities, and he is proud to support the ADA. His father signed that act into law."

But groups of advocates for the disabled, seniors, labor and others are closely watching the Bush administration for signs of how supportive it will be of their various causes. And many of the more liberal groups do not like what they see so far.

As a result, they are bracing for battle. They are recruiting more people to work at the grass-roots level, creating or beefing up lobbying arms, and -- like the disability rights groups -- becoming involved in lawsuits that could set precedents.

"I think you'll see battles royale in court," said one former Clinton Justice Department lawyer who is now in private practice and asked that his name not be used. "When the advocacy group and the administration basically agree, all of the fighting is within the family. . . . When [they disagree], all of the real action is in court."

For example, earlier this year, the AARP Foundation Litigation, an affiliate of AARP, a nonprofit advocacy group for people over 50, joined the legal battle against companies that force employees to sign agreements waiving their right to sue for employment discrimination. The group worried that these agreements would hurt older workers in particular. Until a recent Supreme Court ruling, the lower courts had not been consistent in deciding the legality of these agreements.

The liberal Alliance for Justice, a national association of environmental, civil rights, mental health, women's and other advocacy organizations, is trying to boost its grass-roots efforts. It's also creating a spinoff organization "that will give us a lot more leverage to lobby and really bring our issues full force to [Capitol] Hill," said Julie Bernstein, spokeswoman for the Alliance.

Already, several groups -- including the AFL-CIO, an umbrella group for more than 60 unions -- are preparing briefs to submit in favor of the worker in the Toyota case.

That case, which the Supreme Court will address this fall, deals with the scope of the Americans With Disabilities Act, which protects people with disabilities from various forms of discrimination, including on the job. Ella Williams, an assembly-line worker at a Toyota plant in Kentucky, claims in the lawsuit that she developed carpal tunnel syndrome from her job. She alleged that the company fired her in violation of the ADA when she refused a different job that would still require her to perform some manual labor.

Toyota claimed that it tried to accommodate Williams and that she should not be considered legally disabled anyway because she was unable to perform only some tasks. An appeals court sided with Williams, and the company appealed to the Supreme Court. The brief filed by the Justice Department does not address whether Williams is disabled. It simply contends that the lower court erred in the way it decided that she was.

Andrew Imparato of the American Association of People With Disabilities said his organization does not dispute the facts of the brief. But he called the administration's overt support of Toyota "unusual" and a departure from the Clinton era. "We want to make sure they go to bat for the ADA in the same way that the Clinton administration . . . went to bat for the ADA," he said, adding that Clinton had a far-from-perfect record on supporting the law.

To that end, the association has stepped up its activism efforts and become more litigious. Two months ago, it launched a project to protect the voting rights of the disabled. It has since sued several jurisdictions that have purchased voting equipment that is ill-equipped to handle, for example, the needs of blind voters.

"If the Justice Department were more active on that issue, we wouldn't have to do that," Imparato said.

Imparato's group has also been active in opposing several of Bush's federal court nominees who they claim take too narrow a view of who should receive protection under federal disability laws.

Imparato said he hasn't lost hope, however. He and others point out that the Justice Department has filed at least one other brief that supported the disabled party in a lawsuit. In addition, a few people were recently surprised to be invited into the White House to talk about their concerns with administration officials during a march on the White House by several hundred activists.

"There's a mixed message. . . . This administration has demonstrated support," said Marcie Roth, director of advocacy and public policy for the National Council on Independent Living, an Arlington-based organization for the disabled. "We remain ever vigilant."

is a presidential memorandum, issued in October of 1995, still valid and in effect. The one I am looking at is from OCt. 3, 1995 and has to do with requiring all federal departments to begin employee awareness efforts on domestic violence. I am editting a Violence Against Women "Toolkit" that is calling for full implementation of this pres. memorandum.

Making the Grade: How the ABA Rates Judicial Nominee

By Jonathan Groner
Fulton County Daily Report
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

For the past several months, and as recently as last week, the American Bar Association has been caught in heavy political gunplay for its role in grading would-be federal judges.

Conservatives say the group exhibits a liberal bias, while Democrats who control the Senate and pass ultimate judgment on nominees say they can't do their job without the ABA's input.

But for all the noise over the ABA's role in shaping the federal bench, very little attention is paid to how the group's mysterious Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary actually conducts its reviews of candidates.

The 15-member committee almost always is made up of law firm partners, working alone as they conduct at least 40 interviews of lawyers, judges and community leaders, sometimes even including Supreme Court justices. Each of their projects takes dozens of hours-time that the lawyers otherwise could devote to clients.

The products of these efforts are detailed reports on nominees, often stretching as long as 50 pages. The highly sensitive documents are distributed through the mail to avoid computer or e-mail security breaches. They are not released even to the Senate or the White House, which are informed only of the bottom line-that any given judicial candidate has been rated "well-qualified," "qualified" or "unqualified" for the job.

And at the end of the process, all of the copies of the reports are destroyed, save one.

Conservatives long have accused the ABA, which has taken liberal stands on other issues, of viewing its judicial task force's work through a liberal lens, resulting in bias in the judiciary panel's evaluations. Earlier this year, the Bush administration stripped the committee of a special status as adviser to the White House it had enjoyed for 50 years.

The ABA always has denied the allegations. Several people who have been involved in the ratings process, from members of the ABA committee to judicial candidates under review, say they never saw evidence that politics played a role.

"They did a very thorough job, focusing particularly on the question of judicial temperament," says one judicial nominee who went through the process within the last three years. "We had a sit-down (with the ABA committee's circuit representative). It was decent and cordial. None of the questions was political in any way."

Despite the administration's decision to treat the ABA no differently from any other interest group, the committee's assessments of prospective judges still matter a good deal. Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said that he will continue to rely on the ratings of the blue-ribbon committee.

And the committee has plenty of work to do. President George W. Bush quickly has cranked out 48 nominations for the federal trial and appeals courts, 44 of which are pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The new chairman of the ABA committee, Roscoe Trimmier Jr. of Boston's Ropes & Gray, says his group has had to scramble to keep from falling behind in its investigations. Trimmier was appointed chairman of the panel at last week's ABA convention in Chicago, replacing Patricia Hynes of New York's Milberg Weiss Bershad Hynes & Lerach, whose one-year term ended.

Trimmier says the rating process places an extremely heavy burden on the committee members.

"It's incredibly time-consuming," he says. "Now that we are getting batches of nominees, we'll have to call upon former members to help out." Trimmier says he's aware of fewer than 20 former panelists nationwide who might be available to fill in.

Covert Activity

Though the process is much the same as it has been for decades, there is one key difference this year. Because the committee's long-standing relationship with the White House has been severed, the committee no longer receives advance word of projected nominees. As a result, it is no longer able to vet them for possibly disqualifying problems and warn the White House before the nomination is made.

Judicial candidates, of course, still undergo background checks conducted by the FBI before their names are submitted.

Normally, the ABA investigations are parceled out among committee members according to the federal circuits. Each of the committee's 14 members, other than the chairman, represents one of the 11 numbered circuits, the D.C. Circuit, and the Federal Circuit. Two committee members cover the sprawling 9th Circuit. All members are limited to no more than two three-year terms.

Work performed for the ABA committee is uncompensated and confidentiality rules prohibit members from farming out any of the legwork to associates or paralegals.

Trimmier says about 60 hours of interviews are conducted for each inquiry. The committee requires that a minimum of 40 people-federal, state and local judges, U.S. Attorneys, public defenders, community leaders of all sorts, and opposing counsel-weigh in with their views about a nominee, and members often talk to many more than that in compiling their reports.

The nominee is informed of the start of the process, but usually is interviewed last, after any problems have arisen, so that he or she can explain any difficulties and suggest additional people to contact.

The reports, which form the basis of the ratings, are circulated among the committee members.

The other members then vote on the ratings-by telephone or U.S. mail, never by fax or e-mail. A member who has questions about a proposed rating may ask the chairman to convene a conference call of all members. (The committee normally meets in person only twice a year, at the ABA's two major annual meetings.)

Once all members have voted, the chairman tabulates the votes and forwards the result to the White House counsel, the Department of Justice, and all members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Trimmier says the candidate is informed of his or her rating at the same time.

After that, the rating becomes public, including the existence of a minority view among the members, if any.

Looking for Litigators

If there are several simultaneous nominees for the bench in one circuit, the committee member won't be able to keep up with the pace of investigations-especially since the panel wants each report finished within 30 days after the nominee returns a completed questionnaire.

Trimmier says he can ask a member from a different region to fill in for an overburdened member, but that won't work if everyone is busy. The only other people the committee may rely upon, for reasons of confidentiality, are former members.

"It's a very broad inquiry," Trimmier says. "We look for knowledge of the law, intellectual capacity, writing ability, judicial temperament, integrity, general reputation in the community, and more." Another key aspect of any probe centers on the nominee's trial experience. "Most of the people on the committee are litigators," says a lawyer familiar with the process. "There have been ratings of not qualified on the basis of lack of experience alone. There have been minority votes on that basis. These issues do come up, and there are those who feel very strongly about it."

While committee members declined to address specific cases, a lack of trial experience is widely believed to be the reason that a minority of the panel rated current Federal Circuit nominee Sharon Prost "not qualified" earlier this month. The majority voted Prost, chief counsel to the Republicans on the Senate Judiciary Committee and a legal aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, for 12 years, "qualified."

Prost, 50, obviously has not been a litigator while on the Hill, though she had served as an attorney at the National Labor Relations Board.

David Carle, a spokesman for Sen. Leahy, announced last week that Leahy had scheduled a rare hearing during a congressional recess for Prost and for a district court nominee from South Carolina, Terry Wooten. That hearing is set for Aug. 27.

Pauline Schneider, a partner at the Washington office of Hunton & Williams, is the Federal Circuit representative on the ABA committee who would have done the inquiry on Prost. She declines comment, referring questions to Trimmier.

Fred Fielding of Washington's Wiley, Rein & Fielding is the designated D.C. Circuit representative on the panel. He is responsible for evaluating nominees to both the D.C. Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Like Schneider, he refers questions about the committee's work to Trimmier.

Fielding apparently is working to wrap up his reports on Miller & Chevalier partner John Bates and D.C. Superior Court Judge Reggie Walton, both nominated June 20 for the District Court.

"I was contacted this week by Fred Fielding regarding Bates and Walton," says Mark Tuohey III, a former District of Columbia Bar president and partner in the Washington office of Vinson & Elkins. "In fact, I have been contacted by members of the committee from the Carter era through Bush II."

Tuohey says he has always been impressed with the "professionalism" of the ABA panel.

"They've always taken their job very seriously," Tuohey says. "It's never just a wink and a nod. And it's always been nonpartisan and objective."

But not all reports about the committee's work are so rosy. Two people who have been through the process as nominees say that although the investigators are thorough and show no political bias, they should keep the nominees better informed of their status.

"They never told me what my rating was. I never got an official letter that said it," says one.

"My overall impression was that this was just not a user-friendly process. I don't just mean the ABA, but the ABA did not communicate anything to me, even the rating," says another.

Federal Judge Terrence Boyle knows he's a lucky man. He just can't tell whether his luck is good or bad.

Boyle, the chief U.S. District Court judge in Eastern North Carolina, recently got a second chance to climb the judicial ranks to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Politics thwarted his ascent in 1991 when Senate Democrats denied him a confirmation hearing after the elder President George Bush nominated Boyle, a conservative Republican.

Then, after voters last fall put George W. Bush in the White House and Republicans in charge of the Senate, Boyle got a second chance to move up to the 4th Circuit, based in Richmond, Va. In May, he was among Bush's first 11 nominees to federal appellate courts.

But two weeks later, Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont switched from Republican to independent, giving Democrats control of the Senate, and thus judicial appointments.

Now Boyle, 55, by most accounts a bright and brusque courtroom boss, is again at the mercy of Washington politics, and he can only bide his time.

"It's not fair for him to be caught up in this political thing; he was a victim before," said Bill Cobey, chairman of North Carolina's Republican Party. "They shouldn't expect a Republican president to nominate a liberal judge. They should look at his qualifications. He's a very distinguished jurist."

Lawyers who work in Boyle's court generally agree that he is a good choice for the 4th Circuit. "I think he's really one of the best trial judges I've ever appeared before," said Elizabeth City lawyer Everett Thompson, a Democrat. "He's a student of the law, he works hard, he's bright, he's fair. And I never saw him be political at all about anything."

Boyle won't talk publicly about his nomination. "Ethical considerations for judicial nominees preclude my participating in a press interview while the nomination is pending," he said.

Actually, there are no rules requiring judicial nominees to stay mum, though many do, partly out of fear of offending the senators who will decide their fate. Out of courtesy to senators, White House nominees are asked not to comment to the public until after their hearings, White House spokeswoman Jeanie Mamo said.

Since Jeffords' switch, John Edwards has joined the Senate committee that screens judicial nominees. That might give him enough clout to insist that Bush also nominate a Democratic judge, such as James Wynn of the state appeals court, to let Boyle's nomination move forward.

Meanwhile, the Senate is being lobbied by conservative and liberal political groups that have taken an interest in Boyle and his 17-year record as a judge.

Critics perceive Boyle's conservative ideology in rulings ordering congressional redistricting, barring lawsuits against the state under a federal disability law and refusing to approve a settlement in a lawsuit over employment of female guards in state prisons.

"There are many aspects of Judge Boyle's record that are extremely troubling from a civil rights perspective," said Elliot Mincberg, legal director for the liberal political group People for the American Way.

But Boyle also has upheld federal protection of red wolves over the objection of livestock farmers, halted an execution to allow psychiatric testing of a death-row inmate, allowed the production of generic forms of the antacid drug Zantac, and refused to block the moving of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. In the redistricting case, Boyle headed a three-judge panel that ruled 2-1 last year that North Carolina's 12th Congressional District, winding from Charlotte to Greensboro, was unconstitutionally drawn based on the race of voters. At the same time, the panel concluded that the 1st Congressional District in the state's northeast corner, which has a higher population of black voters, was not designed on a racial basis.

In April, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the panel's ruling, saying the 12th District was OK on the new grounds that race can affect a district's shape as long as something else - in this case, partisan politics - is a bigger factor.

Boyle's handling of that case could come in for criticism during a Senate confirmation hearing. For example, at first the panel unanimously agreed to skip a trial on the facts, but then the Supreme Court ordered a trial. But some legal scholars say Boyle and the judge who agreed with him reached a reasonable conclusion based on shifting Supreme Court rulings.

Criminal defense lawyers, some Democrats, say they like Boyle because he holds prosecutors to high standards and rewards defendants who help convict other offenders.

"He is a great friend of the Constitution," said Raleigh defense lawyer Wade Smith, a former chairman of the state Democratic Party who supports Boyle. "He rules fairly and impartially."

Life as a lawyer:

Boyle was born and reared outside the 4th Circuit in Passaic, N.J., just north of Newark and west of New York City. He graduated from Brown University, where he played football, and earned his law degree at American University.

From 1970 to 1973, he was counsel to the Republican minority on the U.S. House Subcommittee on Housing, Banking and Currency. Also in 1973, he worked as one of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' legislative assistants.

While in Washington, one day he walked into a congressional office elevator and met his future bride: Debbie Ellis, the daughter of Raleigh lawyer Tom Ellis, then Helms' political strategist.

They would marry and move in 1974 to a quaint northeastern North Carolina town about as unlike Washington as possible: the historic village of Edenton on the north shore of the Albemarle Sound, where they had friends.

Boyle went to work with a prominent law firm 25 miles northeast in Elizabeth City, the unofficial capital of the Albemarle region. Three years later, Boyle became a partner in LeRoy, Wells, Shaw, Hornthal & Riley, where he had a wide-ranging law practice.

"He has always been a very pragmatic guy," said firm partner Tony Hornthal, past president of the N.C. Bar Association. "He had a way of cutting through the chaff and getting down to the heart of the matter."

But Boyle had such conservative fiscal views, Hornthal recalled, that his partners joked that he must bury his money in his yard.

"When we made money decisions about the firm," Hornthal said, "we ignored what Boyle said."

A demanding judge:

His brother-in-law, Hood Ellis, a lawyer in Boyle's old firm, said Boyle is shy and private and doesn't talk much about himself, even with family. "There's not too many people who crawl inside his inner ring," he said.

But Boyle also is competitive and loves tennis, football and jokes.

"He likes to win, but he's a good sport," Ellis said. "He has a very good sense of humor. And he has the greatest laugh of all time. Once you've heard him guffaw, you'll never forget it."

In 1984, President Reagan nominated Boyle as a federal trial judge at Helms' urging, and he was confirmed. His home office and court are in Elizabeth City, but he also hears cases in Greenville, New Bern, Wilmington and Raleigh.

In his courtroom, Boyle can be curt, combative, even insulting, some lawyers say. Others appreciate his direct style and firm courtroom command.

He can be hard on either side.

In a 1993 drug case against former Wake Forest Mayor Jimmy Ray, Boyle chewed out a federal prosecutor for negotiating a plea bargain he doubted was justified.

"Was the indictment not factually grounded?" he demanded to know. "What right do you have to make him resign?"

But Boyle doesn't seem mean so much as given to intense intellectual and verbal sparring, like a tough college professor.

Boyle displays an intelligent, dry wit and can be very funny. But he can quickly shift from joking with lawyers in court to grilling them.

Professor Boyle's lectures:

During recent criminal sentencing hearings in New Bern, Boyle lectured defense lawyers and prosecutors on their jobs and gave a pointed speech on bank robbery and its proper punishment.

He criticized a prosecutor for failing to bring victims to a hearing and chided a defense lawyer for requesting a lighter sentence than normal. Then Boyle paused and asked the defense lawyer whether he wanted to ask for anything else. The lawyer politely said he did not.

"You don't want to provoke another speech like that, do you?" Boyle asked, and then smiled. "All right."

Later, just before sending a man to prison for six months for an air-rage scuffle, Boyle warned him to straighten out soon.

"Do you know why you're getting an active sentence?" he asked. "Give me some of the reasons.

But then before the man could answer, Boyle veered off on a tangent about the foolishness of airlines serving alcohol.

He then recounted the man's considerable criminal history and told him: "You haven't been an Eagle Scout. This thing's been coming. You keep this up, and you're going to be back in front of me, catching more time. We'll be doing this forever. That's the bad news."

Unless, that is, Boyle goes to the 4th Circuit. Then he'll be reviewing the decisions of other trial judges, correcting their mistakes or applying their rulings to the circuit's five states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

The American Bar Association has given Boyle a "qualified" rating for the job, its middle ranking. Roger Gregory, a Democrat whom the Senate confirmed to the court last month, had the same rating.

Now it is up to Edwards, Helms, and 98 other senators to decide whether Boyle will make the cut.

"I don't want politics to stop us from having a judge on the 4th Circuit from North Carolina," said Smith, the Raleigh lawyer.

"I think he would happily rule against me and happily rule for me whether I'm a Republican or a Democrat. I think he makes his decisions on the facts, and that's the best we could ever hope. Give me judges like that."

White House Gloomy Over Judiciary Prospects

By Major Garrett
CNN

"Improper" delays engineered by Senate Republicans to thwart President Clinton's judicial nominees so poisoned relations with Democrats that President Bush may see only five of his own choices for the federal bench confirmed this year, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzalez said Tuesday.

"We are trying to work through some of the logjams, but there is a lot of bitterness," Gonzales told CNN. "This is a bit of a payback. I can't argue with some of their [the Democrats'] perceptions."

York Times

Gonzales noted that some Republican senators placed "holds" on Clinton judicial nominees, denying them a Judiciary Committee hearing or a floor vote for as long as four years.

"That was wrong," he said. "That's not right. Part of this is based on the conduct of the Republican senators in the past. We had nothing to do with this problem. But it does affect us."

Gonzales was exceedingly gloomy about the prospects of winning approval for Bush judicial nominees, predicting Bush would win no more than five judicial confirmations this year.

Gonzales said each of the three previous presidents won confirmation for more than 40 judicial nominees in their first year in office.

"It's a major problem and it's going to get worse," he said. "Our best argument is that the partisanship over judicial nominations has historically been saved for the end of an administration and not at the beginning. We would expect the same kind of deference given to Reagan, Bush and Clinton."

Gonzales said Democrats are reluctant to do so, however, because they fear Bush will "stack the federal judiciary with conservatives."

Gonzales said those fears are overwrought and pointed to Bush's renomination of Roger Gregory, an African-American lawyer from Richmond, Virginia.
Clinton nominated Gregory to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, but Senate Republicans stalled the nomination. Frustrated, Clinton gave Gregory a recess appointment to the bench, one that would have expired after one year unless Bush renominated him.

"We asked Roger Gregory the same questions and he gave us the answers we expected," Gonzales said.

"The answers were what you would expect from a good, solid, conservative judge. We don't ask potential nominees about abortion or affirmative action. We ask how you would render a decision."

Gregory is one of four federal judicial nominees to have won Senate confirmation. Overall, Bush has nominated 44 judges to the federal courts. Of those 22 are for the circuit court of appeals and 22 are for district court positions. Forty nominees await confirmation.

Making the Grade: How the ABA Rates Judicial Nominee

By Jonathan Groner
Fulton County Daily Report
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

For the past several months, and as recently as last week, the American Bar Association has been caught in heavy political gunplay for its role in grading would-be federal judges.

Conservatives say the group exhibits a liberal bias, while Democrats who control the Senate and pass ultimate judgment on nominees say they can't do their job without the ABA's input.

But for all the noise over the ABA's role in shaping the federal bench, very little attention is paid to how the group's mysterious Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary actually conducts its reviews of candidates.

The 15-member committee almost always is made up of law firm partners, working alone as they conduct at least 40 interviews of lawyers, judges and community leaders, sometimes even including Supreme Court justices. Each of their projects takes dozens of hours-time that the lawyers otherwise could devote to clients.

The products of these efforts are detailed reports on nominees, often stretching as long as 50 pages. The highly sensitive documents are distributed through the mail to avoid computer or e-mail security breaches. They are not released even to the Senate or the White House, which are informed only of the bottom line-that any given judicial candidate has been rated "well-qualified," "qualified" or "unqualified" for the job.

And at the end of the process, all of the copies of the reports are destroyed, save one.

Conservatives long have accused the ABA, which has taken liberal stands on other issues, of viewing its judicial task force's work through a liberal lens, resulting in bias in the judiciary panel's evaluations. Earlier this year, the Bush administration stripped the committee of a special status as adviser to the White House it had enjoyed for 50 years.

The ABA always has denied the allegations. Several people who have been involved in the ratings process, from members of the ABA committee to judicial candidates under review, say they never saw evidence that politics played a role.

"They did a very thorough job, focusing particularly on the question of judicial temperament," says one judicial nominee who went through the process within the last three years. "We had a sit-down (with the ABA committee's circuit representative). It was decent and cordial. None of the questions was political in any way."

Despite the administration's decision to treat the ABA no differently from any other interest group, the committee's assessments of prospective judges still matter a good deal. Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said that he will continue to rely on the ratings of the blue-ribbon committee.

And the committee has plenty of work to do. President George W. Bush quickly has cranked out 48 nominations for the federal trial and appeals courts, 44 of which are pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The new chairman of the ABA committee, Roscoe Trimmier Jr. of Boston's Ropes & Gray, says his group has had to scramble to keep from falling behind in its investigations. Trimmier was appointed chairman of the panel at last week's ABA convention in Chicago, replacing Patricia Hynes of New York's Milberg Weiss Bershad Hynes & Lerach, whose one-year term ended.

Trimmier says the rating process places an extremely heavy burden on the committee members.

"It's incredibly time-consuming," he says. "Now that we are getting batches of nominees, we'll have to call upon former members to help out." Trimmier says he's aware of fewer than 20 former panelists nationwide who might be available to fill in.

Covert Activity

Though the process is much the same as it has been for decades, there is one key difference this year. Because the committee's long-standing relationship with the White House has been severed, the committee no longer receives advance word of projected nominees. As a result, it is no longer able to vet them for possibly disqualifying problems and warn the White House before the nomination is made.

Judicial candidates, of course, still undergo background checks conducted by the FBI before their names are submitted.

Normally, the ABA investigations are parceled out among committee members according to the federal circuits. Each of the committee's 14 members, other than the chairman, represents one of the 11 numbered circuits, the D.C. Circuit, and the Federal Circuit. Two committee members cover the sprawling 9th Circuit. All members are limited to no more than two three-year terms.

Work performed for the ABA committee is uncompensated and confidentiality rules prohibit members from farming out any of the legwork to associates or paralegals.

Trimmier says about 60 hours of interviews are conducted for each inquiry. The committee requires that a minimum of 40 people-federal, state and local judges, U.S. Attorneys, public defenders, community leaders of all sorts, and opposing counsel-weigh in with their views about a nominee, and members often talk to many more than that in compiling their reports.

The nominee is informed of the start of the process, but usually is interviewed last, after any problems have arisen, so that he or she can explain any difficulties and suggest additional people to contact.

The reports, which form the basis of the ratings, are circulated among the committee members.

The other members then vote on the ratings-by telephone or U.S. mail, never by fax or e-mail. A member who has questions about a proposed rating may ask the chairman to convene a conference call of all members. (The committee normally meets in person only twice a year, at the ABA's two major annual meetings.)

Once all members have voted, the chairman tabulates the votes and forwards the result to the White House counsel, the Department of Justice, and all members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Trimmier says the candidate is informed of his or her rating at the same time.

After that, the rating becomes public, including the existence of a minority view among the members, if any.

Looking for Litigators

If there are several simultaneous nominees for the bench in one circuit, the committee member won't be able to keep up with the pace of investigations-especially since the panel wants each report finished within 30 days after the nominee returns a completed questionnaire.

Trimmier says he can ask a member from a different region to fill in for an overburdened member, but that won't work if everyone is busy. The only other people the committee may rely upon, for reasons of confidentiality, are former members.

"It's a very broad inquiry," Trimmier says. "We look for knowledge of the law, intellectual capacity, writing ability, judicial temperament, integrity, general reputation in the community, and more." Another key aspect of any probe centers on the nominee's trial experience. "Most of the people on the committee are litigators," says a lawyer familiar with the process. "There have been ratings of not qualified on the basis of lack of experience alone. There have been minority votes on that basis. These issues do come up, and there are those who feel very strongly about it."

While committee members declined to address specific cases, a lack of trial experience is widely believed to be the reason that a minority of the panel rated current Federal Circuit nominee Sharon Prost "not qualified" earlier this month. The majority voted Prost, chief counsel to the Republicans on the Senate Judiciary Committee and a legal aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, for 12 years, "qualified."

Prost, 50, obviously has not been a litigator while on the Hill, though she had served as an attorney at the National Labor Relations Board.

David Carle, a spokesman for Sen. Leahy, announced last week that Leahy had scheduled a rare hearing during a congressional recess for Prost and for a district court nominee from South Carolina, Terry Wooten. That hearing is set for Aug. 27.

Pauline Schneider, a partner at the Washington office of Hunton & Williams, is the Federal Circuit representative on the ABA committee who would have done the inquiry on Prost. She declines comment, referring questions to Trimmier.

Fred Fielding of Washington's Wiley, Rein & Fielding is the designated D.C. Circuit representative on the panel. He is responsible for evaluating nominees to both the D.C. Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Like Schneider, he refers questions about the committee's work to Trimmier.

Fielding apparently is working to wrap up his reports on Miller & Chevalier partner John Bates and D.C. Superior Court Judge Reggie Walton, both nominated June 20 for the District Court.

"I was contacted this week by Fred Fielding regarding Bates and Walton," says Mark Tuohey III, a former District of Columbia Bar president and partner in the Washington office of Vinson & Elkins. "In fact, I have been contacted by members of the committee from the Carter era through Bush II."

Tuohey says he has always been impressed with the "professionalism" of the ABA panel.

"They've always taken their job very seriously," Tuohey says. "It's never just a wink and a nod. And it's always been nonpartisan and objective."

But not all reports about the committee's work are so rosy. Two people who have been through the process as nominees say that although the investigators are thorough and show no political bias, they should keep the nominees better informed of their status.

"They never told me what my rating was. I never got an official letter that said it," says one.

"My overall impression was that this was just not a user-friendly process. I don't just mean the ABA, but the ABA did not communicate anything to me, even the rating," says another.

Federal Judge Terrence Boyle knows he's a lucky man. He just can't tell whether his luck is good or bad.

Boyle, the chief U.S. District Court judge in Eastern North Carolina, recently got a second chance to climb the judicial ranks to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Politics thwarted his ascent in 1991 when Senate Democrats denied him a confirmation hearing after the elder President George Bush nominated Boyle, a conservative Republican.

Then, after voters last fall put George W. Bush in the White House and Republicans in charge of the Senate, Boyle got a second chance to move up to the 4th Circuit, based in Richmond, Va. In May, he was among Bush's first 11 nominees to federal appellate courts.

But two weeks later, Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont switched from Republican to independent, giving Democrats control of the Senate, and thus judicial appointments.

Now Boyle, 55, by most accounts a bright and brusque courtroom boss, is again at the mercy of Washington politics, and he can only bide his time.

"It's not fair for him to be caught up in this political thing; he was a victim before," said Bill Cobey, chairman of North Carolina's Republican Party. "They shouldn't expect a Republican president to nominate a liberal judge. They should look at his qualifications. He's a very distinguished jurist."

Lawyers who work in Boyle's court generally agree that he is a good choice for the 4th Circuit. "I think he's really one of the best trial judges I've ever appeared before," said Elizabeth City lawyer Everett Thompson, a Democrat. "He's a student of the law, he works hard, he's bright, he's fair. And I never saw him be political at all about anything."

Boyle won't talk publicly about his nomination. "Ethical considerations for judicial nominees preclude my participating in a press interview while the nomination is pending," he said.

Actually, there are no rules requiring judicial nominees to stay mum, though many do, partly out of fear of offending the senators who will decide their fate. Out of courtesy to senators, White House nominees are asked not to comment to the public until after their hearings, White House spokeswoman Jeanie Mamo said.

Since Jeffords' switch, John Edwards has joined the Senate committee that screens judicial nominees. That might give him enough clout to insist that Bush also nominate a Democratic judge, such as James Wynn of the state appeals court, to let Boyle's nomination move forward.

Meanwhile, the Senate is being lobbied by conservative and liberal political groups that have taken an interest in Boyle and his 17-year record as a judge.

Critics perceive Boyle's conservative ideology in rulings ordering congressional redistricting, barring lawsuits against the state under a federal disability law and refusing to approve a settlement in a lawsuit over employment of female guards in state prisons.

"There are many aspects of Judge Boyle's record that are extremely troubling from a civil rights perspective," said Elliot Mincberg, legal director for the liberal political group People for the American Way.

But Boyle also has upheld federal protection of red wolves over the objection of livestock farmers, halted an execution to allow psychiatric testing of a death-row inmate, allowed the production of generic forms of the antacid drug Zantac, and refused to block the moving of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. In the redistricting case, Boyle headed a three-judge panel that ruled 2-1 last year that North Carolina's 12th Congressional District, winding from Charlotte to Greensboro, was unconstitutionally drawn based on the race of voters. At the same time, the panel concluded that the 1st Congressional District in the state's northeast corner, which has a higher population of black voters, was not designed on a racial basis.

In April, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the panel's ruling, saying the 12th District was OK on the new grounds that race can affect a district's shape as long as something else - in this case, partisan politics - is a bigger factor.

Boyle's handling of that case could come in for criticism during a Senate confirmation hearing. For example, at first the panel unanimously agreed to skip a trial on the facts, but then the Supreme Court ordered a trial. But some legal scholars say Boyle and the judge who agreed with him reached a reasonable conclusion based on shifting Supreme Court rulings.

Criminal defense lawyers, some Democrats, say they like Boyle because he holds prosecutors to high standards and rewards defendants who help convict other offenders.

"He is a great friend of the Constitution," said Raleigh defense lawyer Wade Smith, a former chairman of the state Democratic Party who supports Boyle. "He rules fairly and impartially."

Life as a lawyer:

Boyle was born and reared outside the 4th Circuit in Passaic, N.J., just north of Newark and west of New York City. He graduated from Brown University, where he played football, and earned his law degree at American University.

From 1970 to 1973, he was counsel to the Republican minority on the U.S. House Subcommittee on Housing, Banking and Currency. Also in 1973, he worked as one of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' legislative assistants.

While in Washington, one day he walked into a congressional office elevator and met his future bride: Debbie Ellis, the daughter of Raleigh lawyer Tom Ellis, then Helms' political strategist.

They would marry and move in 1974 to a quaint northeastern North Carolina town about as unlike Washington as possible: the historic village of Edenton on the north shore of the Albemarle Sound, where they had friends.

Boyle went to work with a prominent law firm 25 miles northeast in Elizabeth City, the unofficial capital of the Albemarle region. Three years later, Boyle became a partner in LeRoy, Wells, Shaw, Hornthal & Riley, where he had a wide-ranging law practice.

"He has always been a very pragmatic guy," said firm partner Tony Hornthal, past president of the N.C. Bar Association. "He had a way of cutting through the chaff and getting down to the heart of the matter."

But Boyle had such conservative fiscal views, Hornthal recalled, that his partners joked that he must bury his money in his yard.

"When we made money decisions about the firm," Hornthal said, "we ignored what Boyle said."

A demanding judge:

His brother-in-law, Hood Ellis, a lawyer in Boyle's old firm, said Boyle is shy and private and doesn't talk much about himself, even with family. "There's not too many people who crawl inside his inner ring," he said.

But Boyle also is competitive and loves tennis, football and jokes.

"He likes to win, but he's a good sport," Ellis said. "He has a very good sense of humor. And he has the greatest laugh of all time. Once you've heard him guffaw, you'll never forget it."

In 1984, President Reagan nominated Boyle as a federal trial judge at Helms' urging, and he was confirmed. His home office and court are in Elizabeth City, but he also hears cases in Greenville, New Bern, Wilmington and Raleigh.

In his courtroom, Boyle can be curt, combative, even insulting, some lawyers say. Others appreciate his direct style and firm courtroom command.

He can be hard on either side.

In a 1993 drug case against former Wake Forest Mayor Jimmy Ray, Boyle chewed out a federal prosecutor for negotiating a plea bargain he doubted was justified.

"Was the indictment not factually grounded?" he demanded to know. "What right do you have to make him resign?"

But Boyle doesn't seem mean so much as given to intense intellectual and verbal sparring, like a tough college professor.

Boyle displays an intelligent, dry wit and can be very funny. But he can quickly shift from joking with lawyers in court to grilling them.

Professor Boyle's lectures:

During recent criminal sentencing hearings in New Bern, Boyle lectured defense lawyers and prosecutors on their jobs and gave a pointed speech on bank robbery and its proper punishment.

He criticized a prosecutor for failing to bring victims to a hearing and chided a defense lawyer for requesting a lighter sentence than normal. Then Boyle paused and asked the defense lawyer whether he wanted to ask for anything else. The lawyer politely said he did not.

"You don't want to provoke another speech like that, do you?" Boyle asked, and then smiled. "All right."

Later, just before sending a man to prison for six months for an air-rage scuffle, Boyle warned him to straighten out soon.

"Do you know why you're getting an active sentence?" he asked. "Give me some of the reasons.

But then before the man could answer, Boyle veered off on a tangent about the foolishness of airlines serving alcohol.

He then recounted the man's considerable criminal history and told him: "You haven't been an Eagle Scout. This thing's been coming. You keep this up, and you're going to be back in front of me, catching more time. We'll be doing this forever. That's the bad news."

Unless, that is, Boyle goes to the 4th Circuit. Then he'll be reviewing the decisions of other trial judges, correcting their mistakes or applying their rulings to the circuit's five states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

The American Bar Association has given Boyle a "qualified" rating for the job, its middle ranking. Roger Gregory, a Democrat whom the Senate confirmed to the court last month, had the same rating.

Now it is up to Edwards, Helms, and 98 other senators to decide whether Boyle will make the cut.

"I don't want politics to stop us from having a judge on the 4th Circuit from North Carolina," said Smith, the Raleigh lawyer.

"I think he would happily rule against me and happily rule for me whether I'm a Republican or a Democrat. I think he makes his decisions on the facts, and that's the best we could ever hope. Give me judges like that."

White House Gloomy Over Judiciary Prospects

By Major Garrett
CNN
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

"Improper" delays engineered by Senate Republicans to thwart President Clinton's judicial nominees so poisoned relations with Democrats that President Bush may see only five of his own choices for the federal bench confirmed this year, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzalez said Tuesday.

"We are trying to work through some of the logjams, but there is a lot of bitterness," Gonzales told CNN. "This is a bit of a payback. I can't argue with some of their [the Democrats'] perceptions."

Gonzales noted that some Republican senators placed "holds" on Clinton judicial nominees, denying them a Judiciary Committee hearing or a floor vote for as long as four years.

"That was wrong," he said. "That's not right. Part of this is based on the conduct of the Republican senators in the past. We had nothing to do with this problem. But it does affect us."

Gonzales was exceedingly gloomy about the prospects of winning approval for Bush judicial nominees, predicting Bush would win no more than five judicial confirmations this year.

Gonzales said each of the three previous presidents won confirmation for more than 40 judicial nominees in their first year in office.

"It's a major problem and it's going to get worse," he said. "Our best argument is that the partisanship over judicial nominations has historically been saved for the end of an administration and not at the beginning. We would expect the same kind of deference given to Reagan, Bush and Clinton."

Gonzales said Democrats are reluctant to do so, however, because they fear Bush will "stack the federal judiciary with conservatives."

Gonzales said those fears are overwrought and pointed to Bush's renomination of Roger Gregory, an African-American lawyer from Richmond, Virginia.
Clinton nominated Gregory to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, but Senate Republicans stalled the nomination. Frustrated, Clinton gave Gregory a recess appointment to the bench, one that would have expired after one year unless Bush renominated him.

"We asked Roger Gregory the same questions and he gave us the answers we expected," Gonzales said.

"The answers were what you would expect from a good, solid, conservative judge. We don't ask potential nominees about abortion or affirmative action. We ask how you would render a decision."

Gregory is one of four federal judicial nominees to have won Senate confirmation. Overall, Bush has nominated 44 judges to the federal courts. Of those 22 are for the circuit court of appeals and 22 are for district court positions. Forty nominees await confirmation.

Making the Grade: How the ABA Rates Judicial Nominee

By Jonathan Groner
Fulton County Daily Report
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

For the past several months, and as recently as last week, the American Bar Association has been caught in heavy political gunplay for its role in grading would-be federal judges.

Conservatives say the group exhibits a liberal bias, while Democrats who control the Senate and pass ultimate judgment on nominees say they can't do their job without the ABA's input.

But for all the noise over the ABA's role in shaping the federal bench, very little attention is paid to how the group's mysterious Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary actually conducts its reviews of candidates.

The 15-member committee almost always is made up of law firm partners, working alone as they conduct at least 40 interviews of lawyers, judges and community leaders, sometimes even including Supreme Court justices. Each of their projects takes dozens of hours-time that the lawyers otherwise could devote to clients.

The products of these efforts are detailed reports on nominees, often stretching as long as 50 pages. The highly sensitive documents are distributed through the mail to avoid computer or e-mail security breaches. They are not released even to the Senate or the White House, which are informed only of the bottom line-that any given judicial candidate has been rated "well-qualified," "qualified" or "unqualified" for the job.

And at the end of the process, all of the copies of the reports are destroyed, save one.

Conservatives long have accused the ABA, which has taken liberal stands on other issues, of viewing its judicial task force's work through a liberal lens, resulting in bias in the judiciary panel's evaluations. Earlier this year, the Bush administration stripped the committee of a special status as adviser to the White House it had enjoyed for 50 years.

The ABA always has denied the allegations. Several people who have been involved in the ratings process, from members of the ABA committee to judicial candidates under review, say they never saw evidence that politics played a role.

"They did a very thorough job, focusing particularly on the question of judicial temperament," says one judicial nominee who went through the process within the last three years. "We had a sit-down (with the ABA committee's circuit representative). It was decent and cordial. None of the questions was political in any way."

Despite the administration's decision to treat the ABA no differently from any other interest group, the committee's assessments of prospective judges still matter a good deal. Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said that he will continue to rely on the ratings of the blue-ribbon committee.

And the committee has plenty of work to do. President George W. Bush quickly has cranked out 48 nominations for the federal trial and appeals courts, 44 of which are pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The new chairman of the ABA committee, Roscoe Trimmier Jr. of Boston's Ropes & Gray, says his group has had to scramble to keep from falling behind in its investigations. Trimmier was appointed chairman of the panel at last week's ABA convention in Chicago, replacing Patricia Hynes of New York's Milberg Weiss Bershad Hynes & Lerach, whose one-year term ended.

Trimmier says the rating process places an extremely heavy burden on the committee members.

"It's incredibly time-consuming," he says. "Now that we are getting batches of nominees, we'll have to call upon former members to help out." Trimmier says he's aware of fewer than 20 former panelists nationwide who might be available to fill in.

Covert Activity

Though the process is much the same as it has been for decades, there is one key difference this year. Because the committee's long-standing relationship with the White House has been severed, the committee no longer receives advance word of projected nominees. As a result, it is no longer able to vet them for possibly disqualifying problems and warn the White House before the nomination is made.

Judicial candidates, of course, still undergo background checks conducted by the FBI before their names are submitted.

Normally, the ABA investigations are parceled out among committee members according to the federal circuits. Each of the committee's 14 members, other than the chairman, represents one of the 11 numbered circuits, the D.C. Circuit, and the Federal Circuit. Two committee members cover the sprawling 9th Circuit. All members are limited to no more than two three-year terms.

Work performed for the ABA committee is uncompensated and confidentiality rules prohibit members from farming out any of the legwork to associates or paralegals.

Trimmier says about 60 hours of interviews are conducted for each inquiry. The committee requires that a minimum of 40 people-federal, state and local judges, U.S. Attorneys, public defenders, community leaders of all sorts, and opposing counsel-weigh in with their views about a nominee, and members often talk to many more than that in compiling their reports.

The nominee is informed of the start of the process, but usually is interviewed last, after any problems have arisen, so that he or she can explain any difficulties and suggest additional people to contact.

The reports, which form the basis of the ratings, are circulated among the committee members.

The other members then vote on the ratings-by telephone or U.S. mail, never by fax or e-mail. A member who has questions about a proposed rating may ask the chairman to convene a conference call of all members. (The committee normally meets in person only twice a year, at the ABA's two major annual meetings.)

Once all members have voted, the chairman tabulates the votes and forwards the result to the White House counsel, the Department of Justice, and all members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Trimmier says the candidate is informed of his or her rating at the same time.

After that, the rating becomes public, including the existence of a minority view among the members, if any.

Looking for Litigators

If there are several simultaneous nominees for the bench in one circuit, the committee member won't be able to keep up with the pace of investigations-especially since the panel wants each report finished within 30 days after the nominee returns a completed questionnaire.

Trimmier says he can ask a member from a different region to fill in for an overburdened member, but that won't work if everyone is busy. The only other people the committee may rely upon, for reasons of confidentiality, are former members.

"It's a very broad inquiry," Trimmier says. "We look for knowledge of the law, intellectual capacity, writing ability, judicial temperament, integrity, general reputation in the community, and more." Another key aspect of any probe centers on the nominee's trial experience. "Most of the people on the committee are litigators," says a lawyer familiar with the process. "There have been ratings of not qualified on the basis of lack of experience alone. There have been minority votes on that basis. These issues do come up, and there are those who feel very strongly about it."

While committee members declined to address specific cases, a lack of trial experience is widely believed to be the reason that a minority of the panel rated current Federal Circuit nominee Sharon Prost "not qualified" earlier this month. The majority voted Prost, chief counsel to the Republicans on the Senate Judiciary Committee and a legal aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, for 12 years, "qualified."

Prost, 50, obviously has not been a litigator while on the Hill, though she had served as an attorney at the National Labor Relations Board.

David Carle, a spokesman for Sen. Leahy, announced last week that Leahy had scheduled a rare hearing during a congressional recess for Prost and for a district court nominee from South Carolina, Terry Wooten. That hearing is set for Aug. 27.

Pauline Schneider, a partner at the Washington office of Hunton & Williams, is the Federal Circuit representative on the ABA committee who would have done the inquiry on Prost. She declines comment, referring questions to Trimmier.

Fred Fielding of Washington's Wiley, Rein & Fielding is the designated D.C. Circuit representative on the panel. He is responsible for evaluating nominees to both the D.C. Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Like Schneider, he refers questions about the committee's work to Trimmier.

Fielding apparently is working to wrap up his reports on Miller & Chevalier partner John Bates and D.C. Superior Court Judge Reggie Walton, both nominated June 20 for the District Court.

"I was contacted this week by Fred Fielding regarding Bates and Walton," says Mark Tuohey III, a former District of Columbia Bar president and partner in the Washington office of Vinson & Elkins. "In fact, I have been contacted by members of the committee from the Carter era through Bush II."

Tuohey says he has always been impressed with the "professionalism" of the ABA panel.

"They've always taken their job very seriously," Tuohey says. "It's never just a wink and a nod. And it's always been nonpartisan and objective."

But not all reports about the committee's work are so rosy. Two people who have been through the process as nominees say that although the investigators are thorough and show no political bias, they should keep the nominees better informed of their status.

"They never told me what my rating was. I never got an official letter that said it," says one.

"My overall impression was that this was just not a user-friendly process. I don't just mean the ABA, but the ABA did not communicate anything to me, even the rating," says another.

Federal Judge Terrence Boyle knows he's a lucky man. He just can't tell whether his luck is good or bad.

Boyle, the chief U.S. District Court judge in Eastern North Carolina, recently got a second chance to climb the judicial ranks to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Politics thwarted his ascent in 1991 when Senate Democrats denied him a confirmation hearing after the elder President George Bush nominated Boyle, a conservative Republican.

Then, after voters last fall put George W. Bush in the White House and Republicans in charge of the Senate, Boyle got a second chance to move up to the 4th Circuit, based in Richmond, Va. In May, he was among Bush's first 11 nominees to federal appellate courts.

But two weeks later, Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont switched from Republican to independent, giving Democrats control of the Senate, and thus judicial appointments.

Now Boyle, 55, by most accounts a bright and brusque courtroom boss, is again at the mercy of Washington politics, and he can only bide his time.

"It's not fair for him to be caught up in this political thing; he was a victim before," said Bill Cobey, chairman of North Carolina's Republican Party. "They shouldn't expect a Republican president to nominate a liberal judge. They should look at his qualifications. He's a very distinguished jurist."

Lawyers who work in Boyle's court generally agree that he is a good choice for the 4th Circuit. "I think he's really one of the best trial judges I've ever appeared before," said Elizabeth City lawyer Everett Thompson, a Democrat. "He's a student of the law, he works hard, he's bright, he's fair. And I never saw him be political at all about anything."

Boyle won't talk publicly about his nomination. "Ethical considerations for judicial nominees preclude my participating in a press interview while the nomination is pending," he said.

Actually, there are no rules requiring judicial nominees to stay mum, though many do, partly out of fear of offending the senators who will decide their fate. Out of courtesy to senators, White House nominees are asked not to comment to the public until after their hearings, White House spokeswoman Jeanie Mamo said.

Since Jeffords' switch, John Edwards has joined the Senate committee that screens judicial nominees. That might give him enough clout to insist that Bush also nominate a Democratic judge, such as James Wynn of the state appeals court, to let Boyle's nomination move forward.

Meanwhile, the Senate is being lobbied by conservative and liberal political groups that have taken an interest in Boyle and his 17-year record as a judge.

Critics perceive Boyle's conservative ideology in rulings ordering congressional redistricting, barring lawsuits against the state under a federal disability law and refusing to approve a settlement in a lawsuit over employment of female guards in state prisons.

"There are many aspects of Judge Boyle's record that are extremely troubling from a civil rights perspective," said Elliot Mincberg, legal director for the liberal political group People for the American Way.

But Boyle also has upheld federal protection of red wolves over the objection of livestock farmers, halted an execution to allow psychiatric testing of a death-row inmate, allowed the production of generic forms of the antacid drug Zantac, and refused to block the moving of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. In the redistricting case, Boyle headed a three-judge panel that ruled 2-1 last year that North Carolina's 12th Congressional District, winding from Charlotte to Greensboro, was unconstitutionally drawn based on the race of voters. At the same time, the panel concluded that the 1st Congressional District in the state's northeast corner, which has a higher population of black voters, was not designed on a racial basis.

In April, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the panel's ruling, saying the 12th District was OK on the new grounds that race can affect a district's shape as long as something else - in this case, partisan politics - is a bigger factor.

Boyle's handling of that case could come in for criticism during a Senate confirmation hearing. For example, at first the panel unanimously agreed to skip a trial on the facts, but then the Supreme Court ordered a trial. But some legal scholars say Boyle and the judge who agreed with him reached a reasonable conclusion based on shifting Supreme Court rulings.

Criminal defense lawyers, some Democrats, say they like Boyle because he holds prosecutors to high standards and rewards defendants who help convict other offenders.

"He is a great friend of the Constitution," said Raleigh defense lawyer Wade Smith, a former chairman of the state Democratic Party who supports Boyle. "He rules fairly and impartially."

Life as a lawyer:

Boyle was born and reared outside the 4th Circuit in Passaic, N.J., just north of Newark and west of New York City. He graduated from Brown University, where he played football, and earned his law degree at American University.

From 1970 to 1973, he was counsel to the Republican minority on the U.S. House Subcommittee on Housing, Banking and Currency. Also in 1973, he worked as one of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' legislative assistants.

While in Washington, one day he walked into a congressional office elevator and met his future bride: Debbie Ellis, the daughter of Raleigh lawyer Tom Ellis, then Helms' political strategist.

They would marry and move in 1974 to a quaint northeastern North Carolina town about as unlike Washington as possible: the historic village of Edenton on the north shore of the Albemarle Sound, where they had friends.

Boyle went to work with a prominent law firm 25 miles northeast in Elizabeth City, the unofficial capital of the Albemarle region. Three years later, Boyle became a partner in LeRoy, Wells, Shaw, Hornthal & Riley, where he had a wide-ranging law practice.

"He has always been a very pragmatic guy," said firm partner Tony Hornthal, past president of the N.C. Bar Association. "He had a way of cutting through the chaff and getting down to the heart of the matter."

But Boyle had such conservative fiscal views, Hornthal recalled, that his partners joked that he must bury his money in his yard.

"When we made money decisions about the firm," Hornthal said, "we ignored what Boyle said."

A demanding judge:

His brother-in-law, Hood Ellis, a lawyer in Boyle's old firm, said Boyle is shy and private and doesn't talk much about himself, even with family. "There's not too many people who crawl inside his inner ring," he said.

But Boyle also is competitive and loves tennis, football and jokes.

"He likes to win, but he's a good sport," Ellis said. "He has a very good sense of humor. And he has the greatest laugh of all time. Once you've heard him guffaw, you'll never forget it."

In 1984, President Reagan nominated Boyle as a federal trial judge at Helms' urging, and he was confirmed. His home office and court are in Elizabeth City, but he also hears cases in Greenville, New Bern, Wilmington and Raleigh.

In his courtroom, Boyle can be curt, combative, even insulting, some lawyers say. Others appreciate his direct style and firm courtroom command.

He can be hard on either side.

In a 1993 drug case against former Wake Forest Mayor Jimmy Ray, Boyle chewed out a federal prosecutor for negotiating a plea bargain he doubted was justified.

"Was the indictment not factually grounded?" he demanded to know. "What right do you have to make him resign?"

But Boyle doesn't seem mean so much as given to intense intellectual and verbal sparring, like a tough college professor.

Boyle displays an intelligent, dry wit and can be very funny. But he can quickly shift from joking with lawyers in court to grilling them.

Professor Boyle's lectures:

During recent criminal sentencing hearings in New Bern, Boyle lectured defense lawyers and prosecutors on their jobs and gave a pointed speech on bank robbery and its proper punishment.

He criticized a prosecutor for failing to bring victims to a hearing and chided a defense lawyer for requesting a lighter sentence than normal. Then Boyle paused and asked the defense lawyer whether he wanted to ask for anything else. The lawyer politely said he did not.

"You don't want to provoke another speech like that, do you?" Boyle asked, and then smiled. "All right."

Later, just before sending a man to prison for six months for an air-rage scuffle, Boyle warned him to straighten out soon.

"Do you know why you're getting an active sentence?" he asked. "Give me some of the reasons.

But then before the man could answer, Boyle veered off on a tangent about the foolishness of airlines serving alcohol.

He then recounted the man's considerable criminal history and told him: "You haven't been an Eagle Scout. This thing's been coming. You keep this up, and you're going to be back in front of me, catching more time. We'll be doing this forever. That's the bad news."

Unless, that is, Boyle goes to the 4th Circuit. Then he'll be reviewing the decisions of other trial judges, correcting their mistakes or applying their rulings to the circuit's five states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

The American Bar Association has given Boyle a "qualified" rating for the job, its middle ranking. Roger Gregory, a Democrat whom the Senate confirmed to the court last month, had the same rating.

Now it is up to Edwards, Helms, and 98 other senators to decide whether Boyle will make the cut.

"I don't want politics to stop us from having a judge on the 4th Circuit from North Carolina," said Smith, the Raleigh lawyer.

"I think he would happily rule against me and happily rule for me whether I'm a Republican or a Democrat. I think he makes his decisions on the facts, and that's the best we could ever hope. Give me judges like that."

White House Gloomy Over Judiciary Prospects

By Major Garrett
CNN
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

"Improper" delays engineered by Senate Republicans to thwart President Clinton's judicial nominees so poisoned relations with Democrats that President Bush may see only five of his own choices for the federal bench confirmed this year, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzalez said Tuesday.

"We are trying to work through some of the logjams, but there is a lot of bitterness," Gonzales told CNN. "This is a bit of a payback. I can't argue with some of their [the Democrats'] perceptions."

Gonzales noted that some Republican senators placed "holds" on Clinton judicial nominees, denying them a Judiciary Committee hearing or a floor vote for as long as four years.

"That was wrong," he said. "That's not right. Part of this is based on the conduct of the Republican senators in the past. We had nothing to do with this problem. But it does affect us."

Gonzales was exceedingly gloomy about the prospects of winning approval for Bush judicial nominees, predicting Bush would win no more than five judicial confirmations this year.

Gonzales said each of the three previous presidents won confirmation for more than 40 judicial nominees in their first year in office.

"It's a major problem and it's going to get worse," he said. "Our best argument is that the partisanship over judicial nominations has historically been saved for the end of an administration and not at the beginning. We would expect the same kind of deference given to Reagan, Bush and Clinton."

Gonzales said Democrats are reluctant to do so, however, because they fear Bush will "stack the federal judiciary with conservatives."

Gonzales said those fears are overwrought and pointed to Bush's renomination of Roger Gregory, an African-American lawyer from Richmond, Virginia.
Clinton nominated Gregory to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, but Senate Republicans stalled the nomination. Frustrated, Clinton gave Gregory a recess appointment to the bench, one that would have expired after one year unless Bush renominated him.

"We asked Roger Gregory the same questions and he gave us the answers we expected," Gonzales said.

"The answers were what you would expect from a good, solid, conservative judge. We don't ask potential nominees about abortion or affirmative action. We ask how you would render a decision."

Gregory is one of four federal judicial nominees to have won Senate confirmation. Overall, Bush has nominated 44 judges to the federal courts. Of those 22 are for the circuit court of appeals and 22 are for district court positions. Forty nominees await confirmation.

Making the Grade: How the ABA Rates Judicial Nominee

By Jonathan Groner
Fulton County Daily Report
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

For the past several months, and as recently as last week, the American Bar Association has been caught in heavy political gunplay for its role in grading would-be federal judges.

Conservatives say the group exhibits a liberal bias, while Democrats who control the Senate and pass ultimate judgment on nominees say they can't do their job without the ABA's input.

But for all the noise over the ABA's role in shaping the federal bench, very little attention is paid to how the group's mysterious Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary actually conducts its reviews of candidates.

The 15-member committee almost always is made up of law firm partners, working alone as they conduct at least 40 interviews of lawyers, judges and community leaders, sometimes even including Supreme Court justices. Each of their projects takes dozens of hours-time that the lawyers otherwise could devote to clients.

The products of these efforts are detailed reports on nominees, often stretching as long as 50 pages. The highly sensitive documents are distributed through the mail to avoid computer or e-mail security breaches. They are not released even to the Senate or the White House, which are informed only of the bottom line-that any given judicial candidate has been rated "well-qualified," "qualified" or "unqualified" for the job.

And at the end of the process, all of the copies of the reports are destroyed, save one.

Conservatives long have accused the ABA, which has taken liberal stands on other issues, of viewing its judicial task force's work through a liberal lens, resulting in bias in the judiciary panel's evaluations. Earlier this year, the Bush administration stripped the committee of a special status as adviser to the White House it had enjoyed for 50 years.

The ABA always has denied the allegations. Several people who have been involved in the ratings process, from members of the ABA committee to judicial candidates under review, say they never saw evidence that politics played a role.

"They did a very thorough job, focusing particularly on the question of judicial temperament," says one judicial nominee who went through the process within the last three years. "We had a sit-down (with the ABA committee's circuit representative). It was decent and cordial. None of the questions was political in any way."

Despite the administration's decision to treat the ABA no differently from any other interest group, the committee's assessments of prospective judges still matter a good deal. Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said that he will continue to rely on the ratings of the blue-ribbon committee.

And the committee has plenty of work to do. President George W. Bush quickly has cranked out 48 nominations for the federal trial and appeals courts, 44 of which are pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The new chairman of the ABA committee, Roscoe Trimmier Jr. of Boston's Ropes & Gray, says his group has had to scramble to keep from falling behind in its investigations. Trimmier was appointed chairman of the panel at last week's ABA convention in Chicago, replacing Patricia Hynes of New York's Milberg Weiss Bershad Hynes & Lerach, whose one-year term ended.

Trimmier says the rating process places an extremely heavy burden on the committee members.

"It's incredibly time-consuming," he says. "Now that we are getting batches of nominees, we'll have to call upon former members to help out." Trimmier says he's aware of fewer than 20 former panelists nationwide who might be available to fill in.

Covert Activity

Though the process is much the same as it has been for decades, there is one key difference this year. Because the committee's long-standing relationship with the White House has been severed, the committee no longer receives advance word of projected nominees. As a result, it is no longer able to vet them for possibly disqualifying problems and warn the White House before the nomination is made.

Judicial candidates, of course, still undergo background checks conducted by the FBI before their names are submitted.

Normally, the ABA investigations are parceled out among committee members according to the federal circuits. Each of the committee's 14 members, other than the chairman, represents one of the 11 numbered circuits, the D.C. Circuit, and the Federal Circuit. Two committee members cover the sprawling 9th Circuit. All members are limited to no more than two three-year terms.

Work performed for the ABA committee is uncompensated and confidentiality rules prohibit members from farming out any of the legwork to associates or paralegals.

Trimmier says about 60 hours of interviews are conducted for each inquiry. The committee requires that a minimum of 40 people-federal, state and local judges, U.S. Attorneys, public defenders, community leaders of all sorts, and opposing counsel-weigh in with their views about a nominee, and members often talk to many more than that in compiling their reports.

The nominee is informed of the start of the process, but usually is interviewed last, after any problems have arisen, so that he or she can explain any difficulties and suggest additional people to contact.

The reports, which form the basis of the ratings, are circulated among the committee members.

The other members then vote on the ratings-by telephone or U.S. mail, never by fax or e-mail. A member who has questions about a proposed rating may ask the chairman to convene a conference call of all members. (The committee normally meets in person only twice a year, at the ABA's two major annual meetings.)

Once all members have voted, the chairman tabulates the votes and forwards the result to the White House counsel, the Department of Justice, and all members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Trimmier says the candidate is informed of his or her rating at the same time.

After that, the rating becomes public, including the existence of a minority view among the members, if any.

Looking for Litigators

If there are several simultaneous nominees for the bench in one circuit, the committee member won't be able to keep up with the pace of investigations-especially since the panel wants each report finished within 30 days after the nominee returns a completed questionnaire.

Trimmier says he can ask a member from a different region to fill in for an overburdened member, but that won't work if everyone is busy. The only other people the committee may rely upon, for reasons of confidentiality, are former members.

"It's a very broad inquiry," Trimmier says. "We look for knowledge of the law, intellectual capacity, writing ability, judicial temperament, integrity, general reputation in the community, and more." Another key aspect of any probe centers on the nominee's trial experience. "Most of the people on the committee are litigators," says a lawyer familiar with the process. "There have been ratings of not qualified on the basis of lack of experience alone. There have been minority votes on that basis. These issues do come up, and there are those who feel very strongly about it."

While committee members declined to address specific cases, a lack of trial experience is widely believed to be the reason that a minority of the panel rated current Federal Circuit nominee Sharon Prost "not qualified" earlier this month. The majority voted Prost, chief counsel to the Republicans on the Senate Judiciary Committee and a legal aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, for 12 years, "qualified."

Prost, 50, obviously has not been a litigator while on the Hill, though she had served as an attorney at the National Labor Relations Board.

David Carle, a spokesman for Sen. Leahy, announced last week that Leahy had scheduled a rare hearing during a congressional recess for Prost and for a district court nominee from South Carolina, Terry Wooten. That hearing is set for Aug. 27.

Pauline Schneider, a partner at the Washington office of Hunton & Williams, is the Federal Circuit representative on the ABA committee who would have done the inquiry on Prost. She declines comment, referring questions to Trimmier.

Fred Fielding of Washington's Wiley, Rein & Fielding is the designated D.C. Circuit representative on the panel. He is responsible for evaluating nominees to both the D.C. Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Like Schneider, he refers questions about the committee's work to Trimmier.

Fielding apparently is working to wrap up his reports on Miller & Chevalier partner John Bates and D.C. Superior Court Judge Reggie Walton, both nominated June 20 for the District Court.

"I was contacted this week by Fred Fielding regarding Bates and Walton," says Mark Tuohey III, a former District of Columbia Bar president and partner in the Washington office of Vinson & Elkins. "In fact, I have been contacted by members of the committee from the Carter era through Bush II."

Tuohey says he has always been impressed with the "professionalism" of the ABA panel.

"They've always taken their job very seriously," Tuohey says. "It's never just a wink and a nod. And it's always been nonpartisan and objective."

But not all reports about the committee's work are so rosy. Two people who have been through the process as nominees say that although the investigators are thorough and show no political bias, they should keep the nominees better informed of their status.

"They never told me what my rating was. I never got an official letter that said it," says one.

"My overall impression was that this was just not a user-friendly process. I don't just mean the ABA, but the ABA did not communicate anything to me, even the rating," says another.

Federal Judge Terrence Boyle knows he's a lucky man. He just can't tell whether his luck is good or bad.

Boyle, the chief U.S. District Court judge in Eastern North Carolina, recently got a second chance to climb the judicial ranks to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Politics thwarted his ascent in 1991 when Senate Democrats denied him a confirmation hearing after the elder President George Bush nominated Boyle, a conservative Republican.

Then, after voters last fall put George W. Bush in the White House and Republicans in charge of the Senate, Boyle got a second chance to move up to the 4th Circuit, based in Richmond, Va. In May, he was among Bush's first 11 nominees to federal appellate courts.

But two weeks later, Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont switched from Republican to independent, giving Democrats control of the Senate, and thus judicial appointments.

Now Boyle, 55, by most accounts a bright and brusque courtroom boss, is again at the mercy of Washington politics, and he can only bide his time.

"It's not fair for him to be caught up in this political thing; he was a victim before," said Bill Cobey, chairman of North Carolina's Republican Party. "They shouldn't expect a Republican president to nominate a liberal judge. They should look at his qualifications. He's a very distinguished jurist."

Lawyers who work in Boyle's court generally agree that he is a good choice for the 4th Circuit. "I think he's really one of the best trial judges I've ever appeared before," said Elizabeth City lawyer Everett Thompson, a Democrat. "He's a student of the law, he works hard, he's bright, he's fair. And I never saw him be political at all about anything."

Boyle won't talk publicly about his nomination. "Ethical considerations for judicial nominees preclude my participating in a press interview while the nomination is pending," he said.

Actually, there are no rules requiring judicial nominees to stay mum, though many do, partly out of fear of offending the senators who will decide their fate. Out of courtesy to senators, White House nominees are asked not to comment to the public until after their hearings, White House spokeswoman Jeanie Mamo said.

Since Jeffords' switch, John Edwards has joined the Senate committee that screens judicial nominees. That might give him enough clout to insist that Bush also nominate a Democratic judge, such as James Wynn of the state appeals court, to let Boyle's nomination move forward.

Meanwhile, the Senate is being lobbied by conservative and liberal political groups that have taken an interest in Boyle and his 17-year record as a judge.

Critics perceive Boyle's conservative ideology in rulings ordering congressional redistricting, barring lawsuits against the state under a federal disability law and refusing to approve a settlement in a lawsuit over employment of female guards in state prisons.

"There are many aspects of Judge Boyle's record that are extremely troubling from a civil rights perspective," said Elliot Mincberg, legal director for the liberal political group People for the American Way.

But Boyle also has upheld federal protection of red wolves over the objection of livestock farmers, halted an execution to allow psychiatric testing of a death-row inmate, allowed the production of generic forms of the antacid drug Zantac, and refused to block the moving of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. In the redistricting case, Boyle headed a three-judge panel that ruled 2-1 last year that North Carolina's 12th Congressional District, winding from Charlotte to Greensboro, was unconstitutionally drawn based on the race of voters. At the same time, the panel concluded that the 1st Congressional District in the state's northeast corner, which has a higher population of black voters, was not designed on a racial basis.

In April, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the panel's ruling, saying the 12th District was OK on the new grounds that race can affect a district's shape as long as something else - in this case, partisan politics - is a bigger factor.

Boyle's handling of that case could come in for criticism during a Senate confirmation hearing. For example, at first the panel unanimously agreed to skip a trial on the facts, but then the Supreme Court ordered a trial. But some legal scholars say Boyle and the judge who agreed with him reached a reasonable conclusion based on shifting Supreme Court rulings.

Criminal defense lawyers, some Democrats, say they like Boyle because he holds prosecutors to high standards and rewards defendants who help convict other offenders.

"He is a great friend of the Constitution," said Raleigh defense lawyer Wade Smith, a former chairman of the state Democratic Party who supports Boyle. "He rules fairly and impartially."

Life as a lawyer:

Boyle was born and reared outside the 4th Circuit in Passaic, N.J., just north of Newark and west of New York City. He graduated from Brown University, where he played football, and earned his law degree at American University.

From 1970 to 1973, he was counsel to the Republican minority on the U.S. House Subcommittee on Housing, Banking and Currency. Also in 1973, he worked as one of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' legislative assistants.

While in Washington, one day he walked into a congressional office elevator and met his future bride: Debbie Ellis, the daughter of Raleigh lawyer Tom Ellis, then Helms' political strategist.

They would marry and move in 1974 to a quaint northeastern North Carolina town about as unlike Washington as possible: the historic village of Edenton on the north shore of the Albemarle Sound, where they had friends.

Boyle went to work with a prominent law firm 25 miles northeast in Elizabeth City, the unofficial capital of the Albemarle region. Three years later, Boyle became a partner in LeRoy, Wells, Shaw, Hornthal & Riley, where he had a wide-ranging law practice.

"He has always been a very pragmatic guy," said firm partner Tony Hornthal, past president of the N.C. Bar Association. "He had a way of cutting through the chaff and getting down to the heart of the matter."

But Boyle had such conservative fiscal views, Hornthal recalled, that his partners joked that he must bury his money in his yard.

"When we made money decisions about the firm," Hornthal said, "we ignored what Boyle said."

A demanding judge:

His brother-in-law, Hood Ellis, a lawyer in Boyle's old firm, said Boyle is shy and private and doesn't talk much about himself, even with family. "There's not too many people who crawl inside his inner ring," he said.

But Boyle also is competitive and loves tennis, football and jokes.

"He likes to win, but he's a good sport," Ellis said. "He has a very good sense of humor. And he has the greatest laugh of all time. Once you've heard him guffaw, you'll never forget it."

In 1984, President Reagan nominated Boyle as a federal trial judge at Helms' urging, and he was confirmed. His home office and court are in Elizabeth City, but he also hears cases in Greenville, New Bern, Wilmington and Raleigh.

In his courtroom, Boyle can be curt, combative, even insulting, some lawyers say. Others appreciate his direct style and firm courtroom command.

He can be hard on either side.

In a 1993 drug case against former Wake Forest Mayor Jimmy Ray, Boyle chewed out a federal prosecutor for negotiating a plea bargain he doubted was justified.

"Was the indictment not factually grounded?" he demanded to know. "What right do you have to make him resign?"

But Boyle doesn't seem mean so much as given to intense intellectual and verbal sparring, like a tough college professor.

Boyle displays an intelligent, dry wit and can be very funny. But he can quickly shift from joking with lawyers in court to grilling them.

Professor Boyle's lectures:

During recent criminal sentencing hearings in New Bern, Boyle lectured defense lawyers and prosecutors on their jobs and gave a pointed speech on bank robbery and its proper punishment.

He criticized a prosecutor for failing to bring victims to a hearing and chided a defense lawyer for requesting a lighter sentence than normal. Then Boyle paused and asked the defense lawyer whether he wanted to ask for anything else. The lawyer politely said he did not.

"You don't want to provoke another speech like that, do you?" Boyle asked, and then smiled. "All right."

Later, just before sending a man to prison for six months for an air-rage scuffle, Boyle warned him to straighten out soon.

"Do you know why you're getting an active sentence?" he asked. "Give me some of the reasons.

But then before the man could answer, Boyle veered off on a tangent about the foolishness of airlines serving alcohol.

He then recounted the man's considerable criminal history and told him: "You haven't been an Eagle Scout. This thing's been coming. You keep this up, and you're going to be back in front of me, catching more time. We'll be doing this forever. That's the bad news."

Unless, that is, Boyle goes to the 4th Circuit. Then he'll be reviewing the decisions of other trial judges, correcting their mistakes or applying their rulings to the circuit's five states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

The American Bar Association has given Boyle a "qualified" rating for the job, its middle ranking. Roger Gregory, a Democrat whom the Senate confirmed to the court last month, had the same rating.

Now it is up to Edwards, Helms, and 98 other senators to decide whether Boyle will make the cut.

"I don't want politics to stop us from having a judge on the 4th Circuit from North Carolina," said Smith, the Raleigh lawyer.

"I think he would happily rule against me and happily rule for me whether I'm a Republican or a Democrat. I think he makes his decisions on the facts, and that's the best we could ever hope. Give me judges like that."

White House Gloomy Over Judiciary Prospects

By Major Garrett
CNN
Tuesday, August 14, 2001

"Improper" delays engineered by Senate Republicans to thwart President Clinton's judicial nominees so poisoned relations with Democrats that President Bush may see only five of his own choices for the federal bench confirmed this year, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzalez said Tuesday.

"We are trying to work through some of the logjams, but there is a lot of bitterness," Gonzales told CNN. "This is a bit of a payback. I can't argue with some of their [the Democrats'] perceptions."

Gonzales noted that some Republican senators placed "holds" on Clinton judicial nominees, denying them a Judiciary Committee hearing or a floor vote for as long as four years.

"That was wrong," he said. "That's not right. Part of this is based on the conduct of the Republican senators in the past. We had nothing to do with this problem. But it does affect us."

Gonzales was exceedingly gloomy about the prospects of winning approval for Bush judicial nominees, predicting Bush would win no more than five judicial confirmations this year.

Gonzales said each of the three previous presidents won confirmation for more than 40 judicial nominees in their first year in office.

"It's a major problem and it's going to get worse," he said. "Our best argument is that the partisanship over judicial nominations has historically been saved for the end of an administration and not at the beginning. We would expect the same kind of deference given to Reagan, Bush and Clinton."

Gonzales said Democrats are reluctant to do so, however, because they fear Bush will "stack the federal judiciary with conservatives."

Gonzales said those fears are overwrought and pointed to Bush's renomination of Roger Gregory, an African-American lawyer from Richmond, Virginia.
Clinton nominated Gregory to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, but Senate Republicans stalled the nomination. Frustrated, Clinton gave Gregory a recess appointment to the bench, one that would have expired after one year unless Bush renominated him.

"We asked Roger Gregory the same questions and he gave us the answers we expected," Gonzales said.

"The answers were what you would expect from a good, solid, conservative judge. We don't ask potential nominees about abortion or affirmative action. We ask how you would render a decision."

Gregory is one of four federal judicial nominees to have won Senate confirmation. Overall, Bush has nominated 44 judges to the federal courts. Of those 22 are for the circuit court of appeals and 22 are for district court positions. Forty nominees await confirmation.

Mr. Ken Mehlman

Dear Ken,

TEAM 100 has recently acquired a set of photographs from a June 8, 2000, event for the Ridge Leadership Fund. Many of these photographs contain TEAM 100 and Regents members interacting with President Bush in a relaxed, intimate setting. We are planning to place these photographs on the TEAM 100 website, but prior to doing so would appreciate your reviewing the photos to ensure your agreement that they are suitable for this purpose. To be specific, the website they would be displayed on is password protected, and only TEAM 100 members can obtain a username and password. As an additional security element, members must first call the TEAM 100 office to be issued a username and password.

TEAM 100 would like members to have access to these photographs online so they may order copies of these memorable prints through our office. Copies of these photographs are included with this letter for your approval.

Thank you for your consideration of this matter, and I look forward to hearing from your office regarding this matter.

Sincerely,

Victoria Maxwell

Attached, per your request. In addition to that guidance, use of e-mail does not cause the government to incur an additional cost; therefore, the use of e-mail for "political activity" in the manner you inquired about is legally permitted. As a prophylactic measure, however, your office has set up separate e-mail accounts.

This confirms advice given orally to the two of you.

I have confirmed with the Office of Special Counsel that the RNC can send e-mails seeking political assistance (get out the vote efforts, etc.) to non-PAS and non-White-House individuals who happen to work in the Executive Branch. In addition, the employees can respond to those RNC e-mails on their government e-mail system. However, the employees cannot use their government e-mail system to forward those e-mails to others, and that caution should be noted in the RNC e-mail that is sent to the employees.

Please contact me with any further questions.

Clashes Expected Over Bush Nominees

By Jesse Holland
Associated Press
Friday, August 17, 2001

All of President Bush's 164 unconfirmed nominees for executive and judicial positions must return to "Go" when the Senate reconvenes in September because of a political tiff over two of them.

Rather than let the Senate tell Bush to submit new candidates to head the Consumer Product Safety Commission and the State Department's Western Hemisphere affairs bureau, Republicans forced Democrats to send back all nominations awaiting approval.

The move was strictly procedural and senators in both parties expect Bush to renominate all of his candidates. However, it foreshadows more confirmation battles when Congress reconvenes after Labor Day. Republicans made it clear they will try to portray Democrats as obstructionists if they don't allow votes by the full Senate on some of Bush's more controversial choices.

"To isolate it down to one or two this early in the session, we believe, is a problem," said Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott. "We realize it is a ministerial process now. They will all be sent down and all will be bundled up and sent back, but it does highlight our concern about the way these two nominees are being treated."

The events unfolded when the Senate Commerce Committee rejected Mary Sheila Gall's nomination to head the consumer agency on a 12-11, party-line vote. Looking to peel off a Democrat or two in the full Senate, Republicans demanded she get a vote there, despite the committee's action. Not likely, responded Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who as majority leader controls the Senate agenda

Then just before recessing, Senate Democratic Whip Harry Reid of Nevada told GOP leaders his party wanted to return to the White House the nominations of Gall and Otto Reich for the State Department's top position for Western Hemisphere affairs.

Senior Democrats say Reich, who has yet to get a hearing, is too divisive for his position. His supporters claim he is being targeted for his strident antipathy toward Cuban leader Fidel Castro. From 1983 to 1986, Reich headed a State Department office that was accused of running a prohibited covert propaganda campaign against Nicaragua's then communist- backed government.

Lott rejected Reid's ploy, saying Democrats would have to return all of Bush's nominations.

Beyond the contentious confirmation of Attorney General John Ashcroft and the rejection of Gall, Bush's choices for administration jobs have won Senate approval with little or no controversy.

Senators have confirmed 227 of Bush's nonjudicial appointees with only 57 nominations not acted upon, according to the Brookings Institution's Presidential Appointee Initiative, a nonpartisan research organization.

During similar time spans, the Senate confirmed 270 of President Reagan's 304 nominees in 1981, and 199 of President Clinton's 228 nominees in 1993, Brookings data shows.

Only four of Bush's judicial nominees have won confirmation - two to fill Appeals Court vacancies and two district judges. And several judicial nominees have drawn fire from several Democratic-dominated constituency groups because of their conservative credentials.

While the Senate's Foreign Relations committee weighs Reich's nomination, its Judiciary committee will tackle Bush's choices of Jeff Sutton, Michael McConnell and Miguel Estrada for Appeals Court vacancies.

"The ones they've done so far have been non-controversial," said Sheldon Goldman, a University of Massachusetts professor and author of the book, "Picking Federal Judges: Lower Court Selection From Roosevelt Through Reagan."

"Now we'll have to see what they do with Estrada, Sutton, with the whole slew of them like McConnell," Goldman said.

Disability groups have organized against Sutton, who argued and won a case in which the Supreme Court ruled that state government employees cannot sue for discrimination under the Americans With Disabilities Act.

Groups like Americans United for Separation of Church and State oppose McConnell, who is recognized as a critic of abortion rights and church-state separation. Estrada is a partner in the Washington firm that represented Bush before the Supreme Court during his Florida recount fight with Al Gore.

Op/Eds

Segregation Of Power; Gloves Are Off In Judicial Nomination War

The Columbus Dispatch
Sunday, August 19, 2001

The recent bald declaration by Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., that President Bush's nominees for federal judiciary posts would be subjected to outright ideological screening by the Democrat-controlled Senate ripped away the last shred of pretense about what has been going on for 20 years: Both parties use the confirmation process to block each other's nominees in the hope of creating a judiciary that reflects their concept of the proper role of the courts.

This fight has gotten more vicious and shrill for several reasons.

In the past 50 years, the power of state and federal courts has grown immensely, seriously altering the relative power of each of the three branches of government.

While the Founders intended that policy- making would be vested in the Congress and state legislatures elected by the people, courts increasingly have horned in on the legislative function, issuing rulings that make policy, rather than simply interpreting or judging the constitutionality of laws passed by legislatures. The U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 finding that there is a constitutional privacy right to abortion, for example, instantly overturned the legislatively enacted abortion bans then in place in most of the states. Federal courts also have taken over urban school districts in the name of ending segregation.

This change in the relationship of courts and legislatures has come about because there have been in the United States, for at least the past half century, two very different conceptions of government's role. The traditional viewpoint, based on the Founders' recognition of government's tendency to despotism, sees a system of checks and balances designed to limit the power of government.

Besides dividing power between different branches and levels of government, the Founders also vested policymaking power in a two- chamber legislature, in order to make the process slow and deliberate.

As a result, changes in the exercise of government power would be evolutionary rather than revolutionary, an impediment to demagogues and a buffer against the surges of sometimes irrational or liberty-threatening public opinion. The sheer ponderosity of the governing machinery would make it difficult for government to crush freedom quickly or easily.

But political activists chafe at the slow grinding of the democratic machinery, whose inertia not only protects liberty but also can be exploited to preserve and prolong unfair privilege and injustice.

The Founders' sound idea that states should retain rights and powers as a counterbalance to the federal government was dragged into disrepute when Southern states used this autonomy to first defend slavery and then government-sanctioned racial discrimination in the Jim Crow era.

Well-intentioned people determined to overcome such legislatively sanctioned impediments to racial equality sought a remedy in the expansion of federal power, including that of federal courts, to overcome state resistance.

Thus, in the name of a good cause, courts became a way to make an end run around the slow-moving or recalcitrant legislatures.

Today, many political activists prefer court briefs to ballots when seeking political change. They know that a ruling by one or a handful of unelected, unaccountable federal judges can can overrule or bypass Congress, 50 state legislatures and the nation's voters.

REV_00197575

In a trice, the Founders' carefully crafted checks against concentration of power in a few hands are rendered null and void.

While this may seem acceptable when that power clearly is used for a good cause, such as freeing citizens from racial discrimination, it is far less acceptable when the issues are less clear-cut and the electorate is deeply divided, for example, with issues such as abortion, capital punishment and education. It is precisely these most troubling issues that should be ground slowly through the democratic process rather than being "settled" by judicial fiat.

The struggle for the soul of the federal courts pits those who believe democratic processes cannot be trusted to do the "right" thing against those who believe that allowing unelected, unaccountable judges to make public policy is an invitation to despotism and a subversion of democracy.

The place where these mutually exclusive views collide is the U.S. Senate. In the past, when there was less division over the role of the courts, it was Senate practice to confirm a president's judicial nominees without much fuss, providing the candidates were qualified and competent.

But Schumer's declaration of ideological warfare shows that that era is over. The problem is, his declaration also could be a recipe for disaster. If each party refuses to confirm the other's judicial nominees, the result could be paralysis of the federal courts, with devastating effects on millions of people affected by the decisions made -- or delayed -- in those courts.

At present, about 100 federal judgeships are unfilled; that's about one in eight. If the Senate cannot agree on the candidates needed to fill them, the shortage will grow worse.

The Dispatch long has argued that presidents are entitled to nominate people who share their governing philosophy, provided the nominees meet necessary standards of character and competence. The underlying assumption is that the voters who elected the president did so with the understanding and expectation that he would nominate like-minded people to federal posts.

Agreement on such an approach may be the only way a Senate divided so deeply by judicial philosophy can ever hope to keep the federal bench fully staffed so that the wheels of justice keep turning.

If each party refuses to confirm the other's judicial nominees, the result could be paralysis of the federal courts, with devastating effects on millions of people.

Misleading Impression

By Sheldon Goldman
The Courier-Journal
Friday, August 17, 2001

In the otherwise excellent and balanced news story appearing on Aug. 12 about the federal judicial nomination of David Bunning, I am quoted in a way that gives a misleading impression. As I told your reporter, I have no personal knowledge of David Bunning or his qualifications for office. I was merely responding in only a very general way to the questions posed to me. Bunning may well be among the most qualified persons available for the judgeship. My comments published in your story should not be taken to mean that I believe him either qualified or not qualified for office.

Government By Court Order

By Dana D. Kelley
The Arkansas Democrat-Gazette
Friday, August 17, 2001

Sue has become Lady Liberty's first name. It's the new American Way for governing. Forget the old saying, "It takes an act of Congress." The adage for the new millennium is "It takes a Supreme Court ruling."

If America seems to be more polar today on many social issues, it's because our law is often being made not by our elected representatives, but by unelected court justices. The former builds consensus, the latter resentment.

Back in the fall presidential election, Democratic candidate Al Gore warned women and pro-abortion supporters that a vote for Republican candidate George W. Bush was a vote to overturn Roe vs. Wade. As powerful as the leader of the world's sole superpower may be, however, not even he can single-handedly accomplish that feat. (It's noteworthy that Gore didn't propose actually putting the abortion question to a true popular vote.)

The implication, rather, was that the election of Bush was also the election, by privilege of political appointment, of conservative and presumably anti-abortion Supreme Court justices. It was thus tacitly acknowledged, with remarkably little protest, that the judiciary was more connected with abortion lawmaking than the legislative branch.

This problem--government by court order rather than by consent of the governed--is getting worse, not better. Currently, the U.S. Senate has confirmed only three of President Bush's 44 nominations for federal court judgeships, and some senators are openly promising an ideological fight for bench seats. New York's Charles Schumer said Democrats will deny nominees of "a particular ideological cast" so as not to "reorient the direction of the federal judiciary."

So now it appears that the job of senators is not to make the laws, but to make sure we get the right sort of judges to make the laws. Schumer and his colleagues understand all too well that it's a lot easier to get re-elected if the courts tackle all the really divisive issues.

The direction he refers to is increasingly activist, and nothing thwarts democracy like judicial activism. Even if the entire population of a town unanimously supported putting a Nativity scene on its courthouse lawn, the Supreme Court would order otherwise--not to protect any local citizens in the minority opinion, but to avoid the figurative "oppression" of any minority anywhere.

Activists call that liberty. A better name is tyranny. Rather than require petitioners whose cause is beyond the scope of the explicit constitutional language to utilize the amendment process, activist justices have literally taken the law into their own hands. Not since the grand age of monarchs have the opinions of so few outweighed the wishes of so many. Overwhelming majorities of Americans (1) support the death penalty, (2) oppose unregulated abortion on demand and (3) support public school prayer, and yet the Supreme Court has ruled contrary to public sentiment on each point. Worse yet, it's done so by playing "Twister" with legal precedents and history. That's what frustrates fair-minded folks so much.

Capital punishment is mentioned in the Constitution, and yet the court once ruled it unconstitutional. (Even today its constitutionality is micromanaged by the court.) Abortion, conversely, cannot be found in the document, but like the emperor's clothes, so many serious and important people pretend it's there that the simplistic lay-person is shouted down for even querying. And wherever the line separating church and state may fall today, there's no denying that at the time the Bill of Rights was drafted, nobody, including the authors, saw prayer in public school as a breach.

It's little wonder that there is a contentious attitude today toward lawyers and lawsuits. The nation's judiciary, originally intended to be the final arbiter when all else failed, has become the venue of first resort. Why undertake lobbying hundreds of legislators to pass a new law when convincing a handful of justices will get the existing law struck down? If the will of the people is wilted by the decree of the court, well, then, the people are wrong. Special-interest activists may have started us on the slippery slope to government by court order, but sly American spectators catch on quickly. One can ably argue that trial lawyers are in fact a special-interest group, but it's no longer just the lawyers who keep sharp eyes open for jackpot tort opportunities.

USA Today ran a story this week describing Wal-Mart's volume of lawsuits: The retailer was sued a staggering 4,851 times last year, about once every two hours.

Slip and fall in your house and you're just clumsy; do it in a Wal-Mart store and you're a victim of "neglect," which in the modern legal vernacular means you get to spin the judicial wheel of fortune.

There was also a small article in the Jonesboro Sun about a $ 2 million judgment against a student and a small college after the student, who was driving the plaintiff to a concert, had an automobile accident in which the plaintiff was seriously injured. Certainly, neither the college nor the driver had any intention of causing a car wreck. Fate is fickle. The plaintiff could easily have been driving and, being human, had the accident. Would he want to be sued under reverse circumstances?

We've all seen more than enough instances in which even self-inflicted human error is converted into a multimillion-dollar liability via the courts. Think McDonald's hot coffee. Or a Coke machine falling over on vandals trying to steal money from it. The lure of "big money," once only a cheesy game show phrase, has now achieved esquire status. If you're human, basically, you're potentially guilty--and liable. And you don't have to just worry about Big Brother watching. The sue-happy predator could be as close as the person riding next to you in your car.

Business As Usual

The New Republic
Monday, August 20, 2001

"Justice delayed is justice denied," Attorney General John Ashcroft told the American Bar Association's annual convention this week. The motivation for this pronouncement was Ashcroft's pique that the Senate "has moved slowly" in its consideration of President Bush's judicial nominees, resulting in a spate of vacancies that constitute "judicial emergencies." There are a few problems with Ashcroft's complaint. First, it's not true that the Senate has moved slowly: In less than eight months, it has approved about as many federal appeals court judges as it did in both Poppy's and Bill Clinton's entire first year in office, according to the Senate Judiciary Committee. But the greater problem with Ashcroft's indignation is its staggering hypocrisy: for almost no one in America bears greater responsibility for the current "judicial emergencies" than he does. When President Clinton nominated Ronnie White to become a district court judge in 1997, then-Senator Ashcroft blocked his nomination for two years before leading the campaign to kill it on the Senate floor. A year earlier, he placed a "hold" on Margaret Morrow's nomination to a California federal district court and opposed the confirmations of Merrick B. Garland, Frederica Massiah-Jackson, and Clarence Sundram. (Massiah-Jackson and Sundram, like White, never made it to the bench.) As one Ashcroft aide bragged to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch in 1997, "We're making business as usual impossible." Before Ashcroft chastises the Senate, he might want to consider his own record. Responsibility delayed is responsibility denied.

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)

- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.

- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.

- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 – $198 billion additional over 10 years.

- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy – the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.

- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown – $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates – $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift – $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending – $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.

- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.

- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 – 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy– the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

"The tax bill awaiting President Bush's signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we've been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points."
-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

"I think one point I'd like to get across as well, I think it's [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy."
-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

"The tax cut comes at a good time and could be an important catalyst in the long-awaited recovery."
-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

"We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year."
-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

"For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002."
-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President's tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors' Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."
-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."
-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."
-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies."

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

"When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn't purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. …[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money."

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

"The 'lockbox' is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the 'trust fund' is merely paper the government has issued to itself."

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

"The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they're held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you'd have redeeming you own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn't stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security's tax revenues and its outlays. It's replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it."

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

"One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits."

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

"They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government's ability to pay benefits."

A Summer Skirmish in Judge Wars

There's no August recess for the judicial nominations warriors.

Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), who has scheduled hearings for three would-be judges this month, is now in the middle of a fight between Michigan's two Democratic senators and the White House.

Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow are still steamed that two of former President Bill Clinton's nominees for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit never got hearings before the GOP-controlled Judiciary Committee.

Helene White, ... The Cincinnati-based 6th Circuit covers Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

In an Aug. 6 letter, Levin and Stabenow called for Leahy to halt all movement on any nominations to the 6th Circuit until the circumstances surrounding the two nominations are "resolved."

"Fairness demands that these two women be granted expeditious consideration by the White House and Senate," Levin and Stabenow wrote. "We urge you to determine who held up their nominations in prior years."

Leahy responded in a statement that he shared the Michigan senators' frustrations over the White and Lewis nominations, calling them "victims of needless and overly partisan delays."

Leahy added that he'd look into the matter when the Senate reconvenes in September, but he did not say whether he would hold up 6th Circuit nominations.

Two Bush nominees from Ohio have been pending since May-states' rights lightning rod Jeffrey Sutton and state Supreme Court Justice Deborah Cook.

In an Aug. 17 letter to Leahy, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales called the senators' request "troubling."

While Senate custom allows senators to hold up nominees from their own states, Levin and Stabenow want too much, Gonzales said. He notes that seven of 16 active seats on the 6th Circuit are vacant.

Holding up all 6th Circuit nominations, he wrote, "would distort the Senate's exercise of its advice and consent function by institutionalizing a practice whereby well-qualified nominees may be held hostage to the non-germane demands of individual Senators from other states."

Gonzales noted that Bush had already renominated one of Clinton's failed nominees, recently confirmed 4th Circuit Judge Roger Gregory.

"For any Senator to insist that this extraordinary and historic act be repeated is simply not fair,"

Gonzales concluded.

Mid-Session Review Talking Points

- Produce Second Largest Surplus in History: At $158 billion, the 2001 surplus will be the second largest surplus in history. If Congress keeps total spending at the limits agreed to in the Budget Resolution, the 2002 surplus will be even larger -- $173 billion. (In recent years excessive spending has been a problem. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to. President Bush has vowed to reverse this trend and stick to the budget.)

- Protect Social Security and Medicare: The President protects the Social Security surplus in 2001 and beyond, reserving it for debt reduction as opposed to other purposes. Every dollar collected for Medicare will be spent on Medicare. The Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds are fully credited and benefits remain the same. The size of the budget surplus has no impact on benefits, the size of the trust funds, or program solvency.

- Reform Medicare and Provide Prescription Drug Coverage: The budget review projects to spend $190 billion for Medicare reform including prescription drug coverage. This is $37 billion higher than the April budget submission, in keeping with the President's Medicare reform framework announced in July.

- Pay Down Historic Amounts of Debt: The government is still on track to pay off $2 trillion of federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

- Provide for a Strong Defense: The Mid-Session Review projects additional spending of $18.4 billion on national defense in FY 2002 – $198 billion additional over 10 years.

- Foster Economic Growth: Leading economists agree that the tax cut enacted under President Bush's leadership will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy – the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses and protect Medicare and Social Security.

- Accounting for the Surplus: The FY 2002 Budget released in April projected a surplus for FY 2001 of $281 billion. The new FY 2001 surplus projection is $158 billion. The $123 billion decrease is due to four factors: 1. decreased revenue from the year long economic slowdown – $46 billion or about 2 percent of revenues; 2. FY 2001 tax rebates – $40 billion; 3. corporate tax timing shift – $28 billion; and 4. defense and farm spending – $9 billion. The decline in the surplus due to factors other than congressional action is approximately 14 percent.

- Measure Social Security Receipts Accurately: Due to the intense interest in the relative size of the Social Security surplus, the Mid-Session Review presents the most accurate figures possible.

- Economic Assumptions: The extent of the economic slowdown, which commenced in Q3 2000, is greater than most forecasters anticipated. Nonetheless, the economy seems poised to recover, with the tax cut and lower interest rates providing timely stimulus to growth. The Administration projects real GDP growth this year to be 1.7 percent and in 2002 to be 3.2 percent. From 2002 – 2011, the Administration projects real GDP growth will average 3.2 percent per year. The Administration's projections are well within the range of estimates made by prominent Wall Street and other analysts. The Administration's 3.2 percent real GDP growth projection is equal to that of the Conference Board, winner of the Annual Blue Chip Economic Forecasting Award, and below that of Merrill Lynch, which projects a 3.5 percent real GDP for 2002.

Questions & Answers about the Mid –Session Review (MSR)

Q: Is there a deficit?

No- In FY 2001, after paying higher Medicare and Social Security expenses and other bills, the surplus will be $158 billion, which will be the second largest surplus in U.S. and world history.

Q: Are we still paying off debt?

Yes- President Bush has put the nation on a track to pay off $2 trillion of the Federal debt over the next ten years, which is the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.

There is a limit to how quickly debt can be paid off without incurring unnecessary and exorbitant premiums to buy back outstanding bonds before their maturity date.

Q: Are you going to be raiding the Social Security Trust Fund in 2001 or 2002?

No, the level of the surplus has no impact on the Social Security trust fund. Regardless of the level of the unified budget surplus, the Social Security Trust Fund will run an estimated surplus of $158 billion in FY 2001 and $173 billion in FY 2002. Fluctuations in the surplus levels will have no impact on the Social Security surplus, the balances in the Social Security trust fund, or on Social Security spending. Even so, the President has committed to protect every dollar of the Social Security surplus and that is exactly what his budget does.

Q: Is the President raiding Medicare?

No, Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone. The President's budget fully funds the Medicare Trust Fund. And Medicare spending continues to rise, as required by law. President Bush has pledged to modernize Medicare and seeks to work with Congress to ensure that Medicare meets its obligations to seniors, including a prescription drug benefit.

Q: Was the President's tax cut too big and irresponsible– sending us back into deficit spending?

No, this is the second largest surplus in our country's history, and the fiscal condition of the country remains strong, despite an economic slowdown. Further, the tax cut will help ensure that our fiscal condition remains healthy and we continue to run large surpluses by invigorating the economy.

The real threat to the surplus is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. In FY 2001 alone, Congress busted their own budget by $34 billion.

Q: Why has there been such a large change in surplus estimates?

The difference between the April estimates and the current estimates is $123 billion. Most of this is a designed reduction in the surplus ($68 billion). President Bush proposed a tax cut plan to boost our sagging economy and return surplus dollars to the American people, as well as supplemental spending on critical defense needs. The remainder of the change is due to a dip in the economy. The best way to ensure future surpluses is to promote economic growth. President Bush's tax plan will do that, pumping needed resources into the economy when it is needed most.

Q: The MSR shows a weakening economy. In light of that, should we scale back the tax cut?

No, The tax cut is exactly the right medicine for this economy at exactly the right time. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy– the most important thing we can do to ensure future surpluses.

"The tax bill awaiting President Bush's signature delivers fiscal stimulus sooner than we've been expecting, and it packs a punch: We estimate that it will boost second-half growth by about 1 ¼ percentage points."
-Morgan Stanley Dean Witter (May 29, 2001)

"I think one point I'd like to get across as well, I think it's [the tax plan is] very positive for the long-run economy."
-Mickey Levy, Bank of America (CBS News, June 8, 2001)

"The tax cut comes at a good time and could be an important catalyst in the long-awaited recovery."
-Jeffrey Feiner, Lehman Brothers (Washington Times, June 22, 2001)

"We estimate that the tax cuts will boost growth by nearly 1 percentage point in the second half of this year."
-Robert DiClemente, Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (Washington Post, June 2, 2001)

"For once, Congress managed to implement a contra-cyclical fiscal policy that should boost economic growth exactly when the economy needs it. The tax cut will pump about $40 billion into the economy during the third quarter and about $70 billion in FY 2002, which begins October 1. The tax cut will boost GDP growth by around ¾ of a percentage point during the second half of 2001 and about ½ of a percentage point in 2002."
-Bruce Steinberg, Merrill Lynch (June 1, 2001)

Q: Does the President's tax cut threaten Social Security and Medicare?

No, President Bush is committed to reforming and preserving Social Security and Medicare. With or without the enacted tax cut, benefits in both programs remain the same, the trust funds are protected and the long –term solvency of the programs are unchanged.

Q: Given the new numbers are Seniors' Social Security and Medicare benefits in jeopardy?

No, Seniors benefits will remain unchanged and in fact Social Security and Medicare spending will continue to grow.

Q: Why are you revising the Social Security figures?

The President is committed to preserving every penny of the Social Security surplus. Given the heightened status, real and symbolic, of the Social Security surplus it is important to measure it accurately. American companies are required to accurately report revenues, and the federal government should do it, too.

Therefore, a $5.6 billion correction to prior year estimates of Social Security payroll tax collections reflects the fact that the Social Security surplus was larger than previously thought in 1998, 1999, and 2000. Counting this revenue as though it had been paid in 2001 overstates the Social Security surplus for this year.

The real size of the Social Security surplus is $157.1 billion. Precise accuracy in determining the Social Security surplus in any year requires comparing actual revenue to actual expenditures.

Q: Is the President cutting Medicare Spending?

Medicare spending increases every year in President Bush's budget, rising from $217 billion in 2001, to $228 billion in 2002 and to $423 billion in 2011. Under the President's budget every penny of Medicare is spent on Medicare and Medicare alone.

Q: What is happening to the Medicare Trust Fund?

The Medicare Trust Fund is fully credited under the President's budget, as required by law, rising from $ 200 billion in 2002 to $737 billion in 2011.

Q: How does the trust fund balances effect the long term solvency of the Medicare Program?

The existence of balances large or small in the Medicare Part A Trust Fund have no effect on the long-term solvency of the program.

The Federal government must do something with the money it has lent itself. It can either pay off part of the publicly-held federal debt or spend the money on other government programs. Either way the same IOU goes in the trust fund.

As the Administration works to reform Medicare it believes that the program must be considered as one entity, rather than separate parts with separate funding streams. With revenue in FY 2001 of $197 billion from payroll taxes and premiums, and outlays of $242 billion, the general Treasury must contribute more than $45 billion to make up the shortfall.

Q: What are people outside the Administration saying about trust funds?

"Does how you use the Medicare annual surplus have any effect on the solvency of the Medicare program? No....[I]rrespective of how the Congress decides to use the annual Medicare surpluses (e.g. tax cuts, spending increases, paying down the debt held by the public), trust fund solvency will not be affected in any way."
-David M. Walker, Comptroller General of the United States and former Social Security and Medicare trustee, 7/25/01

"The image of raids on the Medicare and Social Security trust funds is false. The surpluses in these trust funds reflect a temporary excess of payroll taxes over current benefits. When this occurs, the trust funds transfer their spare cash to the Treasury, which gives them 'special issue' Treasury securities in return. The trust funds get the securities regardless of how the Treasury uses the spare cash -- whether to repay publicly help federal debt or to pay the government's bills. The trust funds simply aren't being raided."
-Robert J. Samuelson, Newsweek, 7/16/01

"[Sen. Kent Conrad's] message ... is that the Bush tax cuts have so sapped the federal Treasury that they are going to require a 'Raid on Medicare.' Even by Washington standards, this is ridiculous. Despite America's near-recession, there is nothing even close to a federal deficit. This year's surplus will be somewhat north of $160 billion, the second largest in history after last year's."
-Paul A. Gigot, Wall Street Journal, 7/13/01

"Q. What can the government do with the surplus? A. It has to spend it, because the federal government can't park that much money in a bank without affecting the financial markets. Q. [I]f we spend money intended for Social Security or Medicare on other government programs, aren't we raiding those programs? A. No. Under government accounting rules, no matter if we use the Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes for debt reduction or plain old spending, the programs receive an equivalent amount in interest-earning Treasury bonds. [N]o matter how the money is used, the programs' trust funds are unaffected because, in effect, they are lending the money to the United States. Q. So does it make a difference whether we use some of the Medicare funds for spending this year? A. Economically, it means virtually nothing in the short run. The government is still running a substantial surplus and paying down debt, but because the U.S. economy is so large, the amount of money involved is like pennies."

-Glenn Kessler, Washington Post, 7/22/01

"When an individual buys a government bond, he or she has established a financial claim against the government. When the government issues a security to one of its own accounts, it hasn't purchased anything or established a claim against some other person or entity. The key point is that the Trust Funds do not hold financial resources to pay benefits – rather, they provide authority for the Treasury Department to use whatever money it has on hand to pay them. …[T]he trust funds themselves do not hold or receive money."

-David Koitz, Congressional Research Service report, 3/20/01

"The 'lockbox' is a rhetorical device designed to advance the notion that the government can put money on the shelf today and use it to pay Social Security after 2016. But again, the 'trust fund' is merely paper the government has issued to itself."

-Robert L. Bartley, Wall Street Journal, 7/23/01

"The Social Security trust fund, which is part of the federal government, holds Treasury securities – I.O.U.s from the federal government – to meet its future obligations. Treasury bills are perfectly fine investments. But when they're held in federal trust funds, Uncle Sam has the same problem redeeming them that you'd have redeeming you own I.O.U.s in your personal trust fund. [T]he government hasn't stolen Social Security money, as many people believe. The government has, indeed, borrowed the Social Security surplus – the difference between Social Security's tax revenues and its outlays. It's replaced the money with I.O.U.s, and spent it."

-Allan Sloan, Newsweek, 7/30/01

"One of the key issues Democrats are trying to get mileage out of is claiming that the tax cut is eating into the Social Security surplus. This implies, falsely, that Social Security benefits are somehow at risk. In fact, there is essentially no relationship between the size of the Social Security trust fund, or the amount of the budget surplus attributable to the excess of current Social Security revenues over benefits."

-Bruce Bartlett, The Detroit News, 7/23/01

"They [trust funds] do not consist of real economic assets that can be drawn down in the future to fund benefits. Instead, they are claims on the Treasury that, when redeemed, will have to be financed by raising taxes, borrowing from the public, or reducing benefits or other expenditures. The existence of large trust fund balances, therefore, does not, by itself, have any impact on the Government's ability to pay benefits."

-President Clinton's FY 2000 Budget, Analytical Perspectives, page 337

Brett:

I am about to commence on a longshot, I appreciate any indulgence or assistance you can provide.

I am on the board of a charity called "Wings for Children". Wings provides free air transportation to ambulatory children of needy families. We serve the market that is within a 500 mile radius of Pittsburgh. We provide nearly 100 free flights a year.

This weekend (8/25 - 8/26) we are holding our annual fundraiser at the Allegheny County Airport (just south of Pittsburgh). Pilots and plane owners have donated their time and resources. The fundraiser is called "Fly Around Town for Pennies a Pound". We raise money by charging the public $0.15 per pound to take a half hour flight around the city of Pittsburgh.

It came to my attention that President Bush will be landing at the county airport this Sunday, presumably interrupting our fundraiser for a brief period. Obviously, we would love any chance to have the President meet our Wings founder (Mark Holewinski) and shake hands. It would provide an outstanding opportunity for us to raise awareness of the good we are doing in the community.

A couple of items that may make it personally appealing.
* The founder's wife is a Texan (complete w/ "Don't Mess with Texas" bumper sticker), and proud republican.
* You know I am a Yale 1987 graduate. Further, the president's inaugural speech and his emphasis on charitable work inspired me to accept the founder's invitation to join the board of his organization.
If you could forward the thrust of my message to the appropriate persons, I would most appreciate it. I apologize for imposing and understand completely if you cannot be help in this endeavor.

I hope all is well with you. See you next Spring.

Sincerely,

Stephen L. Kline, CFA

President Bush Takes Immediate Action to Spur America's Economy

From his first days in office President Bush has taken immediate action to jump-start the lagging economy he inherited by cutting taxes, paying off record amounts of debt and pursuing free trade policies to open the world's markets to America's goods and services.

☑ Cutting taxes to give an immediate stimulus to our lagging economy.

- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.
- Immediate tax rebates give Americans money when they need it most – NOW.
- Immediate tax rebates will help spur consumer spending to give our economy a jump-start. The rebates will also help boost consumer confidence.
- Leading economists agree that the President's tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

☑ Paying off record amounts of debt.

- Debt reduction of at least $2 trillion over the next 10 years – the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring wasteful premiums.
- Paying down debt helps lower interest rates
- Puts America on a stronger economic footing for the long term

☑ Pursuing free trade policies that will create new jobs and allow Americans to sell more of their goods and services to the world.

- President Bush has done all this -- and more -- and still the government has the 2nd largest surplus in history -- $158 billion.

- In the first year of Bill Clinton's presidency, he raised taxes and still had a $255 billion deficit. In the first year of his presidency, President George Bush has cut taxes to help our economy and the government today has the 2nd largest surplus in history of $158 billion, and next year will be even bigger at $173 billion.

- The biggest threat to our economy is excessive and wasteful Washington spending. As the final phase of the budget process begins the President will protect taxpayers, seniors and our men and women in uniform from this wasteful spending.

- Many Democrats agree with the President's views on the economy. Just yesterday, Democrat Senator Blanche Lincoln and Democrat Rep. Mike Ross told the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette that they both support the tax cut, and that the slumping economy, not the tax cut, is the reason the surplus levels have dropped.

The Democratic chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee held a one-man hearing Wednesday on two of President Bush's judicial nominees. The session during Congress' August vacation came amid Republicans complaints that Democrats are delaying action on President Bush's appointments.

"I want to get the process moving," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. "I'm trying to go the extra mile by coming back for hearings today." He looked at the empty chairs next to him and said: "I hope that at least some of the Republicans who complained why don't we have more hearings will also get on an airplane and join us."

The rare midvacation hearing did not impress Republicans.

"While we welcome any efforts to finally move the process along, we're far behind where we should be at this point in President Bush's term," said Matt Latimer, spokesman for one GOP committee member, Arizona's Jon Kyl.

Under consideration Wednesday were Reggie Walton, a District of Columbia judge nominated for the federal bench, and Richard Nedelkoff, Bush's pick to be director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance at the Justice Department.

Only four of Bush's 44 judicial nominees have been confirmed.

"A lot of us are trying to restore dignity and regularity to the nominations process. ... We're trying to make the process move smoothly," Leahy said.

The White House said it would work with Leahy to move the nominations along.

"There really is a national interest in filling the vacancies that are in the judiciary, and the administration is hopeful that the Senate will take that interest seriously," Bush's spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

Just before the August recess all of president's 164 unconfirmed nominees were sent back to the White House by Senate Democrats because of a political tiff over two contentious nominees.

The move was procedural and senators in both parties expect Bush to renominate all of his candidates.

Senators not present Wednesday can submit questions to Walton and Nedelkoff until Aug. 31. Following the Senate's return after Labor Day, the committee will decide if the nominations will be sent to the full Senate for a vote.

Leahy has scheduled a hearing Aug. 27 to consider two more nominees.

Avoiding A Political Deadend On Judges

By Lloyd Cutler and Mickey Edwards

Long before the President's first list of nominees to the federal courts arrived in the Senate, Senate Republicans and Democrats, and liberal and conservative organizations, were already at their battle stations. And it appears they remain there for the foreseeable future.

What used to be a fairly straightforward process - the nomination and confirmation of federal judges - has become more contested, acrimonious and time-consuming in recent years. According to research by the Constitution Project, the length of time from vacancy to confirmation has increased in every administration since President Ford's. It took the 105th Congress (1997-98) an average of 201 days to act on Clinton nominees. Consider that in 1922, when President Harding nominated George Sutherland, the Senate confirmed him within hours. In 1953, the Senate confirmed Earl Warren as Chief Justice without even questioning him.

The reasons for the change are not that complex. The number of federal judges has increased. The federal courts have been called upon to decide controversial social issues in such areas as school prayer, abortion, and affirmative action. This has, in turn, brought about increasing political pressure from interest groups that have proliferated dramatically in the last 20 years.

Two recent developments have further roiled partisan waters swirling around nominations. The first is the feeling of Democrats that Senate Republicans kept Clinton's court nominees bottled up in committee, sometimes for years, for ideological reasons. Republicans reply that Clinton was slow in getting nominations to the Senate. Both are right. It is also true that when a Republican holds the White House and the Democrats hold the Senate majority, the Democrats hold up judicial confirmations in presidential election years.

If Democratic senators hold to the principle of "an eye for an eye" and the Republicans hold to an absolute and exclusive presidential right to choose federal judges, the result will be an accelerating cycle of stalemate and polarization. In this scenario, the courts themselves cannot avoid being painted with accusations of partisanship. That would corrode popular belief in impartial justice and hence respect for the law.

Options are open to both sides to defuse the situation. First, they could agree upon a few principles based upon the recommendations of the Constitution Project:

One, candidates for judgeships should be committed to deciding cases based upon law and the facts of the case and should renounce ideological commitments.

Two, candidates should be nominated and confirmed based upon experience, qualifications, temperament, character and general views of the law and the judicial role.

Three, the president and the Senate must not ask for, and the candidate not offer or consent to give, any pre-commitments about unresolved cases or issues that may come before them as judges.

Four, all parties to the nomination and confirmation process should conduct themselves only in ways that reinforce the principle of judicial independence.

Fifth, diversity on the federal bench is consistent with judicial independence and should be a goal of the appointment process.

Sixth, the country is entitled to a viable and efficient federal court system. Candidates therefore should move through nomination, Senate hearings and floor vote expeditiously and fairly.

For the good of the country and the integrity of the courts, the president should seek the meaningful counsel of all parties before deciding on nominees. This he can certainly do without relinquishing his exclusive constitutional authority to nominate judicial candidates. For their part, Democrats should participate in such consultations with the sole condition that the nominee satisfy the broad judicial criteria enumerated above.

Finally, we would call upon various interest groups not to decide in advance that they will oppose or support all nominees that come from the White House. We should not demand pro-life or pro-choice judges but independent judges. We should not demand judges who are friendly to labor or business, but judges who are manifestly unbiased in either direction. We should not demand pro-environment or pro-development judges, but those who will look at the facts of the case, and decide in favor of the law, the Constitution and thus all the people of the United States.

Above all, we should seek agreement on nominees who can win confirmation under the existing political conditions. Unwavering dedication to the principle of judicial independence should be the legacy of the Bush administration and the 107th Congress. The public interest demands no less.

Ari Fleischer Holds White House Briefing

By Lloyd Cutler and Mickey Edwards
FDCH Political Transcripts

QUESTION: Senator Leahy today held a hearing attended only by himself, I think, on...

FLEISCHER: Then I'm sure there were no debates.

QUESTION: ... one of the president's judicial nominees. What does the White House feel about the pace of the Judicial Committee hearings on the president's nominees? And why did the president not request a holdover before the August break occurred, which would have then made it unnecessary for Senator Leahy to hold this hearing today?

FLEISCHER: Well, as far as the pace of the nominees go, this administration, even with a shortened transition, is way ahead of the pace of previous presidents in their first years -- President Clinton, President Bush or President Reagan -- in making nominations, including that to the federal courts.

The administration is going to work very hard and diligently with Senator Leahy to move forward on Senate confirmation of those nominees.

You know, that's really not a partisan issue, that's an issue about how to serve people who have a legitimate claim and need to go to court and don't want to wait in line for courtrooms to open up because there are no judges sitting in judgment. And that's why, whether you're a Democrat or you're a Republican, there really is a national interest in filling the vacancies that are in the judiciary, and the administration is hopeful that the Senate will take that interest seriously and will serve the public.

QUESTION: I mean you're comfortable with the pace, then, that the Senate has maintained?

FLEISCHER: I think we'll know more by the end of the year. In fairness, many of the nominations the administration made came in late July, and so the Senate's just taking a look at those now, and the Senate has every right for advice and consent, they're going to exercise their prerogatives.

I think it will be an interesting question to take a look at come October and November when Congress is ready to recess for the year. At that point, there'll be a serious burden on the Congress and on the United States Senate particularly to have taken action and passed the nominees so that the judiciary is not clogged and so there aren't vacancies when people expect to have their fair day in court.

For the good of the country and the integrity of the courts, the president should seek the meaningful counsel of all parties before deciding on nominees. This he can certainly do without relinquishing his exclusive constitutional authority to nominate judicial candidates. For their part, Democrats should participate in such consultations with the sole condition that the nominee satisfy the broad judicial criteria enumerated above.

Finally, we would call upon various interest groups not to decide in advance that they will oppose or support all nominees that come from the White House. We should not demand pro-life or pro-choice judges but independent judges. We should not demand judges who are friendly to labor or business, but judges who are manifestly unbiased in either direction. We should not demand pro-environment or pro-development judges, but those who will look at the facts of the case, and decide in favor of the law, the Constitution and thus all the people of the United States.

Above all, we should seek agreement on nominees who can win confirmation under the existing political conditions. Unwavering dedication to the principle of judicial independence should be the legacy of the Bush administration and the 107th Congress. The public interest demands no less.

Ari Fleischer Holds White House Briefing

By Lloyd Cutler and Mickey Edwards
FDCH Political Transcripts
Wednesday, August 22, 2001

QUESTION: Senator Leahy today held a hearing attended only by himself, I think, on...

FLEISCHER: Then I'm sure there were no debates.

QUESTION: ... one of the president's judicial nominees. What does the White House feel about the pace of the Judicial Committee hearings on the president's nominees? And why did the president not request a holdover before the August break occurred, which would have then made it unnecessary for Senator Leahy to hold this hearing today?

FLEISCHER: Well, as far as the pace of the nominees go, this administration, even with a shortened transition, is way ahead of the pace of previous presidents in their first years -- President Clinton, President Bush or President Reagan -- in making nominations, including that to the federal courts.

The administration is going to work very hard and diligently with Senator Leahy to move forward on Senate confirmation of those nominees.

You know, that's really not a partisan issue, that's an issue about how to serve people who have a legitimate claim and need to go to court and don't want to wait in line for courtrooms to open up because there are no judges sitting in judgment. And that's why, whether you're a Democrat or you're a Republican, there really is a national interest in filling the vacancies that are in the judiciary, and the administration is hopeful that the Senate will take that interest seriously and will serve the public.

QUESTION: I mean you're comfortable with the pace, then, that the Senate has maintained?

FLEISCHER: I think we'll know more by the end of the year. In fairness, many of the nominations the administration made came in late July, and so the Senate's just taking a look at those now, and the Senate has every right for advice and consent, they're going to exercise their prerogatives.

I think it will be an interesting question to take a look at come October and November when Congress is ready to recess for the year. At that point, there'll be a serious burden on the Congress and on the United States Senate particularly to have taken action and passed the nominees so that the judiciary is not clogged and so there aren't vacancies when people expect to have their fair day in court.

The Democratic chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee held a one-man hearing Wednesday on two of President Bush's judicial nominees. The session during Congress' August vacation came amid Republicans complaints that Democrats are delaying action on President Bush's appointments.

"I want to get the process moving," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. "I'm trying to go the extra mile by coming back for hearings today." He looked at the empty chairs next to him and said: "I hope that at least some of the Republicans who complained why don't we have more hearings will also get on an airplane and join us."

The rare midvacation hearing did not impress Republicans.

"While we welcome any efforts to finally move the process along, we're far behind where we should be at this point in President Bush's term," said Matt Latimer, spokesman for one GOP committee member, Arizona's Jon Kyl.

Under consideration Wednesday were Reggie Walton, a District of Columbia judge nominated for the federal bench, and Richard Nedelkoff, Bush's pick to be director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance at the Justice Department.

Only four of Bush's 44 judicial nominees have been confirmed.

"A lot of us are trying to restore dignity and regularity to the nominations process. ... We're trying to make the process move smoothly," Leahy said.

The White House said it would work with Leahy to move the nominations along.

"There really is a national interest in filling the vacancies that are in the judiciary, and the administration is hopeful that the Senate will take that interest seriously," Bush's spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

Just before the August recess all of president's 164 unconfirmed nominees were sent back to the White House by Senate Democrats because of a political tiff over two contentious nominees.

The move was procedural and senators in both parties expect Bush to renominate all of his candidates.

Senators not present Wednesday can submit questions to Walton and Nedelkoff until Aug. 31. Following the Senate's return after Labor Day, the committee will decide if the nominations will be sent to the full Senate for a vote.

Leahy has scheduled a hearing Aug. 27 to consider two more nominees.

Avoiding A Political Deadend On Judges

By Lloyd Cutler and Mickey Edwards
Scripps Howard News Service
Wednesday, August 22, 2001

Long before the President's first list of nominees to the federal courts arrived in the Senate, Senate Republicans and Democrats, and liberal and conservative organizations, were already at their battle stations. And it appears they remain there for the foreseeable future.

What used to be a fairly straightforward process - the nomination and confirmation of federal judges - has become more contested, acrimonious and time-consuming in recent years. According to research by the Constitution Project, the length of time from vacancy to confirmation has increased in every administration since President Ford's. It took the 105th Congress (1997-98) an average of 201 days to act on Clinton nominees. Consider that in 1922, when President Harding nominated George Sutherland, the Senate confirmed him within hours. In 1953, the Senate confirmed Earl Warren as Chief Justice without even questioning him.

The reasons for the change are not that complex. The number of federal judges has increased. The federal courts have been called upon to decide controversial social issues in such areas as school prayer, abortion, and affirmative action. This has, in turn, brought about increasing political pressure from interest groups that have proliferated dramatically in the last 20 years.

Two recent developments have further roiled partisan waters swirling around nominations. The first is the feeling of Democrats that Senate Republicans kept Clinton's court nominees bottled up in committee, sometimes for years, for ideological reasons. Republicans reply that Clinton was slow in getting nominations to the Senate. Both are right. It is also true that when a Republican holds the White House and the Democrats hold the Senate majority, the Democrats hold up judicial confirmations in presidential election years.

If Democratic senators hold to the principle of "an eye for an eye" and the Republicans hold to an absolute and exclusive presidential right to choose federal judges, the result will be an accelerating cycle of stalemate and polarization. In this scenario, the courts themselves cannot avoid being painted with accusations of partisanship. That would corrode popular belief in impartial justice and hence respect for the law.

Options are open to both sides to defuse the situation. First, they could agree upon a few principles based upon the recommendations of the Constitution Project:

One, candidates for judgeships should be committed to deciding cases based upon law and the facts of the case and should renounce ideological commitments.

Two, candidates should be nominated and confirmed based upon experience, qualifications, temperament, character and general views of the law and the judicial role.

Three, the president and the Senate must not ask for, and the candidate not offer or consent to give, any pre-commitments about unresolved cases or issues that may come before them as judges.

Four, all parties to the nomination and confirmation process should conduct themselves only in ways that reinforce the principle of judicial independence.

Fifth, diversity on the federal bench is consistent with judicial independence and should be a goal of the appointment process.

Sixth, the country is entitled to a viable and efficient federal court system. Candidates therefore should move through nomination, Senate hearings and floor vote expeditiously and fairly.

For the good of the country and the integrity of the courts, the president should seek the meaningful counsel of all parties before deciding on nominees. This he can certainly do without relinquishing his exclusive constitutional authority to nominate judicial candidates. For their part, Democrats should participate in such consultations with the sole condition that the nominee satisfy the broad judicial criteria enumerated above.

Finally, we would call upon various interest groups not to decide in advance that they will

I saw and talked to Senator Nickles when I was in Idaho; as I will explain to all of you, I think the Judge needs to meet and talk to him too -- not necessarily on the Garrett story, but on nominations generally. Despite my efforts, he still thinks we are too slow, behind, etc. Involving him more in the process probably will be a good thing on a forward-going basis as well.

Subject: Judge's Major Garrett comments

Staffers for Sen. Sessions and Kyl called today pretty distressed about the comments on Republican mistreatment of Clinton nominees and worried that those comments will be used by Leahy and the Dems to beat us up in the fall. I explained the circumstances, and they urged us to try to find some way to "revise and extend" the Judge's remarks, as it were. I think the letter Brett drafted that was originally designed to go the Senate as a whole would be a perfect way to do this; another thought is a speech. The Senate Republicans would, however, like us to think about ways we might put the Judge's comments into perspective through some fuller account of his views.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.

- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.

- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.

- The President is focused on family budgets, not Washington budgets. The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.

- Democrats support the President's tax relief.

  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)

- The president will fight any attempt to increase taxes because tax increases would be the worst step we could take for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut is the key to jump-starting our economy. The best way to increase revenues is to spur economic growth.

- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.

- The President's budget funds key priorities:

  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

The auction part of this is a problem, correct?

Subject: Pictures for Fundraiser

Dear Mr. Kavanaugh:

Would it be appropriate to use the political auto-pen to sign campaign pictures that would be auctioned off at a Kentucky fundraiser? The pictures are of the President and First Lady on the campaign trail. If you have any questions about this you can call me at 6-0385 or contact Cathy Bell at the Kentucky GOP at [PRA 6]

Thank you,

Dustin Olson

A former Senate Judiciary Committee lawyer nominated to be a federal judge denied under oath Monday that he leaked confidential material for a book on the Clarence Thomas hearings in 1991.

``That allegation is absolutely 100 percent untrue,'' Terry Wooten said at a confirmation hearing before the committee. Wooten, currently a U.S. magistrate judge in South Carolina, has been picked by the Bush administration for U.S. District Court in the state.

David Brock, the book's author, said Monday in an affidavit sent to the committee that he received several pages of ``raw FBI files'' from Wooten that he used for an article and a book aimed at discrediting Anita Hill and another woman, Angela Wright, who accused Thomas of sexual harassment. Hill's charges nearly derailed Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

During Thomas' hearings, Wooten worked for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., as the committee's chief Republican counsel.

Wooten told the current committee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., that as chief counsel he did not normally read confidential files, and if briefed on their contents, ``I would absolutely not discuss those files with anybody'' outside the committee.

Wooten said he had a brief conversation with Brock after Thomas was confirmed to the high court, but ``no confidential information was released or made available to him.''

In his statement, Brock said that in researching his book he had numerous conversations with members of the former Bush White House staff on how to obtain FBI files. ``Their goal, and mine, was to use the FBI material to discredit Ms. Wright,'' Brock said.

He said Wooten handed him the FBI material in a Capitol Hill office, and ``with Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office and took it to my house in northwest Washington, where I was writing the book.'' Wooten's allegations were first carried in the Saturday edition of the Los Angeles Times.

Leahy, speaking to reporters after the hearing, said he would look into whether Wooten gave confidential material to Brock. He did not expect trouble with Wooten's confirmation.

``Mr. Wooten is under oath, and he understands very well the importance of being accurate,'' Leahy said. ``I can't believe that he would lie before the committee.''

A Republican on the committee, Sen. Mike DeWine of Ohio, also did not anticipate any delays ``unless additional facts come out.''

A liberal group, Alliance for Justice, urged the committee to hold up the nomination pending a full investigation of the accusations of ``serious ethical impropriety.''

Brock, once a fiercely partisan conservative writer, has in recent years disavowed his connections to the conservative movement and voiced regret for participating in right-wing efforts to defame opponents.

Also testifying before the highly unusual August recess hearing was Sharon Prost. She is the chief GOP counsel for the committee and a top aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the panel.

The Bush administration has nominated Prost to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Leahy said he scheduled Monday's hearing, and one last week, to show his determination to move forward on judicial nominations despite a Senate controversy over the nominating process.

Before leaving for the August recess, Senate Republicans forced the Senate to return all 164 unconfirmed executive and judicial nominees back to the White House to protest Democratic plans to force the renomination of two contentious candidates, Sheila Gall to be head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Otto Reich to head the State Department's Western Hemisphere division.

The White House is expected to send back all the nominations when Congress reconvenes next

Anita Hill Says Judge Leaked FBI Files

David Savage
The Los Angeles
Saturday, August 25, 2001

David Brock, the formerly conservative writer turned scourge of the conservative movement, said Friday that a protege of Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) who has been nominated as a U.S. district judge gave him confidential FBI files nearly 10 years ago for his book on the Clarence Thomas .versus Anita Faye Hill controversy.

Brock filed a sworn statement with the Senate Judiciary Committee late Friday.

On Monday, the panel is scheduled to hold a confirmation hearing for Judge Terry L. Wooten, now a federal magistrate in Florence, S.C. His nomination by President Bush was not controversial.

But Brock's charge threatens to reopen a bruising episode for the committee. In 1991, Wooten was the committee's chief Republican counsel, and he helped coordinate the defense of Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court. In September of that year, when Hill sent the committee a statement accusing her former boss of having harassed her with crude sexual comments, Wooten chose to withhold the information from the Republican senators. They were then surprised--and in some instances, furious--when the accusations were revealed on the eve of a Senate vote for Thomas.

Wooten said in later published accounts that his withholding of Hill's statement was "an effort to control the damage."

But, of course, the Thomas confirmation hearings played out as a national TV drama, and the hard feelings remained after Thomas won a narrow confirmation.

In October 1991, Brock said he was commissioned to write a book to discredit Hill and Angela

Wright, who also accused Thomas of making crude comments.

Brock now has said that White House aides sent him to Wooten to obtain FBI files that contained derogatory comments about Wright.

"Mr. Wooten handed me copies of several pages of Ms. Wright's raw FBI files," Brock said in his sworn statement. "This material included FBI interviews of Ms. Wright's former employers and former co-workers. With Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office."

The FBI material appeared in a March 1992 article in the American Spectator, a conservative magazine funded by reclusive billionaire Richard Mellon Scaife. Brock's book, "The Real Anita Hill," was published a year later.

At several points in the book, Brock quotes from "an FBI file" that referred to Wright as "vengeful, angry and immature."

"There's no way I could have gotten this if Wooten hadn't given me the files," Brock said Friday.

Wooten did not return calls to his office Friday, but in conversations with two senior administration officials, he denied Brock's charge. The officials said Wooten conceded that he met with Brock to discuss his book but insisted he did not give him FBI files. Wooten said he had not even seen or known of an FBI file on Wright, according to the officials, who spoke only on condition on anonymity.

"Based on all of our information and investigation, there is absolutely no basis for any allegation that Judge Wooten provided Brock with FBI materials related to Ms. Wright," said Mindy Tucker, a Justice Department spokeswoman.

"I think it would be unfortunate if the desire for book sales promulgated a charge involving a man's integrity, such as this might," she said of Brock's sworn statement.

Brock had a falling out with conservatives in 1996 after his book on then-First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton turned out to be more laudatory than critical.

More recently, Brock has disavowed most of his earlier work, including the book on Hill. "I was a witting cog in the Republican sleaze machine," he wrote in the August issue of Talk magazine.

This fall, he is set to publish "Blinded by the Right," a book that he says will set the record straight by telling the truth about his past dealings.

Some former friends say that since Brock has admitted publishing dubious stories in the past, he cannot be trusted now. But because of his earlier access to conservative inner circles, he could pose a danger for some nominees.

In May, the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Theodore B. Olson, Bush's nominee to be U.S. solicitor general, because Brock alleged Olson was involved in the "Arkansas Project," a Scaife-funded effort to dig up dirt on former President Clinton.

In the end, the committee could not resolve the issue, and Olson won a narrow Senate approval.

The FBI Can't Be Trusted To Vet Judges; When A Spy Agency Knows Personal Secrets, It Has The Potential To Influence Judicial Decisions

Stephen Yagman
The Los Angeles Times
Monday, August 27, 2001

Stephen Yagman, a Venice Beach federal civil rights lawyer, was, special prosecutor for the state of Idaho in the Ruby Ridge prosecution, of an FBI sniper

Serious people of all political stripes should question whether it is appropriate for the FBI to continue to be the agency that vets our federal judges.

In the past 10 years, the FBI has brought itself into disrepute and disgrace, yet its false pride continues unabated.

One need not go back to the days of yesteryear to question the bureau's competency and integrity.

Back then, J. Edgar Hoover's FBI not only Red-baited, it denied that the mob existed and refused to investigate federal civil rights violations--all the while righteously blowing its own horn. For years, the most glaring example of bureau misconduct was the famed Rosenberg espionage trial, where, in an attempt to influence the outcome and ensure the death penalty, Hoover had illegal conversations with the judge overseeing the case.

The FBI today continues to be an incredibly effective propaganda machine, having mastered the techniques it learned from its erstwhile paper tiger enemy--the Soviet Union.

Some recent examples:

* Ruby Ridge. f7 On Aug. 22, 1992, FBI agents surrounded a broken-down cabin in northern Idaho and killed an unarmed woman holding a 10-month-old baby by shooting the woman in the head.

No legal consequences befell the sniper who fired the fatal shot, nor were his superiors punished for writing clearly unconstitutional rules of engagement that made the fatal shot possible.

* Waco, Texas. f7 On April 19, 1993, the FBI stormed the Branch Davidian compound. When it was done, more than 80 men, women and small children were dead.

Though then-Atty. Gen. Janet Reno took full responsibility for what the FBI did, it later became clear that Reno had been duped by the agency into believing the actions it proposed taking had little risk.

* Wen Ho Lee. In 1998, the FBI caused the jailing--mostly in shackled solitary confinement--of Taiwan-born American scientist Wen Ho Lee.

When Lee finally got his freedom after nine months, the federal judge chastised the FBI, among other government agencies, for misleading him.

Neil Lewis New York Times
June 26, 2001

REV_00197766

* Robert Philip Hanssen. In 2000, it was learned that long-time FBI counterintelligence agent Robert Philip Hanssen was a Russian spy whom the bureau itself had been unable to identify or catch and whose spying had resulted in a number of assassinations.

Once Hanssen was caught and charged, the FBI made sure a quick plea bargain was worked out so that the fiasco would go away quickly and quietly.

* Timothy McVeigh. The FBI, unconstitutionally and in violation of a federal judge's order, concealed evidence from Oklahoma City mass murderer Timothy McVeigh that should have been available to his defense team.

Throughout all this, the FBI has been the agency responsible--using both retired and active agents--for investigating and vetting federal judicial nominees.

In that vetting, the FBI interrogates not only the nominees, but also their families, friends, neighbors and business associates. It gets their tax returns. It learns the most intimate details of nominees' lives and puts all this information into its files.

The peccadilloes or idiosyncrasies of those headed for judicial office--such as the homosexuality of G. Harrold Carswell, the federal appeals judge from Florida whom President Nixon nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court--can be held confidentially, or not.

Once a nominee is confirmed and seated on the bench, just knowing that the FBI possessed such information could influence his or her decisions.

There is no legitimate reason to, and many good reasons not to, let the FBI continue to investigate federal judicial nominees.

It is too difficult to know how the agency might use the confidential information it gets. Its powers are too great, its mentality and institutional history too blemished and its competence and credibility too low.

Any confidence in its integrity is clearly unwarranted.

REV_00197767

There is good reason to establish an independent, joint executive-legislative branch office to vet federal judicial nominees.

This would ensure that when FBI agents make their frequent appearances before federal judges to obtain arrest, search and eavesdropping warrants and to give testimony in criminal trials, these judges won't feel an inclination or an obligation to do whatever the FBI tells them to do.

A former Senate Judiciary Committee lawyer nominated to be a federal judge denied under oath Monday that he leaked confidential material for a book on the Clarence Thomas hearings in 1991.

``That allegation is absolutely 100 percent untrue,'' Terry Wooten said at a confirmation hearing before the committee. Wooten, currently a U.S. magistrate judge in South Carolina, has been picked by the Bush administration for U.S. District Court in the state.

David Brock, the book's author, said Monday in an affidavit sent to the committee that he received several pages of ``raw FBI files'' from Wooten that he used for an article and a book aimed at discrediting Anita Hill and another woman, Angela Wright, who accused Thomas of sexual harassment. Hill's charges nearly derailed Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

During Thomas' hearings, Wooten worked for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., as the committee's chief Republican counsel.

Wooten told the current committee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., that as chief counsel he did not normally read confidential files, and if briefed on their contents, ``I would absolutely not discuss those files with anybody'' outside the committee.

Wooten said he had a brief conversation with Brock after Thomas was confirmed to the high court, but ``no confidential information was released or made available to him.''

In his statement, Brock said that in researching his book he had numerous conversations with members of the former Bush White House staff on how to obtain FBI files. ``Their goal, and mine, was to use the FBI material to discredit Ms. Wright,'' Brock said.

He said Wooten handed him the FBI material in a Capitol Hill office, and ``with Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office and took it to my house in northwest Washington, where I was writing the book.'' Wooten's allegations were first carried in the Saturday edition of the Los Angeles Times.

Leahy, speaking to reporters after the hearing, said he would look into whether Wooten gave confidential material to Brock. He did not expect trouble with Wooten's confirmation.

``Mr. Wooten is under oath, and he understands very well the importance of being accurate,'' Leahy said. ``I can't believe that he would lie before the committee.''

A Republican on the committee, Sen. Mike DeWine of Ohio, also did not anticipate any delays ``unless additional facts come out.''

A liberal group, Alliance for Justice, urged the committee to hold up the nomination pending a full investigation of the accusations of ``serious ethical impropriety.''

Brock, once a fiercely partisan conservative writer, has in recent years disavowed his connections to the conservative movement and voiced regret for participating in right-wing efforts to defame opponents.

Also testifying before the highly unusual August recess hearing was Sharon Prost. She is the chief GOP counsel for the committee and a top aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the panel.

The Bush administration has nominated Prost to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Leahy said he scheduled Monday's hearing, and one last week, to show his determination to move forward on judicial nominations despite a Senate controversy over the nominating process.

Before leaving for the August recess, Senate Republicans forced the Senate to return all 164 unconfirmed executive and judicial nominees back to the White House to protest Democratic plans to force the renomination of two contentious candidates, Sheila Gall to be head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Otto Reich to head the State Department's Western Hemisphere division.

The White House is expected to send back all the nominations when Congress reconvenes next

Anita Hill Says Judge Leaked FBI Files

David Savage
The Los Angeles
Saturday, August 25, 2001

David Brock, the formerly conservative writer turned scourge of the conservative movement, said Friday that a protege of Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) who has been nominated as a U.S. district judge gave him confidential FBI files nearly 10 years ago for his book on the Clarence Thomas .versus Anita Faye Hill controversy.

Brock filed a sworn statement with the Senate Judiciary Committee late Friday.

On Monday, the panel is scheduled to hold a confirmation hearing for Judge Terry L. Wooten, now a federal magistrate in Florence, S.C. His nomination by President Bush was not controversial.

But Brock's charge threatens to reopen a bruising episode for the committee. In 1991, Wooten was the committee's chief Republican counsel, and he helped coordinate the defense of Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court. In September of that year, when Hill sent the committee a statement accusing her former boss of having harassed her with crude sexual comments, Wooten chose to withhold the information from the Republican senators. They were then surprised--and in some instances, furious--when the accusations were revealed on the eve of a Senate vote for Thomas.

Wooten said in later published accounts that his withholding of Hill's statement was "an effort to control the damage."

But, of course, the Thomas confirmation hearings played out as a national TV drama, and the hard feelings remained after Thomas won a narrow confirmation.

In October 1991, Brock said he was commissioned to write a book to discredit Hill and Angela

Wright, who also accused Thomas of making crude comments.

Brock now has said that White House aides sent him to Wooten to obtain FBI files that contained derogatory comments about Wright.

"Mr. Wooten handed me copies of several pages of Ms. Wright's raw FBI files," Brock said in his sworn statement. "This material included FBI interviews of Ms. Wright's former employers and former co-workers. With Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office."

The FBI material appeared in a March 1992 article in the American Spectator, a conservative magazine funded by reclusive billionaire Richard Mellon Scaife. Brock's book, "The Real Anita Hill," was published a year later.

At several points in the book, Brock quotes from "an FBI file" that referred to Wright as "vengeful, angry and immature."

"There's no way I could have gotten this if Wooten hadn't given me the files," Brock said Friday.

Wooten did not return calls to his office Friday, but in conversations with two senior administration officials, he denied Brock's charge. The officials said Wooten conceded that he met with Brock to discuss his book but insisted he did not give him FBI files. Wooten said he had not even seen or known of an FBI file on Wright, according to the officials, who spoke only on condition on anonymity.

"Based on all of our information and investigation, there is absolutely no basis for any allegation that Judge Wooten provided Brock with FBI materials related to Ms. Wright," said Mindy Tucker, a Justice Department spokeswoman.

"I think it would be unfortunate if the desire for book sales promulgated a charge involving a man's integrity, such as this might," she said of Brock's sworn statement.

Brock had a falling out with conservatives in 1996 after his book on then-First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton turned out to be more laudatory than critical.

More recently, Brock has disavowed most of his earlier work, including the book on Hill. "I was a witting cog in the Republican sleaze machine," he wrote in the August issue of Talk magazine.

This fall, he is set to publish "Blinded by the Right," a book that he says will set the record straight by telling the truth about his past dealings.

Some former friends say that since Brock has admitted publishing dubious stories in the past, he cannot be trusted now. But because of his earlier access to conservative inner circles, he could pose a danger for some nominees.

In May, the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Theodore B. Olson, Bush's nominee to be U.S. solicitor general, because Brock alleged Olson was involved in the "Arkansas Project," a Scaife-funded effort to dig up dirt on former President Clinton.

In the end, the committee could not resolve the issue, and Olson won a narrow Senate approval.

The FBI Can't Be Trusted To Vet Judges; When A Spy Agency Knows Personal Secrets, It Has The Potential To Influence Judicial Decisions

Serious people of all political stripes should question whether it is appropriate for the FBI to continue to be the agency that vets our federal judges.

In the past 10 years, the FBI has brought itself into disrepute and disgrace, yet its false pride continues unabated.

REV_00197776

One need not go back to the days of yesteryear to question the bureau's competency and integrity.

Back then, J. Edgar Hoover's FBI not only Red-baited, it denied that the mob existed and refused to investigate federal civil rights violations--all the while righteously blowing its own horn. For years, the most glaring example of bureau misconduct was the famed Rosenberg espionage trial, where, in an attempt to influence the outcome and ensure the death penalty, Hoover had illegal conversations with the judge overseeing the case.

The FBI today continues to be an incredibly effective propaganda machine, having mastered the techniques it learned from its erstwhile paper tiger enemy--the Soviet Union.

Some recent examples:

* Ruby Ridge. f7 On Aug. 22, 1992, FBI agents surrounded a broken-down cabin in northern Idaho and killed an unarmed woman holding a 10-month-old baby by shooting the woman in the head.

No legal consequences befell the sniper who fired the fatal shot, nor were his superiors punished for writing clearly unconstitutional rules of engagement that made the fatal shot possible.

* Waco, Texas. f7 On April 19, 1993, the FBI stormed the Branch Davidian compound. When it was done, more than 80 men, women and small children were dead.

Though then-Atty. Gen. Janet Reno took full responsibility for what the FBI did, it later became clear that Reno had been duped by the agency into believing the actions it proposed taking had little risk.

* Wen Ho Lee. In 1998, the FBI caused the jailing--mostly in shackled solitary confinement--of Taiwan-born American scientist Wen Ho Lee.

When Lee finally got his freedom after nine months, the federal judge chastised the FBI, among other government agencies, for misleading him.

Neil Lewis New York Times
June 26, 2001

REV_00197777

* Robert Philip Hanssen. In 2000, it was learned that long-time FBI counterintelligence agent Robert Philip Hanssen was a Russian spy whom the bureau itself had been unable to identify or catch and whose spying had resulted in a number of assassinations.

Once Hanssen was caught and charged, the FBI made sure a quick plea bargain was worked out so that the fiasco would go away quickly and quietly.

* Timothy McVeigh. The FBI, unconstitutionally and in violation of a federal judge's order, concealed evidence from Oklahoma City mass murderer Timothy McVeigh that should have been available to his defense team.

Throughout all this, the FBI has been the agency responsible--using both retired and active agents--for investigating and vetting federal judicial nominees.

In that vetting, the FBI interrogates not only the nominees, but also their families, friends, neighbors and business associates. It gets their tax returns. It learns the most intimate details of nominees' lives and puts all this information into its files.

The peccadilloes or idiosyncrasies of those headed for judicial office--such as the homosexuality of G. Harrold Carswell, the federal appeals judge from Florida whom President Nixon nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court--can be held confidentially, or not.

Once a nominee is confirmed and seated on the bench, just knowing that the FBI possessed such information could influence his or her decisions.

There is no legitimate reason to, and many good reasons not to, let the FBI continue to investigate federal judicial nominees.

It is too difficult to know how the agency might use the confidential information it gets. Its powers are too great, its mentality and institutional history too blemished and its competence and credibility too low.

Any confidence in its integrity is clearly unwarranted.

There is good reason to establish an independent, joint executive-legislative branch office to vet federal judicial nominees.

This would ensure that when FBI agents make their frequent appearances before federal judges to obtain arrest, search and eavesdropping warrants and to give testimony in criminal trials, these judges won't feel an inclination or an obligation to do whatever the FBI tells them to do.

Some former friends say that since Brock has admitted publishing dubious stories in the past, he cannot be trusted now. But because of his earlier access to conservative inner circles, he could pose a danger for some nominees.

In May, the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Theodore B. Olson, Bush's nominee to be U.S. solicitor general, because Brock alleged Olson was involved in the "Arkansas Project," a Scaife-funded effort to dig up dirt on former President Clinton.

In the end, the committee could not resolve the issue, and Olson won a narrow Senate approval.

The FBI Can't Be Trusted To Vet Judges; When A Spy Agency Knows Personal Secrets, It Has The Potential To Influence Judicial Decisions

Serious people of all political stripes should question whether it is appropriate for the FBI to continue to be the agency that vets our federal judges.

One need not go back to the days of yesteryear to question the bureau's competency and integrity.

Back then, J. Edgar Hoover's FBI not only Red-baited, it denied that the mob existed and refused to investigate federal civil rights violations--all the while righteously blowing its own horn. For years, the most glaring example of bureau misconduct was the famed Rosenberg espionage trial, where, in an attempt to influence the outcome and ensure the death penalty, Hoover had illegal conversations with the judge overseeing the case.

The FBI today continues to be an incredibly effective propaganda machine, having mastered the techniques it learned from its erstwhile paper tiger enemy--the Soviet Union.

Some recent examples:

* Ruby Ridge. f7 On Aug. 22, 1992, FBI agents surrounded a broken-down cabin in northern Idaho and killed an unarmed woman holding a 10-month-old baby by shooting the woman in the head.

No legal consequences befell the sniper who fired the fatal shot, nor were his superiors punished for writing clearly unconstitutional rules of engagement that made the fatal shot possible.

* Waco, Texas. f7 On April 19, 1993, the FBI stormed the Branch Davidian compound. When it was done, more than 80 men, women and small children were dead.

Though then-Atty. Gen. Janet Reno took full responsibility for what the FBI did, it later became clear that Reno had been duped by the agency into believing the actions it proposed taking had little risk.

* Wen Ho Lee. In 1998, the FBI caused the jailing--mostly in shackled solitary confinement--of Taiwan-born American scientist Wen Ho Lee.

When Lee finally got his freedom after nine months, the federal judge chastised the FBI, among other government agencies, for misleading him.

* Robert Philip Hanssen. In 2000, it was learned that long-time FBI counterintelligence agent Robert Philip Hanssen was a Russian spy whom the bureau itself had been unable to identify or catch and whose spying had resulted in a number of assassinations.

Once Hanssen was caught and charged, the FBI made sure a quick plea bargain was worked out so that the fiasco would go away quickly and quietly.

* Timothy McVeigh. The FBI, unconstitutionally and in violation of a federal judge's order, concealed evidence from Oklahoma City mass murderer Timothy McVeigh that should have been available to his defense team.

Throughout all this, the FBI has been the agency responsible--using both retired and active agents--for investigating and vetting federal judicial nominees.

In that vetting, the FBI interrogates not only the nominees, but also their families, friends, neighbors and business associates. It gets their tax returns. It learns the most intimate details of nominees' lives and puts all this information into its files.

The peccadilloes or idiosyncrasies of those headed for judicial office--such as the homosexuality of G. Harrold Carswell, the federal appeals judge from Florida whom President Nixon nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court--can be held confidentially, or not.

Once a nominee is confirmed and seated on the bench, just knowing that the FBI possessed such information could influence his or her decisions.

There is no legitimate reason to, and many good reasons not to, let the FBI continue to investigate federal judicial nominees.

It is too difficult to know how the agency might use the confidential information it gets. Its powers are too great, its mentality and institutional history too blemished and its competence and credibility too low.

Any confidence in its integrity is clearly unwarranted.

A former Senate Judiciary Committee lawyer nominated to be a federal judge denied under oath Monday that he leaked confidential material for a book on the Clarence Thomas hearings in 1991.

``That allegation is absolutely 100 percent untrue,'' Terry Wooten said at a confirmation hearing before the committee. Wooten, currently a U.S. magistrate judge in South Carolina, has been picked by the Bush administration for U.S. District Court in the state.

David Brock, the book's author, said Monday in an affidavit sent to the committee that he received several pages of ``raw FBI files'' from Wooten that he used for an article and a book aimed at discrediting Anita Hill and another woman, Angela Wright, who accused Thomas of sexual harassment. Hill's charges nearly derailed Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

During Thomas' hearings, Wooten worked for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., as the committee's chief Republican counsel.

Wooten told the current committee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., that as chief counsel he did not normally read confidential files, and if briefed on their contents, ``I would absolutely not discuss those files with anybody'' outside the committee.

Wooten said he had a brief conversation with Brock after Thomas was confirmed to the high court, but ``no confidential information was released or made available to him.''

In his statement, Brock said that in researching his book he had numerous conversations with members of the former Bush White House staff on how to obtain FBI files. ``Their goal, and mine, was to use the FBI material to discredit Ms. Wright,'' Brock said.

He said Wooten handed him the FBI material in a Capitol Hill office, and ``with Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office and took it to my house in northwest Washington, where I was writing the book.'' Wooten's allegations were first carried in the Saturday edition of the Los Angeles Times.

Leahy, speaking to reporters after the hearing, said he would look into whether Wooten gave confidential material to Brock. He did not expect trouble with Wooten's confirmation.

``Mr. Wooten is under oath, and he understands very well the importance of being accurate,'' Leahy said. ``I can't believe that he would lie before the committee.''

A Republican on the committee, Sen. Mike DeWine of Ohio, also did not anticipate any delays ``unless additional facts come out.''

A liberal group, Alliance for Justice, urged the committee to hold up the nomination pending a full investigation of the accusations of ``serious ethical impropriety.''

Brock, once a fiercely partisan conservative writer, has in recent years disavowed his connections to the conservative movement and voiced regret for participating in right-wing efforts to defame opponents.

Also testifying before the highly unusual August recess hearing was Sharon Prost. She is the chief GOP counsel for the committee and a top aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the panel.

The Bush administration has nominated Prost to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Leahy said he scheduled Monday's hearing, and one last week, to show his determination to move forward on judicial nominations despite a Senate controversy over the nominating process.

Before leaving for the August recess, Senate Republicans forced the Senate to return all 164 unconfirmed executive and judicial nominees back to the White House to protest Democratic plans to force the renomination of two contentious candidates, Sheila Gall to be head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Otto Reich to head the State Department's Western Hemisphere division.

The White House is expected to send back all the nominations when Congress reconvenes next

Anita Hill Says Judge Leaked FBI Files

David Savage
The Los Angeles
Saturday, August 25, 2001

David Brock, the formerly conservative writer turned scourge of the conservative movement, said Friday that a protege of Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) who has been nominated as a U.S. district judge gave him confidential FBI files nearly 10 years ago for his book on the Clarence Thomas .versus Anita Faye Hill controversy.

Brock filed a sworn statement with the Senate Judiciary Committee late Friday.

On Monday, the panel is scheduled to hold a confirmation hearing for Judge Terry L. Wooten, now a federal magistrate in Florence, S.C. His nomination by President Bush was not controversial.

But Brock's charge threatens to reopen a bruising episode for the committee. In 1991, Wooten was the committee's chief Republican counsel, and he helped coordinate the defense of Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court. In September of that year, when Hill sent the committee a statement accusing her former boss of having harassed her with crude sexual comments, Wooten chose to withhold the information from the Republican senators. They were then surprised--and in some instances, furious--when the accusations were revealed on the eve of a Senate vote for Thomas.

Wooten said in later published accounts that his withholding of Hill's statement was "an effort to control the damage."

But, of course, the Thomas confirmation hearings played out as a national TV drama, and the hard feelings remained after Thomas won a narrow confirmation.

In October 1991, Brock said he was commissioned to write a book to discredit Hill and Angela

Wright, who also accused Thomas of making crude comments.

Brock now has said that White House aides sent him to Wooten to obtain FBI files that contained derogatory comments about Wright.

"Mr. Wooten handed me copies of several pages of Ms. Wright's raw FBI files," Brock said in his sworn statement. "This material included FBI interviews of Ms. Wright's former employers and former co-workers. With Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office."

The FBI material appeared in a March 1992 article in the American Spectator, a conservative magazine funded by reclusive billionaire Richard Mellon Scaife. Brock's book, "The Real Anita Hill," was published a year later.

At several points in the book, Brock quotes from "an FBI file" that referred to Wright as "vengeful, angry and immature."

"There's no way I could have gotten this if Wooten hadn't given me the files," Brock said Friday.

Wooten did not return calls to his office Friday, but in conversations with two senior administration officials, he denied Brock's charge. The officials said Wooten conceded that he met with Brock to discuss his book but insisted he did not give him FBI files. Wooten said he had not even seen or known of an FBI file on Wright, according to the officials, who spoke only on condition on anonymity.

"Based on all of our information and investigation, there is absolutely no basis for any allegation that Judge Wooten provided Brock with FBI materials related to Ms. Wright," said Mindy Tucker, a Justice Department spokeswoman.

"I think it would be unfortunate if the desire for book sales promulgated a charge involving a man's integrity, such as this might," she said of Brock's sworn statement.

Brock had a falling out with conservatives in 1996 after his book on then-First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton turned out to be more laudatory than critical.

More recently, Brock has disavowed most of his earlier work, including the book on Hill. "I was a witting cog in the Republican sleaze machine," he wrote in the August issue of Talk magazine.

This fall, he is set to publish "Blinded by the Right," a book that he says will set the record straight by telling the truth about his past dealings.

Some former friends say that since Brock has admitted publishing dubious stories in the past, he cannot be trusted now. But because of his earlier access to conservative inner circles, he could pose a danger for some nominees.

In May, the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Theodore B. Olson, Bush's nominee to be U.S. solicitor general, because Brock alleged Olson was involved in the "Arkansas Project," a Scaife-funded effort to dig up dirt on former President Clinton.

In the end, the committee could not resolve the issue, and Olson won a narrow Senate approval.

A former Senate Judiciary Committee lawyer nominated to be a federal judge denied under oath Monday that he leaked confidential material for a book on the Clarence Thomas hearings in 1991.

``That allegation is absolutely 100 percent untrue,'' Terry Wooten said at a confirmation hearing before the committee. Wooten, currently a U.S. magistrate judge in South Carolina, has been picked by the Bush administration for U.S. District Court in the state.

David Brock, the book's author, said Monday in an affidavit sent to the committee that he received several pages of ``raw FBI files'' from Wooten that he used for an article and a book aimed at discrediting Anita Hill and another woman, Angela Wright, who accused Thomas of sexual harassment. Hill's charges nearly derailed Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

During Thomas' hearings, Wooten worked for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., as the committee's chief Republican counsel.

Wooten told the current committee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., that as chief counsel he did not normally read confidential files, and if briefed on their contents, ``I would absolutely not discuss those files with anybody'' outside the committee.

Wooten said he had a brief conversation with Brock after Thomas was confirmed to the high court, but ``no confidential information was released or made available to him.''

In his statement, Brock said that in researching his book he had numerous conversations with members of the former Bush White House staff on how to obtain FBI files. ``Their goal, and mine, was to use the FBI material to discredit Ms. Wright,'' Brock said.

He said Wooten handed him the FBI material in a Capitol Hill office, and ``with Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office and took it to my house in northwest Washington, where I was writing the book.'' Wooten's allegations were first carried in the Saturday edition of the Los Angeles Times.

Leahy, speaking to reporters after the hearing, said he would look into whether Wooten gave confidential material to Brock. He did not expect trouble with Wooten's confirmation.

``Mr. Wooten is under oath, and he understands very well the importance of being accurate,'' Leahy said. ``I can't believe that he would lie before the committee.''

A Republican on the committee, Sen. Mike DeWine of Ohio, also did not anticipate any delays ``unless additional facts come out.''

A liberal group, Alliance for Justice, urged the committee to hold up the nomination pending a full investigation of the accusations of ``serious ethical impropriety.''

Brock, once a fiercely partisan conservative writer, has in recent years disavowed his connections to the conservative movement and voiced regret for participating in right-wing efforts to defame opponents.

Also testifying before the highly unusual August recess hearing was Sharon Prost. She is the chief GOP counsel for the committee and a top aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the panel.

The Bush administration has nominated Prost to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Leahy said he scheduled Monday's hearing, and one last week, to show his determination to move forward on judicial nominations despite a Senate controversy over the nominating process.

Before leaving for the August recess, Senate Republicans forced the Senate to return all 164 unconfirmed executive and judicial nominees back to the White House to protest Democratic plans to force the renomination of two contentious candidates, Sheila Gall to be head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Otto Reich to head the State Department's Western Hemisphere division.

The White House is expected to send back all the nominations when Congress reconvenes next

Anita Hill Says Judge Leaked FBI Files

David Savage
The Los Angeles
Saturday, August 25, 2001

David Brock, the formerly conservative writer turned scourge of the conservative movement, said Friday that a protege of Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) who has been nominated as a U.S. district judge gave him confidential FBI files nearly 10 years ago for his book on the Clarence Thomas .versus Anita Faye Hill controversy.

Brock filed a sworn statement with the Senate Judiciary Committee late Friday.

On Monday, the panel is scheduled to hold a confirmation hearing for Judge Terry L. Wooten, now a federal magistrate in Florence, S.C. His nomination by President Bush was not controversial.

But Brock's charge threatens to reopen a bruising episode for the committee. In 1991, Wooten was the committee's chief Republican counsel, and he helped coordinate the defense of Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court. In September of that year, when Hill sent the committee a statement accusing her former boss of having harassed her with crude sexual comments, Wooten chose to withhold the information from the Republican senators. They were then surprised--and in some instances, furious--when the accusations were revealed on the eve of a Senate vote for Thomas.

Wooten said in later published accounts that his withholding of Hill's statement was "an effort to control the damage."

But, of course, the Thomas confirmation hearings played out as a national TV drama, and the hard feelings remained after Thomas won a narrow confirmation.

In October 1991, Brock said he was commissioned to write a book to discredit Hill and Angela

Wright, who also accused Thomas of making crude comments.

Brock now has said that White House aides sent him to Wooten to obtain FBI files that contained derogatory comments about Wright.

"Mr. Wooten handed me copies of several pages of Ms. Wright's raw FBI files," Brock said in his sworn statement. "This material included FBI interviews of Ms. Wright's former employers and former co-workers. With Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office."

The FBI material appeared in a March 1992 article in the American Spectator, a conservative magazine funded by reclusive billionaire Richard Mellon Scaife. Brock's book, "The Real Anita Hill," was published a year later.

At several points in the book, Brock quotes from "an FBI file" that referred to Wright as "vengeful, angry and immature."

"There's no way I could have gotten this if Wooten hadn't given me the files," Brock said Friday.

Wooten did not return calls to his office Friday, but in conversations with two senior administration officials, he denied Brock's charge. The officials said Wooten conceded that he met with Brock to discuss his book but insisted he did not give him FBI files. Wooten said he had not even seen or known of an FBI file on Wright, according to the officials, who spoke only on condition on anonymity.

"Based on all of our information and investigation, there is absolutely no basis for any allegation that Judge Wooten provided Brock with FBI materials related to Ms. Wright," said Mindy Tucker, a Justice Department spokeswoman.

"I think it would be unfortunate if the desire for book sales promulgated a charge involving a man's integrity, such as this might," she said of Brock's sworn statement.

Brock had a falling out with conservatives in 1996 after his book on then-First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton turned out to be more laudatory than critical.

More recently, Brock has disavowed most of his earlier work, including the book on Hill. "I was a witting cog in the Republican sleaze machine," he wrote in the August issue of Talk magazine.

This fall, he is set to publish "Blinded by the Right," a book that he says will set the record straight by telling the truth about his past dealings.

Some former friends say that since Brock has admitted publishing dubious stories in the past, he cannot be trusted now. But because of his earlier access to conservative inner circles, he could pose a danger for some nominees.

In May, the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Theodore B. Olson, Bush's nominee to be U.S. solicitor general, because Brock alleged Olson was involved in the "Arkansas Project," a Scaife-funded effort to dig up dirt on former President Clinton.

In the end, the committee could not resolve the issue, and Olson won a narrow Senate approval.

The FBI Can't Be Trusted To Vet Judges; When A Spy Agency Knows Personal Secrets, It Has The Potential To Influence Judicial Decisions

Serious people of all political stripes should question whether it is appropriate for the FBI to continue to be the agency that vets our federal judges.

In the past 10 years, the FBI has brought itself into disrepute and disgrace, yet its false pride continues unabated.

One need not go back to the days of yesteryear to question the bureau's competency and integrity.

Back then, J. Edgar Hoover's FBI not only Red-baited, it denied that the mob existed and refused to investigate federal civil rights violations--all the while righteously blowing its own horn. For years, the most glaring example of bureau misconduct was the famed Rosenberg espionage trial, where, in an attempt to influence the outcome and ensure the death penalty, Hoover had illegal conversations with the judge overseeing the case.

The FBI today continues to be an incredibly effective propaganda machine, having mastered the techniques it learned from its erstwhile paper tiger enemy--the Soviet Union.

Some recent examples:

* Ruby Ridge. f7 On Aug. 22, 1992, FBI agents surrounded a broken-down cabin in northern Idaho and killed an unarmed woman holding a 10-month-old baby by shooting the woman in the head.

No legal consequences befell the sniper who fired the fatal shot, nor were his superiors punished for writing clearly unconstitutional rules of engagement that made the fatal shot possible.

* Waco, Texas. f7 On April 19, 1993, the FBI stormed the Branch Davidian compound. When it was done, more than 80 men, women and small children were dead.

Though then-Atty. Gen. Janet Reno took full responsibility for what the FBI did, it later became clear that Reno had been duped by the agency into believing the actions it proposed taking had little risk.

* Wen Ho Lee. In 1998, the FBI caused the jailing--mostly in shackled solitary confinement--of Taiwan-born American scientist Wen Ho Lee.

When Lee finally got his freedom after nine months, the federal judge chastised the FBI, among other government agencies, for misleading him.

Neil Lewis New York Times
June 26, 2001

REV_00197810

* Robert Philip Hanssen. In 2000, it was learned that long-time FBI counterintelligence agent Robert Philip Hanssen was a Russian spy whom the bureau itself had been unable to identify or catch and whose spying had resulted in a number of assassinations.

Once Hanssen was caught and charged, the FBI made sure a quick plea bargain was worked out so that the fiasco would go away quickly and quietly.

* Timothy McVeigh. The FBI, unconstitutionally and in violation of a federal judge's order, concealed evidence from Oklahoma City mass murderer Timothy McVeigh that should have been available to his defense team.

Throughout all this, the FBI has been the agency responsible--using both retired and active agents--for investigating and vetting federal judicial nominees.

In that vetting, the FBI interrogates not only the nominees, but also their families, friends, neighbors and business associates. It gets their tax returns. It learns the most intimate details of nominees' lives and puts all this information into its files.

The peccadilloes or idiosyncrasies of those headed for judicial office--such as the homosexuality of G. Harrold Carswell, the federal appeals judge from Florida whom President Nixon nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court--can be held confidentially, or not.

Once a nominee is confirmed and seated on the bench, just knowing that the FBI possessed such information could influence his or her decisions.

There is no legitimate reason to, and many good reasons not to, let the FBI continue to investigate federal judicial nominees.

It is too difficult to know how the agency might use the confidential information it gets. Its powers are too great, its mentality and institutional history too blemished and its competence and credibility too low.

Any confidence in its integrity is clearly unwarranted.

There is good reason to establish an independent, joint executive-legislative branch office to vet federal judicial nominees.

This would ensure that when FBI agents make their frequent appearances before federal judges to obtain arrest, search and eavesdropping warrants and to give testimony in criminal trials, these judges won't feel an inclination or an obligation to do whatever the FBI tells them to do.

Anita Hill Says Judge Leaked FBI Files

In September of that year, when Hill sent the committee a statement accusing her former boss of having harassed her with crude sexual comments, Wooten chose to withhold the information from the Republican senators. They were then surprised--and in some instances, furious--when the accusations were revealed on the eve of a Senate vote for Thomas.

Wooten said in later published accounts that his withholding of Hill's statement was "an effort to control the damage."

But, of course, the Thomas confirmation hearings played out as a national TV drama, and the hard feelings remained after Thomas won a narrow confirmation.

In October 1991, Brock said he was commissioned to write a book to discredit Hill and Angela

Wright, who also accused Thomas of making crude comments.

Brock now has said that White House aides sent him to Wooten to obtain FBI files that contained derogatory comments about Wright.

"Mr. Wooten handed me copies of several pages of Ms. Wright's raw FBI files," Brock said in his sworn statement. "This material included FBI interviews of Ms. Wright's former employers and former co-workers. With Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office."

The FBI material appeared in a March 1992 article in the American Spectator, a conservative magazine funded by reclusive billionaire Richard Mellon Scaife. Brock's book, "The Real Anita Hill," was published a year later.

At several points in the book, Brock quotes from "an FBI file" that referred to Wright as "vengeful, angry and immature."

"There's no way I could have gotten this if Wooten hadn't given me the files," Brock said Friday.

Wooten did not return calls to his office Friday, but in conversations with two senior administration officials, he denied Brock's charge. The officials said Wooten conceded that he met with Brock to discuss his book but insisted he did not give him FBI files. Wooten said he had not even seen or known of an FBI file on Wright, according to the officials, who spoke only on condition on anonymity.

"Based on all of our information and investigation, there is absolutely no basis for any allegation that Judge Wooten provided Brock with FBI materials related to Ms. Wright," said Mindy Tucker, a Justice Department spokeswoman.

"I think it would be unfortunate if the desire for book sales promulgated a charge involving a man's integrity, such as this might," she said of Brock's sworn statement.

Brock had a falling out with conservatives in 1996 after his book on then-First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton turned out to be more laudatory than critical.

More recently, Brock has disavowed most of his earlier work, including the book on Hill. "I was a witting cog in the Republican sleaze machine," he wrote in the August issue of Talk magazine.

This fall, he is set to publish "Blinded by the Right," a book that he says will set the record straight by telling the truth about his past dealings.

Some former friends say that since Brock has admitted publishing dubious stories in the past, he cannot be trusted now. But because of his earlier access to conservative inner circles, he could pose a danger for some nominees.

In May, the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on Theodore B. Olson, Bush's nominee to be U.S. solicitor general, because Brock alleged Olson was involved in the "Arkansas Project," a Scaife-funded effort to dig up dirt on former President Clinton.

In the end, the committee could not resolve the issue, and Olson won a narrow Senate approval.

One need not go back to the days of yesteryear to question the bureau's competency and integrity.

Back then, J. Edgar Hoover's FBI not only Red-baited, it denied that the mob existed and refused to investigate federal civil rights violations--all the while righteously blowing its own horn. For years, the most glaring example of bureau misconduct was the famed Rosenberg espionage trial, where, in an attempt to influence the outcome and ensure the death penalty, Hoover had illegal conversations with the judge overseeing the case.

The FBI today continues to be an incredibly effective propaganda machine, having mastered the techniques it learned from its erstwhile paper tiger enemy--the Soviet Union.

Some recent examples:

* Ruby Ridge. f7 On Aug. 22, 1992, FBI agents surrounded a broken-down cabin in northern Idaho and killed an unarmed woman holding a 10-month-old baby by shooting the woman in the head.

No legal consequences befell the sniper who fired the fatal shot, nor were his superiors punished for writing clearly unconstitutional rules of engagement that made the fatal shot possible.

* Waco, Texas. f7 On April 19, 1993, the FBI stormed the Branch Davidian compound. When it was done, more than 80 men, women and small children were dead.

Though then-Atty. Gen. Janet Reno took full responsibility for what the FBI did, it later became clear that Reno had been duped by the agency into believing the actions it proposed taking had little risk.

* Wen Ho Lee. In 1998, the FBI caused the jailing--mostly in shackled solitary confinement--of Taiwan-born American scientist Wen Ho Lee.

When Lee finally got his freedom after nine months, the federal judge chastised the FBI, among other government agencies, for misleading him.

York Times
June 26, 2001oad to Federal ts Bumpier in Senate
Neil Lewis New York Times
June 26, 2001

Road to Federal Bench Gets Bumpier in Senate
Neil Lewis

* Robert Philip Hanssen. In 2000, it was learned that long-time FBI counterintelligence agent Robert Philip Hanssen was a Russian spy whom the bureau itself had been unable to identify or catch and whose spying had resulted in a number of assassinations.

Once Hanssen was caught and charged, the FBI made sure a quick plea bargain was worked out so that the fiasco would go away quickly and quietly.

* Timothy McVeigh. The FBI, unconstitutionally and in violation of a federal judge's order, concealed evidence from Oklahoma City mass murderer Timothy McVeigh that should have been available to his defense team.

Throughout all this, the FBI has been the agency responsible--using both retired and active agents--for investigating and vetting federal judicial nominees.

In that vetting, the FBI interrogates not only the nominees, but also their families, friends, neighbors and business associates. It gets their tax returns. It learns the most intimate details of nominees' lives and puts all this information into its files.

The peccadilloes or idiosyncrasies of those headed for judicial office--such as the homosexuality of G. Harrold Carswell, the federal appeals judge from Florida whom President Nixon nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court--can be held confidentially, or not.

Once a nominee is confirmed and seated on the bench, just knowing that the FBI possessed such information could influence his or her decisions.

There is no legitimate reason to, and many good reasons not to, let the FBI continue to investigate federal judicial nominees.

It is too difficult to know how the agency might use the confidential information it gets. Its powers are too great, its mentality and institutional history too blemished and its competence and credibility too low.

Any confidence in its integrity is clearly unwarranted.

A former Senate Judiciary Committee lawyer nominated to be a federal judge denied under oath Monday that he leaked confidential material for a book on the Clarence Thomas hearings in 1991.

``That allegation is absolutely 100 percent untrue,'' Terry Wooten said at a confirmation hearing before the committee. Wooten, currently a U.S. magistrate judge in South Carolina, has been picked by the Bush administration for U.S. District Court in the state.

David Brock, the book's author, said Monday in an affidavit sent to the committee that he received several pages of ``raw FBI files'' from Wooten that he used for an article and a book aimed at discrediting Anita Hill and another woman, Angela Wright, who accused Thomas of sexual harassment. Hill's charges nearly derailed Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

During Thomas' hearings, Wooten worked for Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., as the committee's chief Republican counsel.

Wooten told the current committee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., that as chief counsel he did not normally read confidential files, and if briefed on their contents, ``I would absolutely not discuss those files with anybody'' outside the committee.

Wooten said he had a brief conversation with Brock after Thomas was confirmed to the high court, but ``no confidential information was released or made available to him.''

In his statement, Brock said that in researching his book he had numerous conversations with members of the former Bush White House staff on how to obtain FBI files. ``Their goal, and mine, was to use the FBI material to discredit Ms. Wright,'' Brock said.

He said Wooten handed him the FBI material in a Capitol Hill office, and ``with Mr. Wooten's agreement, I removed the FBI material from his office and took it to my house in northwest Washington, where I was writing the book.'' Wooten's allegations were first carried in the Saturday edition of the Los Angeles Times.

Leahy, speaking to reporters after the hearing, said he would look into whether Wooten gave confidential material to Brock. He did not expect trouble with Wooten's confirmation.

``Mr. Wooten is under oath, and he understands very well the importance of being accurate,'' Leahy said. ``I can't believe that he would lie before the committee.''

A Republican on the committee, Sen. Mike DeWine of Ohio, also did not anticipate any delays ``unless additional facts come out.''

A liberal group, Alliance for Justice, urged the committee to hold up the nomination pending a full investigation of the accusations of ``serious ethical impropriety.''

Brock, once a fiercely partisan conservative writer, has in recent years disavowed his connections to the conservative movement and voiced regret for participating in right-wing efforts to defame opponents.

Also testifying before the highly unusual August recess hearing was Sharon Prost. She is the chief GOP counsel for the committee and a top aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the panel.

The Bush administration has nominated Prost to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Leahy said he scheduled Monday's hearing, and one last week, to show his determination to move forward on judicial nominations despite a Senate controversy over the nominating process.

Before leaving for the August recess, Senate Republicans forced the Senate to return all 164 unconfirmed executive and judicial nominees back to the White House to protest Democratic plans to force the renomination of two contentious candidates, Sheila Gall to be head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Otto Reich to head the State Department's Western Hemisphere division.

The White House is expected to send back all the nominations when Congress reconvenes next

Anita Hill Says Judge Leaked FBI Files

David Savage
The Los Angeles
Saturday, August 25, 2001

David Brock, the formerly conservative writer turned scourge of the conservative movement, said Friday that a protege of Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) who has been nominated as a U.S. district judge gave him confidential FBI files nearly 10 years ago for his book on the Clarence Thomas .versus Anita Faye Hill controversy.

Brock filed a sworn statement with the Senate Judiciary Committee late Friday.

On Monday, the panel is scheduled to hold a confirmation hearing for Judge Terry L. Wooten, now a federal magistrate in Florence, S.C. His nomination by President Bush was not controversial.

But Brock's charge threatens to reopen a bruising episode for the committee. In 1991, Wooten was the committee's chief Republican counsel, and he helped coordinate the defense of Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court. In September of that year, when Hill sent the committee a statement accusing her former boss of having harassed her with crude sexual comments, Wooten chose to withhold the information from the Republican senators. They were then surprised--and in some instances, furious--when the accusations were revealed on the eve of a Senate vote for Thomas.

Hi Brett,

Just want to make sure you got my thank you note that I sent you for the WH tours. You didn't mention anything last night, but you may have been distracted since I interrupted you work out routine! I'll really owe you some baked goodies if you didn't get it.
Carrie

We need to close the loop on this documents search. Any thoughts on how/where I can find this index? (documents start at bates number FR 00907 and contain gaps - so we need the index to see if we're missing CEQ documents)

We would not have access to records from the previous Administration. I'm ccing Brett Kavanagh on this message - he's our resident expert on the Presidential Records Act.

Subject: Search for 1999 documents index

We're looking for an index of documents that were sent, pursuant to 10/18/99 and 10/28/99 requests by the House Resource Committee, in November or December of 1999. Are there any records from then in the White House Counsel's office, or would we have to go to NARA or the Clinton Library?

The New White House Web Site

Today's Presidential Action:

- The President and Mrs. Bush today unveiled the new White House web site, located at www.whitehouse.gov. The revamped site offers richer content, much improved design, a better navigation system, a superior search engine, Spanish content, a new Kids' site and enhanced access for the disabled.

Improvements on the New Site

- The design is completely new. While simple to navigate, it reflects the dignity and traditions of the White House.
- Increased multimedia content. Text is now enhanced by more audio and video of White House events and press briefings.
- Improved search engine. The new search engine is designed to be user friendly by selecting documents which are most relevant to individual searches. Every document on the White House web site is now programmed with unique information (called a 'meta-tag') to improve the relevance of search results.
- The President's speeches, statements, transcripts, nominations, proclamations and general news releases are posted rapidly to the site.
- Quick nominations link. Details on nominees for federal positions are among the most requested pieces of information.
- Highlighted Photo gallery. The White House photographers are among the best in the world. The new site features their work in daily photographs and photo essays which are updated frequently.
- Spanish content. Policies, radio addresses and other sections of the site have been translated to accommodate Spanish-speaking visitors.

Brand New Kids Section – www.whitehousekids.gov

- Geared for elementary school children ages five to twelve and created with the assistance of teachers and schoolchildren, whitehousekids.gov is a good way for kids to learn about the White House, President and Mrs. Bush and the Administration.
- The Internet is a literate medium and whitehousekids.gov provides a fun way for children to read and learn about the White House and the President through the site's features and biographies.
- Through the personification of the President's pets – Spotty, Barney and India – and Ofelia his longhorn cow, the site offers information on the President and White House. This site also encourages reading, dreaming and making good choices, such as pursuing an education.
- To encourage reading, each pet's biography includes a favorite children's book. The biographies of each pet also include an interesting story. Reading comprehension skills are tested through "brain challenge" questions.
- Barney's White House ABC's matches letters of the alphabet with the names of people, places and things in the White House and includes positive messages such as "Education-getting an education is a good choice you can make."
- Although the Kids' site has a unique web address (whitehousekids.gov), visitors can access the site by entering the main White House site (whitehouse.gov).

Access for the Disabled

- The White House web team worked with many individuals in the disabled community to ensure that the site is more accessible to all Americans.
- Through the use of special software, the web site has is programmed so a voice synthesizer can read aloud the contents, including online forms and photo captions.
- Video of Presidential events will now be captioned and efforts are underway to encode previous video with captioning as well.

Privacy Issues and the White House Web Site

- The President supports the protection of consumer privacy on the Internet and the principles of disclosure and fair information practices. As was the practice during the campaign, online privacy is a priority and was a constant guide in the development of the web site.
- No personal information about a visitor will be collected unless that visitor provides information to the White House.
- The White House does not identify the visitor personally. The White House does not track or record information about individuals and their visits.
- The White House Web Site does not use cookies.

The New White House Web Site

Today's Presidential Action:

- The President and Mrs. Bush today unveiled the new White House web site, located at www.whitehouse.gov. The revamped site offers richer content, much improved design, a better navigation system, a superior search engine, Spanish content, a new Kids' site and enhanced access for the disabled.

Improvements on the New Site

- The design is completely new. While simple to navigate, it reflects the dignity and traditions of the White House.
- Increased multimedia content. Text is now enhanced by more audio and video of White House events and press briefings.
- Improved search engine. The new search engine is designed to be user friendly by selecting documents which are most relevant to individual searches. Every document on the White House web site is now programmed with unique information (called a 'meta-tag') to improve the relevance of search results.
- The President's speeches, statements, transcripts, nominations, proclamations and general news releases are posted rapidly to the site.
- Quick nominations link. Details on nominees for federal positions are among the most requested pieces of information.
- Highlighted Photo gallery. The White House photographers are among the best in the world. The new site features their work in daily photographs and photo essays which are updated frequently.
- Spanish content. Policies, radio addresses and other sections of the site have been translated to accommodate Spanish-speaking visitors.

Brand New Kids Section – www.whitehousekids.gov

- Geared for elementary school children ages five to twelve and created with the assistance of teachers and schoolchildren, whitehousekids.gov is a good way for kids to learn about the White House, President and Mrs. Bush and the Administration.
- The Internet is a literate medium and whitehousekids.gov provides a fun way for children to read and learn about the White House and the President through the site's features and biographies.
- Through the personification of the President's pets – Spotty, Barney and India – and Ofelia his longhorn cow, the site offers information on the President and White House. This site also encourages reading, dreaming and making good choices, such as pursuing an education.
- To encourage reading, each pet's biography includes a favorite children's book. The biographies of each pet also include an interesting story. Reading comprehension skills are tested through "brain challenge" questions.
- Barney's White House ABC's matches letters of the alphabet with the names of people, places and things in the White House and includes positive messages such as "Education-getting an education is a good choice you can make."
- Although the Kids' site has a unique web address (whitehousekids.gov), visitors can access the site by entering the main White House site (whitehouse.gov).

Access for the Disabled

- The White House web team worked with many individuals in the disabled community to ensure that the site is more accessible to all Americans.
- Through the use of special software, the web site has is programmed so a voice synthesizer can read aloud the contents, including online forms and photo captions.
- Video of Presidential events will now be captioned and efforts are underway to encode previous video with captioning as well.

Privacy Issues and the White House Web Site

- The President supports the protection of consumer privacy on the Internet and the principles of disclosure and fair information practices. As was the practice during the campaign, online privacy is a priority and was a constant guide in the development of the web site.
- No personal information about a visitor will be collected unless that visitor provides information to the White House.
- The White House does not identify the visitor personally. The White House does not track or record information about individuals and their visits.
- The White House Web Site does not use cookies.

The New White House Web Site

Today's Presidential Action:

- The President and Mrs. Bush today unveiled the new White House web site, located at www.whitehouse.gov. The revamped site offers richer content, much improved design, a better navigation system, a superior search engine, Spanish content, a new Kids' site and enhanced access for the disabled.

Improvements on the New Site

- The design is completely new. While simple to navigate, it reflects the dignity and traditions of the White House.
- Increased multimedia content. Text is now enhanced by more audio and video of White House events and press briefings.
- Improved search engine. The new search engine is designed to be user friendly by selecting documents which are most relevant to individual searches. Every document on the White House web site is now programmed with unique information (called a 'meta-tag') to improve the relevance of search results.
- The President's speeches, statements, transcripts, nominations, proclamations and general news releases are posted rapidly to the site.
- Quick nominations link. Details on nominees for federal positions are among the most requested pieces of information.
- Highlighted Photo gallery. The White House photographers are among the best in the world. The new site features their work in daily photographs and photo essays which are updated frequently.
- Spanish content. Policies, radio addresses and other sections of the site have been translated to accommodate Spanish-speaking visitors.

Brand New Kids Section – www.whitehousekids.gov

- Geared for elementary school children ages five to twelve and created with the assistance of teachers and schoolchildren, whitehousekids.gov is a good way for kids to learn about the White House, President and Mrs. Bush and the Administration.
- The Internet is a literate medium and whitehousekids.gov provides a fun way for children to read and learn about the White House and the President through the site's features and biographies.
- Through the personification of the President's pets – Spotty, Barney and India – and Ofelia his longhorn cow, the site offers information on the President and White House. This site also encourages reading, dreaming and making good choices, such as pursuing an education.
- To encourage reading, each pet's biography includes a favorite children's book. The biographies of each pet also include an interesting story. Reading comprehension skills are tested through "brain challenge" questions.
- Barney's White House ABC's matches letters of the alphabet with the names of people, places and things in the White House and includes positive messages such as "Education-getting an education is a good choice you can make."
- Although the Kids' site has a unique web address (whitehousekids.gov), visitors can access the site by entering the main White House site (whitehouse.gov).

Access for the Disabled

- The White House web team worked with many individuals in the disabled community to ensure that the site is more accessible to all Americans.
- Through the use of special software, the web site has is programmed so a voice synthesizer can read aloud the contents, including online forms and photo captions.
- Video of Presidential events will now be captioned and efforts are underway to encode previous video with captioning as well.

Privacy Issues and the White House Web Site

- The President supports the protection of consumer privacy on the Internet and the principles of disclosure and fair information practices. As was the practice during the campaign, online privacy is a priority and was a constant guide in the development of the web site.
- No personal information about a visitor will be collected unless that visitor provides information to the White House.
- The White House does not identify the visitor personally. The White House does not track or record information about individuals and their visits.
- The White House Web Site does not use cookies.

Office of the Chairman

August 31, 2001

CONFIDENTIAL

TO: REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE US HOUSE AND SENATE REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS
REPUBLICAN STATE CHAIRS AND NATIONAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS

FROM: GOVERNOR JAMES S. GILMORE III

RE: NEW POLLS SHOW AMERICANS SUPPORT PRESIDENT BUSH AND GOP IN BUDGET DEBATE

Congress returns to work next week, but partisan Democrats are already engaging in harsh, misleading demagoguery over budget surpluses and the safety of Social Security and Medicare.

Consider the contrast: President Bush takes action to restart our economy and follows through on his priorities; with no economic recovery plan of their own, partisan Democrats are throwing out lies and bitter rhetoric in an effort to scare people into thinking the President is endangering Social Security and Medicare. Americans know better.

In fact, in a national survey of registered voters conducted this week for the RNC, Americans said overwhelmingly that the slowdown in the economy and wasteful government spending were to blame for the reduction in the budget surplus. They strongly oppose rolling back the tax cut and support President Bush's position to restrain wasteful spending. More importantly, they know the Republican tax cut is needed to get the economy growing (see survey questions below – 803 sample size).

Poll conducted by Voter Consumer Research. 803 registered voters nationally August 28th – 30th. Margin of Error plus or minus 3.5%.

One item that has been in the news is the reduced budget surplus. Even though the Federal Government will end the year with the second largest surplus in history, news reports indicate that a variety of factors have reduced the projected surplus from $281 billion to $158 billion dollars. Which of the following do you view as most responsible?

Wasteful Government spending	43%
The slowdown in the economy	28%
The tax cut	17%
All of the above (VOL)	6%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

Republican National Committee
310 First Street, SE • Washington, DC • 20003

With the slowdown in the economy, less tax revenue is being collected than had been expected. Of the following two ways of dealing with this, which ONE do you think would be best?

To roll back the tax cuts that were passed earlier this year	16%
To slow down the rate at which federal government spending is increasing	76%
Neither (VOL)	2%
Some of both (VOL)	2%
Don't know/refused	4%

President Bush's approach is right. Don't let partisan Democrats muddy the waters and mislead the American people.

really glad we managed to kill that one paragraph from the minority-businesses proclamation. Do you ever get the sense that we're working on the leaves, while the forest blooms.

This has already been decided. We will stick to the normal process of doing intent and nomination on the same day -- Monday. Please tell Senators and candidate to stand down.

Amendment: The Senators are geared up to issue press releases and the nominees are geared up for the announcements. Also, I think the coalition briefing is today. Anyway, someone needs to make the call on the timing as soon as possible.

Because the Senate is out of session until Monday, the judicial nominations intended to go up today (9/7) will go up on Monday (9/10) instead.

Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. John is also already involved in the case on behalf of AT&T, and while the FCC believes that Roberts could help them out without a conflict (they have probably already spoken with him), I'm just not sure it's worth it. After all, even without Ted, I have no doubt that Clement and others can do a very good job with the cert petition.

I don't know about the dynamics of telling the FCC absolutely what they cannot do, but I think the right advice is that unless Powell feels very strongly about it, he should just let the Department handle it.

If you disagree, please let me know.

Presidential Action – Tuesday, September 11

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children. School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package.

The President supports increased funding for education – he gave the Department of Education an 11.5% increase and he tripled funding for reading programs. But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Increased funding must be coupled with real reforms that hold schools accountable, increase flexibility and expand parental options.

Alarming Statistics the President Will Discuss Today

Every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

- 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
- Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
- More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

The President's Initiative to Improve Reading Scores

Today's Presidential Action:

- Today the President will visit Emma Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, where he will point out that every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

  - 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
  - Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
  - More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

- Increased funding for education is a top priority of the President. He has proposed a $4.6 billion (11.5%) increase in funding for the Department of Education, including a tripling of funding for reading instruction as part of his Reading First initiative.

- But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Governments spent $231 billion in combined expenditures on public education at the local, state, and federal level during the 1983-1984 school year (inflation-adjusted figure), and the average nine year-old received a score of 211 on the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) reading exam. During the 1998-1999 school year, more than $388 billion was spent at the local, state, and federal level -- a 68% increase over 1983-1984 -- and the average NAEP reading score among nine year-olds was 212. In other words, despite substantial funding increases, reading scores remained flat.

- More resources must be coupled with real reforms that focus on results for our nation's schoolchildren. Students at schools like Emma Booker Elementary School stand to gain the most from passage of the President's education reform bill – and have the most to lose from unnecessary delay. Most children at Emma Booker come from lower-income, minority background. Nationwide, almost 70% of urban and inner city 4th graders cannot read at a basic level.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First:

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms. The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.
  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

For more information on the President's initiatives please visit www.whitehouse.gov

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- Yesterday, in Jacksonville, the President announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

  - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

- If Congress acts soon on the education bill, these important reading initiatives can be in place for America's school children when the next school year begins.

Libby, please forward the following t o the Judge and Tim:

Under the Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, codified at 42 U.S.C. Secs. 5121-5204c with associated regulations at 44 CFR Part 206, t he President has broad authority to make the resources and services of federal departments and agencies available to states, localities, and individuals affec ted by declared emergencies or disasters. As a general matter, the Presid ent may direct any department or agency to use its authorities or resources to assist affected governments. The statute is so flexible and provides so m any redundant and overlapping authorities that it is safe to say that we can pr obably find a way for the President to do almost anything he wishes in the nature of helping with disaster relief and recovery. The Stafford Act is lengthy and detailed; in very abbreviated form, it provides authority for the President to do or direct the following:

-- to waive conditions for providing assistance to states under exis ting federal programs (5141);

-- to detail federal employees to participate in emergency support teams (5144);

-- to employ contractors and consultants (5149(b));

-- to assure the availability of necessary construction materials (5 158);

-- to assist in the distribution of food, medicine, and other suppli es and provide equipment, supplies, facilities, and personnel that are ess ential to meet threats to life and property (5170a, 5170b);

-- to have federal agencies repair important federal facilities (such as t he Pentagon) without awaiting specific legislative authorization or appropriati ons (5171);

-- furnishing funds to repair state public facilities or private non profit facilities (5172);

-- to clear debris and make arrangements to do so (5173);

-- to provide temporary housing assistance (5174);

-- to provide financial assistance to individuals left without a job due to a disaster for up to 180 days (5177);

-- to make grants to states to provide financial help to individuals and families affected by the disaster (up to a specified dollar limit) provided that the states also contribute 25% of the assistance (5178);

-- to provide food coupons to low-income individuals (5179);

-- to provide food, relocation assistance, legal services, and counseling services (5180-5183);

-- to provide loans to affected local governments (5184);

-- to provide emergency public transportation (5186); and

-- to provide assistance in fire suppression (5187);

There are two other interesting aspects of the Act worth noting. Fir st, the Act renders parties responsible for creating disaster or emergency conditions civilly liable to the United States for the response costs (5160).& nbsp;

Second, it authorizes the President to accept on behalf of the United Sta tes essentially unlimited gifts from whatever source to help carry out these au thorities (5201(b)).

Our prayers and support are heightened for each of you in the Bush Administration. It is my perrsonal belief that God has you here for a reason and to paraphrase Churchill, "It was as if your whole life is mere preparation for this moment." Heritage can and will help as much as you all allow us to -- please feel free to call us as our web site is experiencing overwhelming numbers of hits. Warmly, Ginni

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

IN TENUOUS ACCORD:

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

HOSTED BY:

LARRY WORTZEL
Director, Asian Studies Center

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO A LECTURE

ON

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

IN TENUOUS ACCORD:

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

HOSTED BY:

LARRY WORTZEL
Director, Asian Studies Center

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Research Fellow, The Heritage Foundation

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

The Heritage Foundation

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO A LECTURE

ON

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

HOSTED BY:

Director, Asian Studies Center

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

IN TENUOUS ACCORD:

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

HOSTED BY:

LARRY WORTZEL
Director, Asian Studies Center

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.
